TRIO NAMED IN CHARGES OF ROBBERY

Mother of Wounded Bandit Visits Son and Goes Into Seclusion

Two charges of robbery were filed against Philip Holden, reported to be the son of a well-to-do Chicago man, and two companions in a complaint issued by Dep. District Attorney Colegrove yesterday. Holden is in the General Hospital in a serious condition suffering from a bullet wound in his head received early this week when he was trapped during a hold-up of the Security-First National Bank at Western avenue and Sixty-ninth Street.

Holden is reported as dying. His mother has arrived here and is in seclusion. She visited briefly with the wounded prisoner but left hurriedly, refusing to give an address where she could be located in case of his death.

The other two defendants named in the complaint are Thomas Cross and Delbert Hudson. They were captured by police shortly after Holden was shot down by Guard Corson, service station operator, who shot it out with the bandits after they had robbed the bank of $6000.

The complaint also charges the youths with robbing the First Exchange State Bank of Lawndale of $1650 on November 21, last.

Coffee and Hudson were arraigned before Municipal Judge Ballard on the robbery complaint charge, and their preliminary hearing set for the 16th inst. Bail was fixed at $25,000 each.

Holden, unable to appear, was not arraigned.

Screen Writer Loses Wife in Divorce Court

Monte Katterjohn, screen writer, was divorced yesterday by Judge Phyllis Knell Katterjohn in Superior Judge Neville's court. The wife formerly was a stenographer in a studio.

"Mr. Katterjohn was extremely temperamental," she testified, "and unable to maintain cordial and happy relations with him only by submerging my own personality and consenting to his domination and reign in everything."

Judge Neville granted her a decree, and approved a property settlement whereby Katterjohn agrees to pay $75 a month to the support of their son, Kent, 3 years of age, who is placed in his mother's custody. The Katterjohns were married September 9, 1925, and separated January 6, last.

Wife Again Sues Emil Flugrath

Emil August Flugrath, father of Viola Dana, was charged with further incidents of cruelty in a new divorce suit filed yesterday by his wife, Marie M. Flugrath. The former suit was dismissed after a reconciliation was reported.

Isador Morri, counsel for Flugrath in the former action, said the present suit would not be contested. According to Mrs. Flugrath's petition her husband smashed a chair and called her a "flapper."

NINETY-DAY TERM AWARDED RAYMOND

Allen Raymond, assorted nuts teer, was sentenced to serve ninety days in jail by Municipal Judge Curtis yesterday following his plea of guilty to vagrancy charges. Raymond, with Mrs. Dorothy Donald, Frank Dominguez and Chester Chapman, were arrested by police some time ago on suspicion of burglary. Dominguez and Chapman pleaded not guilty to burglary charges and are to be tried on Monday. At the same time Raymond is to be tried on an additional charge of carrying a concealed weapon. LIFE'S VEIL MAY LIFT

Creature "Born" in Test Tube

Scientists Stand in Awe of Living Thing Created by Their Efforts

Veil of Secrecy Surrounds Results of Laboratory Work at Cleveland

CLEVELAND, Dec. 6. (Exclusive) The secret of life, for which scientists have been searching for years, and by which the human mind has hoped since intelligence was born in man, may lie in a test tube in the biological laboratory of the Cleveland Clinic Foundation, over which the noted scientist, Dr. G. W. Crile, is the guiding genius.

According to a slight degree the world of science that has been erected as one of the most startling scientific discoveries of all time, a creature was able, today, to catch a glimpse of the unnamed thing that lives in a test tube here, a creature that lives and breathes without parents and born in the form of all accepted and recognized processes, does not disappoint the creators.

THRILLING POSSIBILITY

A key unlock the door behind which hides the long-sought secret of life is nothing more or less than a combination of material elements activated by a force that is allied to electricity, if, indeed, it is not electricity as man knows it.

It is impossible to obtain from those directly connected with the experiment the statement that life actually has been created in a test tube, but one person who has access to the experiment from its inception came the reluctant admission that "something approximating life" has been produced by chemical means and something that is revolutionary has been born here.

The test was not in the city today, it was learned.

Nine of Yacht Eola Picked Up by Langley and Later Put on Destroyer

Vessel in Smash on Island; Group Expected to Reach San Diego Today

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Rescue of the passengers and crew of the pleasure yacht Eola, wrecked November 30 on the barren Guadalupe Islands, 220 miles south of here, was effected today by officers and men of the aircraft carrier Langley, according to a radiogram from that ship received by the commandant of the Eleventh Naval District.

The Langley, when she sighted the wreckage of the ill-fated pleasure craft, was searching for the San Pedro fishing boat Fidelity which has been missing for about two weeks.

All passengers and members of the crew on the Eola were rescued and transferred to the destroyer Aaron Ward which also was searching for the Fidelity. The destroyer is expected to reach San Diego tomorrow.

BONUS PLAN CRITICISED

Mellon Opposes Redemption

Says It Would Not Insure Recovery While Greatly Increasing Taxes

Vandenberg Replies With Proposal to Exchange Bonds for Policies

BY LAURENCE M. BENEDICT
"Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is opposed to the proposal that the Federal government pay out approximately $3,000,000,000 for immediate redemption of the adjusted compensation certificates held by World War veterans.

Writing today to Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, who is sponsoring the plan in Congress, Mr. Mellon declared redemption of the war bonus at this time "would be against the best interests of the veterans, unjustified as a broad economic policy and seriously detrimental to the public debt operations of the country."

Mellon's letter is regarded as conclusive proof that the administration is against the redemption plan for the time being at least, though Senator Vandenberg has requested the Secretary to make a further study. The matter was intrusted to Mellon by President Hoover, to whom Vandenberg first broached the proposal a month ago.

WOULD BOOST TAXES

The Treasury head says any action by Congress looking to the immediate paying off of the veterans' certificates, advanced as one means of putting money in circulation and thus relieving depression, would add to the tax burdens, mean a large increase in the public debt, which would adversely affect refunding operations, and not improve the veterans' interests.

As the result of his study of the Vandenberg proposal, business, he said, must look to other means of recovery than the distribution of What's Behind It All!

BRUENING WEATHERS STORM

German Cabinet Leader Withstands Four Attacks by Reichstag Foes and Emerges Stronger

BERLIN, Dec. 6. (AP)—Four times today the Bruening government repulsed the vigorous attack of the opposition in the Reichstag and at the end of the parliamentary session stood clearly victorious and still at the nation's helm.

With forty votes to spare it defeated a motion to revoke the Chancellor's decree of sweeping financial reforms. By a margin of thirty-five votes it put down a "no-confidence" motion. It won the edge of sixty-five votes on a proposal to table a motion of confidence ironically offered by the National Socialists. Finally, at the end of a long day, it got a majority of seventy-two votes against a Communist motion demanding revocation of the emergency decrees in force since last June.

Thus at the end of three days' debate the only surprise which came out of the session was the unexpected size of the government majority. It indicated Bruening is stronger than generally supposed.

Even the members of the Cabinet were surprised at the vote against revocation of the financial decree. They had expected a majority of not more than fifteen. They were visibly delighted as they left the Reichstag building, not to return until Tuesday when the session is to be resumed.

There was a feeling of general relief as this session ended, for nobody wants Bruening's job very badly, and no opposition party really envies the government its difficult task.

Now the government is in a position to put its financial reforms into full effect. Some of these measures are unpopular, particularly those slashing government salaries, but the Chancellor himself, in presenting the measure to President Von Hindenburg, asserted nothing else would pull Germany out of her financial difficulty.

The new measures will cut Germany's annual expenditures by $345,000,000, and they will inaugurate the most rigid economy in every department of both the national and state governments.

NEWSPAPER MAN DIES

SEATTLE (Wash.) Dec. 6. (AP)—Edward David Cowen, 73 years of age, well-known newspaper man, and a colorful political figure in the State, died here today after a long illness. He started his newspaper career as a printer's devil in Lowell, Mass.

BILL WOULD BAR WIVES FROM JOBS

Assemblyman Emmett to Introduce Measure in Next Legislature

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Married women employed in State offices in Sacramento, San Francisco and Los Angeles will have to give up their jobs unless they can prove they are the head of their family, if the Legislature passes a bill Assemblyman Dan Emmett of Santa Paula plans introducing in the coming session.

Emmett contends a married woman's place is in her home unless she is required to support her family. He said he believes one of the causes of unemployment among needy single men and women is employment of married women who work "to buy luxuries."

"Most of the married women now in State service are working to buy luxuries not possible unless both husband and wife are employed," the Assemblyman said.

All Quiet on Berlin Front

BERLIN, Dec. 6. (AP)—The German version of the motion picture "All Quiet on the Western Front" played peacefully before packed houses this afternoon and tonight, with women especially flocking to the theater where white mice loosed by Fascist demonstrators galloped yesterday.

Strong guards of police were on hand to prevent further disorder, but the audience apparently was more interested in the screen than in any possible repetition of the Fascist protest.

Hundreds who arrived late were unable to obtain seats.

DRYS VOTE DOWN PLAN FOR TEST

Proposed Referendum of Prohibition Question Meets Leaders' Disapproval

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—A proposal that dry forces lend their support to some form of national referendum on prohibition was almost overwhelmingly voted down today by a group of nationally prominent dry leaders in executive session here.

The group comprised what is known as the legislative committee of the national conference of organizations supporting the Eighteenth Amendment and its decision was virtually the first attack on the plan by an organized group of dry leaders.

The proposal would have the drys support a resolution for repeal until the measure had been adopted by Congress. The proviso would be added that the resolution would be considered by constitutional conventions in each State, in which the drys could fight solidly against it. It was argued that without dry support the measure would never get by Congress and before the people.

Despite the adverse vote today, however, assurance was given that the question of such a referendum will be considered at a series of dry meetings here next week and will be incorporated in a blanket report to the conference, thereby providing opportunity for general discussion.

CHILD THEFT CHARGED TO AUTO AGENT

Repossession of Machine With Baby Left in Seat and Desertion Asserted

SANTA ANA, Dec. 6. (Exclusive) When C. A. McWha, agent for a Long Beach automobile concern, repossessed an automobile without the registered owner's knowledge in Buena Park yesterday, he failed to note that a 3-year-old baby was asleep in the back seat and as a result deputy Sheriffs and the police are seeking him on a child-stealing warrant. The baby, according to the complaint of its mother, Mrs. Bertha Rosenberger, was discovered by the agent after he had driven two miles from the city, and was taken from the machine and abandoned along the roadside. Passing motorists discovered the child and returned it to Buena Vista.

The Orange county Sheriff immediately instituted a search for McWha and surrounding towns were notified. Employers of McWha in Long Beach asserted at a late hour that he had not reported. Mrs. Rosenberger told the Sheriff she had driven from her home to do some shopping in Buena Park and had parked the car in front of a store. The baby appeared none the worse for its experience.

Prisoners Win Hunger Strike

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6. (AP)—After a hunger strike of nine days, seven Communists held in the penitentiary obtained provisional freedom by an order of the District Court tonight.

DEATH ENDS EVENING STORY

Sister of Famous Golfers, Reading to Sons, Killed Accidentally by Shot From Husband's Rifle

The sharp crack of a small-caliber rifle last night ended plans for a Sunday rabbit-hunting outing and brought death instead to Mrs. Lydia Sorrell, who was accidently shot by her husband as she sat reading to her two small sons in their home at 106 West Eighty-seventh street.

The grief-stricken husband, Richard Sorrell, told investigating detectives from the Seventy-seventh-street police station that his wife was reading to their two sons, Grant, 12, and Douglas, 9, as he was adjusting the sights on a .22-caliber single-shot rifle.

"We were getting ready to drive out Sunday morning to the desert and take the two boys for a jack-rabbit hunt. The sights of the rifle were out of adjustment and I was trying to find out what was the matter," Sorrell told the detectives.

"I heard something coming over the radio I wanted to hear and jumped to turn the dial so the program would come in more distinctly and as I moved the gun went off."

Mrs. Sorrell slumped in her chair with a bullet wound in her forehead and the two boys, aroused from their bedtime story, stood horror stricken while ther father telephoned frantically for a physician.

An examination by an ambulance surgeon indicated Mrs. Sorrell had been instantly killed. Detective-Lieutenants Mozena, Castle and Fruitt questioned the father and the two boys, who said last night they would report at the Coroner's inquest, which probably will be called for tomorrow, that the shooting was accidental. Sorrell was not held.

Mrs. Sorrell was 44 years of age and was the sister of Al and Abe Espinosa, internationally famous professional golfers. They are now in Chicago.

NOTRE DAME WINS, 27-0

Irish Victorious in Great Game

Rocknemen Capture Second Consecutive National Gridiron Crown

Finish Unbeaten Schedule With Victory Before 90,000 Crowd

BY PAUL LOWRY

The Irish won. And how!

In an amazing game, one-sided from start to finish, punctuated by spectacular passing and scoring plays, Notre Dame vanquished Southern California, 27 to 0, yesterday, and swept aside the last barrier to the Hoosier goal of a second successive undefeated season.

In the lightning-like surge of one of the greatest of intersectional games the Irish added another chapter to the gridiron history of great Notre Dame teams while 90,000 persons, the largest in Coliseum record, looked on as the Trojans were literally ground into the turf.

WORST DEFEAT

Never before since Howard Jones came to Southern California back in 1925 has a team coached by him taken such a decisive beating, as, forced into its own territory throughout the game, it failed to threaten at any stage.

Only twice in four periods did the Trojans advance the ball past the middle of the field—once in the first period when they gained 30 yards on a series of plays and worked the ball to the Notre Dame 33-yard line, and late in the final period when they got to the 25-yard line, after Notre Dame subs had taken the field.

Scoring two touchdowns in the first period, this greatest of all Notre Dame teams, with Marchmont Schwartz and Bucky O'Connor, an overnight selection as fullback, leading the attack, took quick command of the battle and fought it out along chosen lines.

Pulling the strings of battle from his seat on the side lines, where a year ago he was pilloved in a sick chair back of the Notre Dame bench, Knute Rockne unleashed a powerful running and passing attack that baffled and bewildered the Trojans at every stage and far surpassed the efforts of the Four Horsemen team which beat Stanford, 27 to 10, in the New Year's Day game at Pasadena in 1925.

S.C. OUTPLAYED

After beating all other teams this year by orthodox football Notre Dame yesterday shot the works, and succeeded to the extent of outplaying Southern California in every single department of the game.

The Irish line outcharged the Trojan forwards throughout the struggle, the Irish backs outran the Trojan backs, the Irish blockers mowed down Trojan tacklers like a scythe cutting wheat, the Irish passers and Irish receivers fooled the Trojans secondary time after time, and the Irish individual heroes stole all the glory.

Heading the list of Irish stars from Bert Metzger, the peewee guard, on through the list to Frank Carideo, the all-American quarterback, appears the name of Bucky O'Connor, the fullback who stepped in at the last minute at the position where Jumping Joe Savoldi and Moon Mullins had held forth all season.

O'Connor, a substitute for Brill, was shot into the fray when it became apparent at Tucson that the team needed a more experienced performer than Hanley, the third-string fullback.

And yet when Hanley did get into the game after O'Connor had covered himself with glory in running 80 yards to a touchdown for Notre Dame's second touchdown he proved himself a classy athlete, both offensively and defensively.

The decisive Irish triumph marked an unusual record for the South Bend boys.

It was the nineteenth straight victory Notre Dame has scored without a defeat or a tie in two seasons of play.

The last defeat chalked up against the Irish was the one at the hands of Southern California in 1928, 27 to 14.

MERIT LAURELS

If such a record doesn't entitle the Irish to the mythical football championship of the United States there is no other means of gaining it.

Notre Dame revealed its passing attack early in the first period after

POISON FOG DISAPPEARS

Mystery Deaths Hushed Up

Belgian Officials Call Off Autopsies and Prepare to Bury Victims Today

Private Inquirers Attribute Deadly Mists Either to Zinc Works or Shells

ENGIS (Belgium) Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—The gray terror which in the last several days has stricken down scores of persons in this murky corner of Belgium and left between 200 and 400 with an inexplicable malady from which they may not recover, lifted today. But in its place a blanket of official "hush-hush" just as impenetrable as the fog has dropped over the district.

Last night it was officially announced in Brussels and Liege that autopsies of the victims would commence at once in order to determine the cause of all these mysterious deaths. Today it is learned that no autopsies will be performed. Permits to bury the victims have already been issued, and this little town has been echoing all afternoon with the hammering of undertakers preparing coffins.

COLLECTIVE SERVICE

The funerals will take place tomorrow—one collective service—and then individual interments. The same order will be observed in the other villages. Thus science's one hope of obtaining a clew to the malady has been deliberately thrown away by an official order and except for ingenious hypotheses formulated on the basis of hearsay information by scientists of two continents, the weird plague over a period of two days and in an area of a few square miles, will go down as in insolvable mystery.

The reasons for the official hushing up of the case can only be guessed at. That there is an organized official determination to hush up the affair is proved by the fact that the government's hygienic inspector at Liege, Dr. Lacombe, after spending the afternoon talking with local doctors and village officials, rescinded the order for autopsies and authorized the issuance of burial permits. He then announced to reporters that the deaths and illnesses were simply due to "fog and natural causes."

GUESSES MADE

One guess as to the reason for secrecy is that the death fog may be really caused by a leakage in the army chemical plant, where new war gas is being experimented with. This is in every way possible, but considering what is known about poison gases, it seems dubious. Among other possible reasons is the belief that the deaths were caused by fumes from large zinc and fertilizer factories near here, and that if the truth ever got out about the leaks, there would be a general exodus of the 60,000 inhabitants from this section of the Meuse Valley, making it impossible to obtain help to run the factories.

The general opinion of the inhabitants here is that the factories are to blame. The local doctors who watched the victims die or who are now caring for them in homes or hospitals, have no opinion. Officially they are quoted as saying that the deaths were merely due to the effect of an ordinary fog on persons affected with lung trouble—which are numerous since the population of this town is almost wholly made up of workers in chemical factories.

FACTORY OPERATING

The doctors declared that they are completely at sea, and admitted that the deaths might have been due to unknown gas from factory fumes or an unclassified epidemic. One thing is certain: The great zinc works on the outskirts of the town, one of the largest in Europe, which was officially stated last night to have been closed down for a month, is running full blast and the same is true of the fertilizer factory.

"The manufacture of nitric acid from the air and a strong solution of nitrous vapors in the air could produce deaths over a wide area. Catastrophes of this sort never have been recorded before, even during heavy fogs.

The country is obviously flooded by fumes from the factories. Under the heavy hoar frost it looks particularly dismal. Yearly the fields grow more sterile and the farmers have been moving out and abandoning the whole country to the factories. There has always been an unpleasant acrid smell in the air, but the inhabitants have become used to it.

Today, in this town, the people have recovered from their terror, and except for a preternatural

NOTRE DAME CROWD RIOTS

Police Reserves Called Out to Quell Wildest Student Celebration in University's History

SOUTH BEND (Ind.) Dec. 6. (AP)—For the first time in the memory of officials student enthusiasm over a Notre Dame athletic victory threatened to develop into disorder tonight.

More than 1000 youths milled about the entrance of a film theater intent upon "rushing" the place in celebration of the Irish conquest of Southern California and police reserves were called out to break up the gathering.

In recent years Notre Dame's triumphs over football foes have come to be taken as a matter of course—even placidly.

Tonight, however, news of the successful completion of the team's "suicide" schedule served to set off the pent-up emotion of the young-sters and they took complete charge of downtown streets.

A local bookmaker, who was reputed to have laid odds on Southern California, was cuffed about before the crowd gathered at the theater. A police squad, equipped with tear-gas paraphernalia, arrived at the scene shortly before 9 o'clock and their captain warned the crowd to disperse.

At the same time officials at Notre Dame were notified of the gathering and immediately started for the theater.

M'DONALD RECANTATIONS COLLAPSE ON THE STAND

Searing Review by Supreme Court Holds Waiter's Self-Repudiation Was "Corruptly Inspired"

This is the fifth of a series of daily articles presenting an exhaustive analysis of the State Supreme Court's recent hearing of new evidence in the Mooney-Billings cases, resulting in a denial of Billings's plea for a pardon recommendation.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—In yesterday's article was related the perhaps-intentional fiasco resulting from the first of John MacDonald's self-repudiation, ostensibly procured to liberate the Preparedness Day bombers. After some one had apparently decided that the waiter's famous "deathbed confession," made at Trenton, was not good enough to stand up under the fire of an "unfriendly grand jury," he returned ignominously back East—his fare paid by Ed Nockels with the funds of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Thereafter he dropped out of sight for nine years, during which public interest in the Mooney case died down to a point where some new "sensation" was necessary to revive it. Possibly contributions were getting few. So MacDonald was trotted out again with a new story or, rather, with the old one more elaborately dressed up. What assistance he had in preparing this does not appear but it is at least a remarkable coincidence that the Chicago federation had again been scouring the country for MacDonald just before the new story came to light.

At any rate MacDonald again burst into print at Baltimore last spring. To Herbert R. O'Conor, State's Attorney of Baltimore, he unfolded the refurbished tale of having assisted in "framing" Mooney and Billings. The ubiquitous Nockels admitted that he was then in Baltimore also. O'Conor telegraphed Gov. Young of California that MacDonald had retracted his identifications of the pair as the men he saw plant the suit case bomb at Steuart and Market streets, San Francisco, just before the parade.

REMARKABLE DISCREPANCY

Now O'Conor insists, and there is no reason whatever to doubt the statement, that in his verbal account of the supposed frame-up, MacDonald specifically included Billings as one of those "falsely" identified by him. Following this, the waiter made the usual affidavit, which was promptly forwarded to California and was introduced as exhibit-in-chief at the recent Supreme Court hearing to determine if Billings should be recommended for a pardon.

Here appears an extraordinary fact. In the written affidavit of MacDonald, Billings is not named at all!

This remarkable discrepancy between what Mr. O'Conor describes as MacDonald's verbal statement to him and what MacDonald was willing to swear to in his affidavit was naturally promptly pounced upon by the inquisitors. In a corner, MacDonald denied he had ever included Billings in his verbal statement to O'Conor. Then, quoting from the transcript:

Q.: But you don't offer any explanation as to why you left Billings out of any such affidavit nor how O'Conor got hold of any such information?

A.: (by MacDonald) I do not.

That was the waiter's first slip. It was a slight one in comparison to the maze of self-contradictions in which he shortly found himself.

In his Baltimore statement and at first on the stand before the Supreme Court, not to mention the Trenton "confession" and the New York affidavit of 1921, MacDonald said that his identifications of Mooney and Billings were forced upon him. He accused Dist.-Atty. Fickert, Police Captain Matheson, Police Sergeant Charles Goff and, by intimation, every other officer who had a part in the investigation, of aiding in this "forcing."

CAUGHT AGAIN

The written statement in which MacDonald identified Mooney and Billings as the parade bombers was made and signed by him on July 24, 1916, two days after the explosion. On the stand at the recent hearing MacDonald identified this statement as his. The transcript reads:

Q.: However, Mr. MacDonald, the statement I am reading to you is one that you signed. That is your signature?

A.: (by MacDonald) That is my signature.

Q.: AND, OF COURSE, UP TO THAT TIME NOBODY FRAMED YOU, DID THEY?

A.: NO, SIR.

Again, a little further on:

Q.:—NOW DOES NOT THIS STATEMENT SHOW AND WEREN'T YOU TELLING THE TRUTH AS BEST YOU COULD UNDERSTAND IT AT THE TIME YOU MADE THAT STATEMENT?

A.: YES, YOUR HONOR.

Caught again, MacDonald fell back on an accusation of coaching on the part of Fickert. But—

Q.: You had already identified these men before you ever talked to him (Fickert;) isn't that the fact now, getting right down to brass tacks?

A.: Yes, sir, after Lieut. Goff pointed them out to me.

Among other things MacDonald had accused Goff (then a sergeant, by the way, not a lieutenant) of helping him to describe the bombers in a way which would make the descriptions fit Mooney and Billings. After several other questions the matter of this description was taken up and MacDonald was asked:

Q.: Did Goff prompt any misstatements in this?

A.: Nothing.

WHOLESALE FALSITIES

One by one, MacDonald's other charges were brought forward and similarly disposed of.

He accused Goff of helping him pick out the photographs of Mooney and Billings from a collection of rogues' gallery portraits—and it was shown that at that time Goff did not even know Billings.

He accused Capt. Matheson of coaching him on the identifications—and then admitted that he never saw or talked to Matheson until after the identifications had been made.

He accused Fickert of coaching him on the descriptions of the accused men which he gave to the grand jury shortly after the arrests—but the description which the grand jury record quotes MacDonald as making does not correspond at all with that which MacDonald says he gave.

He accused Fickert and Goff of having in person pointed out Billings for him to identify in the Richmond district police station on July 29, 1916, and the record was produced to show that neither Fickert nor Goff was present at the time the identification was made.

He accused Fickert of corrupting him with the offer of part of the $17,000 reward—and the record shows that the the police department had ordered that no reward be paid.

All of which pretty well disposed of MacDonald and his charges.

DID HE EVER TELL TRUTH?

A natural question is this: If MacDonald is such a monumental liar, why believe even his original identifications of Mooney and Billings? Was he not probably lying then, too?

The answer seems to be that, at the time he first told his story, there was no reason whatever for his not telling the truth. Within a few minutes of the time of the explosion he tried to tell his story to a policeman who was holding the crowd back from the scene—and was chased away. A little later he told in a barber shop of having seen the suit case planted. Within two days he had told four citizens about it. Advised to go to the police, he did so and was shown a miscellaneous lot of photographs of gymmiters. Without aid or prompting he picked out those of Mooney and Billings. The one of the former was an old one showing Mooney with a mustache. As MacDonald identified it he remarked: "This is the man—but he has no mustache now." It is important to note in this connection that at that time MacDonald did not know either Mooney or Billings, had never heard of them and had no reason other than the truth for identifying them.

It may be argued that MacDonald made up a yarn in an effort to get the reward, but it must be remembered that at the time he first told his story there had been no reward offered and the waiter's mentality was hardly such as to enable him to foresee, within that brief time since the explosion, that there would be one, much less to lay elaborate plans to get it.

MacDonald's story, further, was corroborated at essential points by the independent testimony of other witnesses with whom he could have had no possible collusion.

The whole mass of evidence indicates as clearly as evidence can indicate anything that MacDonald was telling the truth, as nearly as he could tell the truth, when he identified Mooney and Billings as the bombers. That his subsequent retractions of that testimony and his charges of official pressure on him to make the identifications were clumsy fabrications was conclusively established by MacDonald himself.

"CORRUPTLY INSPIRED"

How he was induced to attempt these fabrications appears pretty clear from the influences which surrounded him. The Supreme Court had no hesitation, whatever in declaring its belief that the recantation was corruptly inspired and that the methods used to procure it savored strongly of subornation of perjury. This applied particularly to the affidavit of 1921, when the "serpent's folds" that enveloped MacDonald were plainly visible. But, says the court:

"It is obvious, however, that if the affidavit of 1921 was the offspring of corruption and saturated with manifest, willful and now admitted falsifications, his later sworn statements, reasserting the truth thereof are entitled to no more of credence."

His efforts to repudiate himself, said Justice Sonwell, in the latter's separate opinion, were "the palpable fabrications of a man who had succumbed to a long siege upon on his honor, rather than the triumph of a long-burdened soul in casting off its perfidious load . . . the temptation to forswear himself had seared his soul."

"I find"—these are the deliberate words of Justice Preston—"that MacDonald was over-reached and enticed from the truth by illegal and illegitimate means."

The theory that MacDonald had so far degenerated in body, mind and moral fiber after his first testimony in 1916 and 1917 as to become an easy prey to corrupting influences appeared to have some weight with the court, which said:

"Had the John MacDonald of 1916 been, in outward appearance or manner of testifying, the John MacDonald of 1930, as he appeared before this body, it is inconceivable that any appreciable amount of credence would have been accorded him."

Referring to his 1930 appearance on the stand the decision says:

"A more abject spectacle of debased and degenerated manhood was never before presented to any body of judicial or quasi-judicial investigators . . . When confronted, as he frequently was, with his manifest perjuries and with proof of the truth of his former testimony, he betook himself to such broken utterances as 'All lies! All lies!' or covered his face with his handkerchief in simulation of wretchedness and weeping, during which, however, it was observed that no tears fell."

In the next article will be described some of the "work" done by Fremont Older on others of the "vital witnesses."

BOOTLEGGERS "CARRY COALS TO NEWCASTLE"

GLASGOW (Scotland) Dec. 6. (AP)—Carrying coals to Newcastle, or steel to Bethlehem, now has a rival phrase in "Bootlegging in Glasgow," for officials of the customs and excise departments are now trying to throttle bootlegging operations in this cradle of a "wee drap."

Because the tax on spirits amounts in some cases to two-thirds of the sale price of a quart of whisky, scores of illicit stills have been put in operation in various sections of England and Scotland. Investigation showed the centers of bootlegging activity to be London, Leeds, Manchester, Cardiff, Hull, Birmingham, Bristol, Glasgow and Edinburgh.

Surreptitious handling of the product in gasoline cans has made the trade hard to check. Government officers estimate the cost of distilling a gallon of "moonshine" at 10 cents, the stuff selling for $12.50.

Perfumes, which use considerable alcohol as a base, are also to be investigated, officials said.

The officers estimate a loss of $3500 in taxes on each 100 gallons sold contrary to law.

MOTHER DROWNS TWO CHILDREN IN BATHTUB

CHESTER (Pa.) Dec. 6. (AP)—Carrying two of her four small children from their cribs as they slept, Mrs. Ida Twaddell, 38 years of age, believed by police to have been demented, drowned them in a bathtub last night. "I thought they were better dead," she said.

VETERAN BONUS PLAN OPPOSED

Vandenberg Holds Protests Not Unanswerable

savings. Mr. Mellon wrote the Senator, who, at the Secretary's request, made the letter public today:

The letter of Secretary Mellon continued:

MELLON'S LETTER

"But we must also consider the other side of the picture. The additional funds are to be obtained by borrowing. An issue of bonds for this purpose would draw money out of the bond market and make funds less available for other issues. Business recovery is in some degree at least dependent on a good market for new securities to supply the needs of various business enterprises. To the extent that funds seeking investment are diverted to the purchase of government bonds to be issued for this special purpose, to that extent is the capital market depleted of funds otherwise available for industrial and other employment.

UNJUST TO VETERANS

"Moreover, even if the general economic effect would be beneficial—and I do not believe that it would—are we justified in attempting to achieve such a result at the expense of the veterans? Is it any more sound or equitable to invite them to cash in their endowment insurance policies and to spend the proceeds for current expenses than to invite other policyholders throughout the country to forego the benefits of future protection and to make a similar sacrifice in the hope of giving a temporary stimulus to business? Business must look to other means of recovery than the dissipation of savings.

DEBT CONSIDERATIONS

"Finally we come to the third consideration as to whether the borrowing of the vast sum needed can be effected without interference with public-debt operations and without greatly increased interests costs on the public debt. My opinion is that it cannot. In March, 1931, the Treasury is faced with public maturities in excess of $1,100,000,000, calling for a large refunding operation. While the market for government securities is at present good we cannot take it for granted that it has a capacity to take an indefinite amount of these securities.

"It will be a sufficient task to float an issue or issues already planned without an additional one, and putting in additional issues will undoubtedly result in a higher cost of credit to the government. Moreover, the day is not distant when many billions of dollars of bonds bearing a 4 1-2 per cent interest ate become callable. A large increase in the public debt at this time, whether in the form of short-term paper or even long-term bonds, must necessarily adversely affect the extremely important refunding operations that must be undertaken."

NEW PROPOSAL

Senator Vandenberg holds that "three-fourths of the Secretary's objections can easily be overcome." He replied to Mellon today and while conceding the great importance of "every adverse consideration which you urge" he does not consider the Secretary's opposition as a foreclosure to further consideration of the plan.

In fact, the Senator offered a new one, designed, however, to accomplish the same ends. In his letter to Mellon he urged that each compensation certificate shall be exchanged for a 3 per cent government bond in the hands of the veterans themselves. This scheme, he said, would make the compensation immediately negotiable practically without the slightest difficulty to the veteran.

"It would," he argued, "realize the process of liquidation and avoid the necessity of vast, new machinery for the marketing of government securities."

REDUCE COSTS

The Senator holds further that this plan would not increase the current carrying charge upon these obligations, pointing out that the current annual contribution to the compensation fund is $112,000,000, while under his scheme the annual charge would only be $84,000,000; that the annual contribution to the sinking fund would not have to be increased and that it would advance by seven or eight years the date of maturiay. Mr. Vandenberg also says that the seeming increase in the national debt is more apparent than real.

He points out that thousands of veterans are in dire distress, have hypothecated their compensation certificates to the limit at the higher interest rates than ought to be charged and that they are in prospect of losing their equity.

'POISONOUS FOG' QUIZ HUSHED UP

Mystery Still Shrouds Fate of Scores Who Died

War Gas Theory Expounded by Some Inquirers

Collective Funerals Will Be Given to Victims

silence, it is impossible to realize that a catastrophe ever occurred. Mingled with the grief over the deaths there is fierce resentment against the factories which the townspeople believe have poisoned them.

No new deaths have occurred since last night, but it is impossible to tell yet whether the sick ever will fully recover. Ten in the hospital at Ougre, who last night seemed to be dying, now appear out of danger, but the doctors fear that their lungs have been partly eaten away. Many are confined to their homes in almost as serious condition.

According to Mayor Jean Humbert of Engis, who is ill himself, there are 200 ill in this town out of 4000 inhabitants, and he estimated that there are between 100 and 200 in other villages. All have the same symptoms, burning chests, dry, hacking coughs, pains in the back and a curious sugary taste in the mouth.

POISON GAS THEORY CHAMPIONED BY PAPER

(Copyright, 1930, by Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Based on information dug up by its Liege correspondent, the Nationalist La Liberte this afternoon leans heavily on the theory that poison gas furnishes the most likely clew to the mysterious Belgian fog deaths, and says that the Belgian government is conducting a secret investigation to determine whether the gas escaped from a hidden arsenal across the German border.

While this paper dwells with evident pleasure on the possibility that the Germans are experimenting with poisonous vapors, contrary to the provisions of the Versailles Treaty, La Liberte considers that it is much more probable that the gas came from shells left during the German retreat in 1918.

OBJECTION ANSWERED

Against the objections that an immense number of shells filled with any known war gas would have been needed to produce deaths over such a wide area, it is pointed out that the Germans toward the end of the war are believed to have discovered a new poison which was five times as deadly as anything previously produced, but that it was never used extensively, because the Germans realized that their cause was lost and feared reprisals.

The recent floods, thinks this paper, produced cave-ins in the earth which set off the shells at scattered points, and the unusually heavy fog accounted for the high rate of mortality. La Liberte, however, by no means rejects the hypothesis that gas escaped from the near-by German border, and uses this as a pretext to reiterate its demand for an investigation.

DOCTORS GIVE VIEWS

Despite the innumerable objections to the war-gas theory, many persons are inclined to accept it. The leading French doctors and scientists laugh at the idea that a simple fog could produce such sudden deaths, and consider it highly improbable that the deaths were due to congestion from cold.

Today Dr. Paul, recognised as the greatest expert in France on criminal medicine, expressed belief that the fog must have held down the poison gas.

"The fog never killed anything," he said. "It seems that the fog prevented the heavier fumes from evaporating into the atmosphere. However, the only way to discover the real cause of the deaths will be to perform autopsies."

INFLUENZA WAVE HINTED AS EXPLANATION

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—The "black fog" which swept through the Meuse Valley bringing death to sixty-four persons may have carried a particularly devastating form of influenza, Sir William Simpson, authority on plagues and epidemics, said today.

"There are many variations of the disease which we do not yet fully understand," said he, "and it is quite possible that local conditions may create a type of epidemic of which we have no knowledge."

HOOVER FIGHTS SPENDING SPREE

President Pleads for Care in Relief Expenditures

Watson Called and Warned of Prospective Deficit

Borah Proposes 2 Per Cent Income Tax Increase

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—President Hoover moved today to apply the brakes to Congressional appropriations as the emergency relief program threatened to expand above his recommendations on its speedy way at Capitol Hill.

Calling in Senator Watson, Indiana, Republican leader, Mr. Hoover urged strictest economy and pictured a prospective deficit of $355,000,000 for this fiscal year instead of $180,000,000 on the basis of the contemplated relief work.

CUT APPROVED

Later, the House Appropriations Committee decided to cut down the emergency unemployment construction fund from $150,000,000 to $110,000,000. Mr. Hoover had asked for $150,000,000.

Chairman Wood of the House Appropriations Committee, in announcing the reduced appropriation, said the committee considers the other items in the $150,000,000 involved in the regular appropriations covered in budget estimates and that they will be considered either in the regular bills, or in a later deficiency bill. The committee unanimously approved the appropriation for report to the House Tuesday.

BORAH OFFERS PLAN

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, about the same time offered the suggestion for a 2 per cent increase in income taxes next year in addition to discontinuing the 1 per cent reduction in effect this year as a way of averting the deficit.

Earlier the Agriculture Committee in the House had added $5,000,000 to the $25,000,000 proposed by the administration for drought relief, but voted down the $60,000,000 figure unanimously approved yesterday by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

There still was co-operation between Republicans and Democrats in Congress tonight for speeding the emergency relief measures but it is obvious the co-operation pledge does not include indorsement for any specific program.

Representative Ashwell, Democrat, Louisiana, announced he will carry to the House floor his fight for a $60,000,000 drought relief fund and he predicted it will be approved.

OBJECTIONS MADE

No specific measures were mentioned in the White House parley but Watson was summoned within a few hours of the time for the Senate to start consideration of the $60,000,000 drought relief bill.

Watson believes the $25,000,000 included in the Senate bill for food for the farmers is unnecessary in view of the determination of the Red Cross to meet this situation, but there is every indication the Senate will insist upon the higher figure.

The House agriculture committee rejected this $25,000,000 by a vote of twelve to six, dividing on party lines with Representative Garber, Republican, Virginia, joining five Democrats.

Both the Senate and House will begin work early in the week on the relief program with the drought relief bill due for first consideration. The House Appropriations Committee will report the unemployment bill Monday or Tuesday and there is prospect part of the program may be enacted by the end of next week.

SCOPE LIMITED

The House drought bill limits the loans to the purchase of seed and fertilizer for putting in next year's crops.

The apparent disruption of the heralded Republican-Democratic co-operative movement in so far as it applies to specific terms of legislation led to new predictions today of an extra session in the spring, although the Democratic leaders insisted they will do nothing to force such a session by delaying tactics.

MRS. LISSNER WEDS BROWNE

Ex-Rabbi Author and Artist Marry in St. Louis

After Globe Trip Couple to Live in Santa Monica

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 6. (AP)—Lewis Browne, former rabbi and now an author and lecturer, and Mrs. Myna Lissner, Los Angeles artist and illustrator, were married here tonight. Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman, an old college associate of Browne, performed the ceremony, with only a few guests present.

The author's bride illustrated his latest book, "Since Calvary." Other books which he wrote are "This Believing World," "Stranger Than Fiction" and "The Man Heine."

Browne said as a rabbi he had performed many ceremonies for couples entering companionate marriages, including Hendrik William Van Loon, but didn't care about companionate marriage for himself.

Mrs. Lissner is the daughter of I. Eisner, real estate dealer of Los Angeles. The couple will live at Santa Monica, Cal., after a five months' trip around the world.

EQUITY MAY TAX FOREIGN STARS

Actors' Association Plans to Levy 5 Per Cent "Cut"

Would Abrogate Six Month's Wait Rule, However

Rank and File of Thespians Unaffected by Changes

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (AP)—A step to tax foreign stars appearing on the American stage 5 per cent of their salaries has been taken by the executive council of the Actors' Equity Association.

It is to be voted on at a general meeting, probably January 12.

The council has suggested, however, a second amendment to its constitution which would allow "stars and featured players" to go directly from one American engagement to another without the customary six months' wait between engagements.

Equity officials said the latter proposal was an attempt to encourage increased productions, thus giving additional work to American actors and actresses who make up the supporting casts for the foreign stars. The old rule of six months' lay-off still would apply to minor players and foreign companies.

One unfavorable reaction to the proposed tax was registered today by the English actress, June, who in private life is Lady Inverclyde. In a letter to the London Express she criticised the tax.

One of her suggestions, that American managers of foreign stars be compelled to pay the 5 per cent tax, undoubtedly will be carried out, Equity officials said. The tax merely will be added to the salary the American producer intends to pay, the officials believe.

SALTON SEA TRACT MADE BIRD REFUGE

Hoover Order Creates Important Link in Coast Chain of Protection Areas

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Government lands adjacent to the southern part of Salton Sea in Imperial county, California, have been set aside by an executive order of President Hoover as a refuge and breeding ground for migratory birds.

The lands involved have been withdrawn for reclamation purposes in connection with the Yuma reclamation project and, while primarily under jurisdiction of the Interior Department, will be administered as a wild life refuge by the biological survey, Department of Agriculture.

The refuge will be known as the Salton Sea Wild Life Tract and will constitute an important place in the network of refuges to be established in the west coast region under the Migratory Conservation Act.

Bond Repository to Be Opened by Dr. Kilpatrick

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 6. (AP)—Dr. George A. Kilpatrick of McAlester, Okla., today was granted a judgment for possession of a safety deposit box in a Kansas City bank in which his brother, E. Raymond Kilpatrick, is said to have stored securities valued at $48,000.

E. Raymond Kilpatrick, returned here yesterday from Los Angeles on a charge of embezzling $83,000 from his brother, testified the bonds belonged to his brother.

The bonds are said to be part of a trust fund Dr. Kilpatrick had established for their mother, Mrs. Ella Kilpatrick of Henryetta, Okla., and sister, Miss Ella Kilpatrick of Los Angeles.

pected in port here some time tomorrow.

Those listed in the radiogram as rescued are: L. Sayers, master; J. D. Kilkenny, 2307 Wilmington Road, Los Angeles, owner; S. F. Prisbee and Anna, Lucile and Hazel Prisbee, Mrs. Mary Johnson, J. M. McFate and H. R. Tiffany, passengers.

The message as received by the commandant read:

"While searching shores Guadalupe Islands sighted wreck of yacht Eola at northeast coast. All hands saved. Aaron Ward has survivors on board. Yacht wrecked night of November 30. Will send survivors into San Diego when opportunity offers, probably tonight.

"No news of Fidelity except caretaker of property ashore reports Fidelity came in from southeast and anchored Guadalupe overnight November 23 and sailed November 24 in northeast direction."

The message also gave the names as listed above.

Officers at the naval air station, North Island, said tonight that the Aaron Ward probably will not arrive here until tomorrow. It will be necessary, they said, to get another destroyer to take its place in the Fidelity search before it will be allowed to leave.

A number of land and seaplanes and destroyers as well as the aircraft carrier are searching over an area of 117,000 square miles for the San Pedro fishing boat, last sighted during a storm in the vicinity of the Santa Barbara Islands.

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighte prominent young Laborites toni defied the MacDonald governme by issuing a manifesto which ca for a semidictatorship to solve British industrial crisis and also postponement of the repayment war debts.

YOUNG BRITONS ASK DICTATORS

Eighteen Notable Laborites Defy MacDonald Regime

Five Men to Rule Nation in Economic Crisis Urged

Postponement of Payment of War Debts Also Wanted

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semidictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war-debt postponement suggestion of the manifesto, but this section was brief and did not indicate the means to be employed.

OTHER USES URGED

It simply said all surplus revenue should be used to pay interest on loans for constructive works, for relief of some of the burdens on the working class, and the reduction of taxation on workers' incomes.

"Further funds should be provided for such purposes," read the manifesto, "by some postponement, and reconstruction, of the precipitate attempt to repay the war debt from taxation of this age and generation."

Among the eighteen signers are the young millionaire Socialist's wife, Lady Cynthia Mosley, and Oliver Baldwin, son of the Conservative chieftain, Stanley Baldwin. All are Laborite members of the House of Commons except A. J. Cook, the fiery miner leader who was dubbed "Emperor Cook" during the general strike of 1926.

CAREERS STAKED

Declaring Britain's Parliamentary machinery is incapable of dealing with the present situation, Sir Oswald and his associates demand an emergency Cabinet of not more than five Ministers without portfolio, vested with wide powers for a stated period and subject only to the general control of Parliament.

By directly challenging the Labor government Sir Oswald and his associates —, most of them young men—have staked their political careers on this, and disciplinary measures may be expected from Labor party leaders.

Just turned 34 years of age Sir Oswald is known as "a young man in a hurry," and the destination he is aiming for is considered to be No. 10 Downing street and the Premiership.

He jumped into Ramsay MacDonald's Ministry only to resign recently because Laborite leaders rejected his proposals to solve unemployment.

YOUNG ENGLAND SPEAKS

Hence the manifesto may be taken as the voice of young England in the Labor movement, and it concludes:

"The country cannot wait. We want action now to meet the national emergency."

Its more important proposals include:

An emergency cabinet of five.

A national planning organization, to develop new industries and to modernize old ones.

An organization to turn out houses and building materials in the same way munitions were turned out during the World War.

Some postponement of the repayment of the war debt.

Licenses or tariffs for the control of imported manufactures.

An import board for foodstuffs, a guaranteed price for farm products, and the protection of consumers against unfair prices.

SUPPORT EXPECTED

While the manifesto is a challenge to leaders of the Labor government, it is intimated that support for the plan is expected from all parties. This hints at some sort of national party government, much discussed in Britain recently, but the idea has largely been discarded by recognized party leaders as impossible of attainment. Only yesterday David Lloyd George, the Liberal generalissimo, declared that a national three-party government is impossible for the simple reason that the Conservatives will have nothing to do with it.

The signers of the manifesto declare they surrender nothing of their Socialist faith, but "the immediate question is not a question of ownership but of the survival of British industry. Let us put through an emergency program to meet the national danger. Afterward, political debate on the fundamental principles can be resumed."

CABINET CHOOSING PROVES DIFFICULT

BARTHOU SEEKS CABINET TIMBER

Former French Premier Tries to Conciliate Groups

Poincare Declines to Act Because of Ill Health

Radical Socialists Expected to Temper Demands

PARIS, Dec. 6. (AP) — Senator Louis Barthou, once Premier of France and a dozen times Cabinet Minister, was trying tonight to conciliate France's many political parties in an effort to form a Cabinet to succeed the defeated Tardieu ministry.

M. Barthou accepted the difficult task of forming a government late today after former Premier Poincare had refused on account of ill health.

POINCARE MENTIONED

Certain political groups held the belief, however, that President Doumergue might ask Poincare to reconsider and take command if Barthou fails to get enough support.

The Senator told the President he would consult friends and political leaders during the night and would return to the Elysee Palace tomorrow to report success or failure.

The Radical Socialists, who since 1926 have refused to take part in any concentration government, announced a change of stand this evening. They will offer Barthou their almost necessary assistance providing certain portfolios are given them. Heretofore they have demanded the important post of Minister of the Interior, but it is understood now they will be content without it.

WOULD FOIL TARDIEU

The change of policy was said to have been caused by strong desire to thwart a possible return of the Radical Socialists' old enemy, Andre Tardieu, to the Premiership.

This view was weakened, however, by the announcement tonight that Tardieu had agreed to serve in the Barthou Cabinet, provided a sufficient majority could be found for it among the Republican or Moderate groups.

The problem of filling the portfolio of Foreign Affairs was settled when Aristide Brjand, Foreign Minister in the Tardieu Cabinet, consented to join the combination.

Senator Barthou, who is 68 years of age, has long been considered one of the strongest of French statesmen. He has had a brilliant political, literary and legal career, is the author of half a dozen books and is a member of the French Academy.

SCIENCE TRAILS SECRET OF LIFE

day and the reporter was assured there is small probability that he can be induced to speak of the discovery. Dr. William E. Lower, Dr. Crile's partner in the laboratory, declared that the matter is not yet ready for the public.

Dr. Lower, however, expressed the opinion that Dr. Crile will be prepared to lay his facts before the American Society for the Advancement of Science, which meets here during Christmas week, but could give no assurance that he will permit the purport of the report to that body to reach the public.

It was said that at that time Dr. Crile will ask this gathering of learned men to help him interpret the meaning of what he has discovered and that he will not be surprised if they prohounce it synthetic life.

From sources outside the clinic, certain fundamental facts concerning the discovery were obtained. Neither definite confirmation nor any denial whatever was forthcoming when this information was laid before Dr. Crile's assistants. It was plain, however, from the conversation with those assistants that the reporter had, much to their regret, struck a hot trail.

DETAILS OF WORK

In simple language, this correspondent's understanding of what has taken place in Dr. Crile's laboratory is as follows:

Brain tissues taken from a freshly killed animal were reduced to ashes by electrical heat. From the resulting substance, certain salts and other elements were obtained.

To this substance were added proteins, perhaps some other elements and chemicals. The whole was treated electrically.

Before the astonished eyes of the scientists there appeared a "thing" with all the characteristics, or nearly all, of a living cell or protozoa.

This "thing" possessed the power of locomotion. It also possessed and utilized the power of reproduction by fission, or cell division. It fed on the protein in the test tube, consuming it as other unicellular animals do their nourishment.

In addition to this, it was found that the "thing" was susceptible to narcotics, becoming dormant when subjected to certain drugs and later recovering.

It was declared that, owing to the care taken in the experiment, no living thing could possibly have entered the ingredients of the concoction.

Also it is understood that the experiment has been made repeatedly for the benefit of other scientists who are sworn to secrecy.

No one realizes more than does this little group of scientists what this would mean, if proved, to the theories and hypotheses held by the intellectual world, both scientific and theological. It is plain that this is the reason the secret is so closely guarded.

It also is plain that they stand in great awe of what they have found.

CAUSE FOR SILENCE

Although Dr. Crile has not spoken and no official statement concerning the experiment has come from the silent men who know its details, the well-known reluctance of scientific men to hand over the results of their findings to an unscientific lay public undoubtedly accounts for this. These men plead that it is "incomplete" and "beyond the understanding of the public in its present form." And "we stand in awe of it ourselves and cannot be sure of the nature of the 'thing' we have found."

But this much is certain—something of extreme importance has taken place behind the closed doors of Dr. Crile's laboratory here. At no time was a denial of this encountered, but, rather, unquestionable confirmation of it.

RAIL STOCK DEAL HELD NOT LEGAL

Pennsylvania Ordered by Federal Board to Sell Wabash and Lehigh Shares

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Violation of the Clayton Antitrust Act was charged to the Pennsylvania Railroad today by the Interstate Commerce Commission in ordering it to divest itself of holdings in the Wabash and Lehigh Valley railroads.

The Pennsylvania was instructed to dispose of the stock, acquired through its subsidiary, the Pennsylvania Company, within six months.

The commission said the Wabash held 231,329 shares of Lehigh Valley stock, and the Pennsylvania indirectly through its holding company acquired 576,800 shares of Wabash and 365,039 of Lehigh Valley.

It held the effect was to lessen competition between the Pennsylvania and the other roads.

The railroad opposed the order on the grounds the Pennsylvania company is not a common carrier but an investment company. It owns all the holding company's stock.

Senators Quiz Appointees to Tariff Board

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Three of President Hoover's recess appointees to the reorganized Tariff Commission were subjected to a public examination of their qualifications and tariff views by the Senate Finance Committee today preparatory to reporting their nominations to the Senate.

The three other members of the bipartisan body will be questioned Monday.

Henry P. Fletcher, Pennsylvania, Republican chairman of the commission and former diplomat, was questioned by both Republican and Democratic members, as were Thomas W. Page, Democrat, Virginia, and John Lee Coulter, Republican, North Dakota.

HOOVER FELICITATES FINNISH PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—President Hoover today sent a message of greeting to President Relander of Finland on the eleventh anniversary of Finnish independence. "I wish to avail myself of the auspicious anniversary of the independence of Finland to send greetings," the President cabled, "to Your Excellency and the people of Finland in behalf of the people of the United States and in my own name."

ROAD PERILS OF OLD CARS HELD GREAT

Auto Association Says 8,000,000 Valued at Less Than $25 on Highways

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Taking the American Automobile Association's word for it, there will be 8,000,000 cars pounding the highways of the country at the end of 1930 valued at less than $25 each.

The figures were made public today after a survey based on the actual age of vehicles from registration tabulations and the average life of vehicles.

Highest prices listed for cars of the vintage of 1925 are $25 and 8,000,000 cars, forming 28 per cent of the total registration, have passed their fifth birthday. The blue book of the automobile industry does not list as of any value vehicles purchased before 1925.

Thomas F. Henry, president of the association, said "the presence on our highways of so many worn-out vehicles during 1930 may well be reflected in the year's toll of accidents and fatalities."

AIR LINKS BRING HEALTH HAZARD

Surgeon-General Cumming Tells of New Peril

Way Now Open for Entry of Epidemic Diseases

Suggestions Presented for Protection of Nation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—International aerial transportation has brought a new health hazard for the Public Health Service to cope with, Surgeon-General Cumming said today in his annual report to Congress that it has brought the danger that cholera, bubonic plague and yellow fever would be transported aerially across international boundary lines.

He points to the two extremes of the Health Service—the international and local units—as presenting the greatest needs for immediate action.

RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

He urges world-wide reports on epidemic diseases and whole-time, all-purpose health organizations in rural districts.

His recommendations for organization in rural America, only 25 per cent of which now is provided with such service, follow closely the plan outlined by the White House conference on child health and protection.

"Development of efficient whole-time local health organizations through which all public health activities may be conducted in proper sequence and in proper relation one to the other, is the program which will yield a far greater return on the dollar invested, on lives saved and sickness prevented among all groups of both sexes than any program limited by special diseases or to particular elements of the population," the report says.

DISEASE GAINS

Last year the United States enjoyed good health generally, the Surgeon-General reports, but certain diseases showed increases.

Smallpox, preventable by vaccination, advanced from 34,685 cases in 1927 to 41,458 cases in 1929. Pellagra, which increased in death rate from 2.5 for 100,000 population in 1924 to 5.7 for 100,000 in 1928, was held to 3.5 in 1929. Meningococcus meningitis, also on the rise for several years past, showed a slight falling off. Infantile paralysis, slight in 1929, showed more than usual prevalence in 1930.

BEAU IN TROUBLE OVER CLARA BOW'S BOUQUETS

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Clara Bow, the much-publicized Hollywood film flapper, was the central figure in an extradition hearing in the Governor's office today, it being asserted that C. Jamieson Williams, Los Angeles mercantile broker, defrauded the New Pfister Hotel in Milwaukee to send flowers to the actress. Gov. Young approved the papers for the extradition of Williams, who was arrested in San Francisco.

Sheriff Reichebbach of Milwaukee testified at the hearing, held at the request of Attorney William P. Herron of San Francisco, representing Williams, that the defendant ran up a bill of $496.29 when he stopped at the hotel for four days last August and then left without paying.

Included in the expense item, the Sheriff declared, was $40 for flowers sent to Miss Bow, the bill for the posies being charged to the hotel. R. W. Nichols, who was a guest at the hotel with Williams, is jointly charged with Williams.

FOREIGN MUSICIANS BARRED IN PRUSSIA

BERLIN, Dec. 6. (AP)—Foreign musicians are barred from taking engagements in the Prussian Province of Brandenburg, which includes Berlin, because tone films and gramophones have thrown many German musicians out of employment.

RADIO SALES FIXED AT $200,000,000

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (AP)—An estimate by the Radio Manufacturers' Association places the expected sale between now and Christmas of radio tubes and accessories at nearly $80,000,000 and radio receivers at between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000.

LINDSEY MAY FORCE DEBATE

Judge Expected to Break in on Bishop's Sermon

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (AP)—Former Judge Ben Lindsey's presence when Bishop William T. Manning speaks to his congregation tomorrow on companionate marriage may lead to an impromptu debate between the two with the cathedral of St. John the Divine as a forum.

The proponent of companionate marriage notified the bishop today he would be present during the sermon Dr. Manning intends to deliver and might interrupt it to ask why the bishop urged episcopal clergy not to listen to Lindsey's views on marriage at a luncheon last week.

The clergymen heard the Lindsey address over Bishop Manning's objection.

SURGEONS ELECT ANGELENO

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 6. (AP)—Dr. Clarence G. Toland Los Angeles, today was elected president of the Western Surgical Association, holding its fortieth annual convention here. He succeeds Dr. Carl E. Black, Jacksonville, Ill.

WHIP REVIVED FOR HOLD-UPS

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Increased use of pistols in robberies here has brought about a resurrection of an old English custom, the whipping post.

The robbery of a railroad ticket office in which three youths, using empty pistols, stole about $500 was a "cause celebre" in the English press.

Following sentence of the culprits to imprisonment at hard labor, the court ordered "twenty lashes" for each of the trio.

OIL MAN OFFERS PRIZE FOR TERRACING

WEWOKA (Okla.) Dec. 6. (AP)—To encourage terracing to prevent soil erosion, Dr. W. E. Grisso, oil man and landowner, has offered $1000 in prizes for a terracing contest in Seminole county.

VIGILANTES FOIL RACKETEER RING

Oklahoma Oil Capital Uses Effective Crime Curb

TULSA (Okla.) Dec. 6. (AP)—This oil capital has devised a new kind of vigilante system to cope with racketeers attracted here by hopes of easy money.

A force of 250 citizen-detectives, most of them business and professional men, has been enlisted by Chief of Police Marrs to aid in suppression of crime.

Already the citizen-deputies have been active in thwarting designs of a ring of blackmailers on several of Tulsa's oil-enriched families. Movements of suspected members of the ring, who asked sums ranging from $3000 to $10,000 as security that children of the families would not be kidnaped, were traced daily by the citizens' force and apparently the gang was frightened into abandoning attempts at extortion.

CONCESSIONS GRANTED

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6. (AP)—A British petroleum company has been granted a concession to build a pipe line from Southern Mexico oil fields to Mexico City.

MURDER TRIAL ENDS ABRUPTLY

Denver Woman's Defense Cut Short by Attorney

Court Declines to Permit Her Unsworn Testimony

Case to Reach Jury's Hands Tomorrow Morning

DENVER, Dec. 6. (AP)—A jury will decide Monday morning whether Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin is guilty of the murder of her 10-year-old stepdaughter, Leona.

The contemplated two-day defense of the 31-year-old defendant lasted only a few hours after the State had rested this morning.

John M. Keating's announcement as chief counsel, "the defense rests," came as a distinct surprise in the crowded courtroom. Mrs. O'Loughlin's counsel then addressed Judge Henley A. Calvert:

DEFENSE OVERRULED

"With the court's permission," said Mr. Keating, "we would like to ask at this time we be permitted to place Mrs. O'Loughlin on the stand without being sworn, with the stipulation the State not be allowed to cross-examine her."

Keating argued the privilege of taking the stand without being subjected to cross-examination is "a common law right," accorded the defendant.

The jury was excluded from the courtroom and arguments offered by both sides. The court then ruled Mrs. O'Loughlin could not take the stand under the prescribed limitations of the defense.

The court offered, however, to permit the defense to reopen its case. This offer Keating refused.

EXPERT TESTIMONY

The court overruled the motion for an instructed verdict and asked both sides to submit instructions they wished given to the jury and recessed until Monday morning.

Decision of the defense to rest its case followed an afternoon of expert testimony by Dr. William A. Waldeschmidt, a member of the faculty of the Colorado School of Mines, who said on examining microscopic slides made of the stomach of the slain child that "foreign particles shown on the slide are not glass."

The State had built up an elaborate case on findings of its own experts that particles of glass were taken from Leona's stomach and from the stomach of her father, Leo O'Loughlin, Denver detective.

LEVINE BLAMES AMBITION

Cleared of Counterfeiting Charges, He Declares World Flight Plans Cause of Troubles

VIENNA (Austria) Dec. 6. (AP)—Charles A. Levine, who today was cleared of a charge of conspiracy to counterfeit French coins, told the Associated Press it was a plan to fly around the world alone in fifteen days which got him into trouble.

The man, whose most spectacular solo flight thus far was that across the English Channel from Paris to Croydon a couple of years ago, apparently has no doubt of his ability to pilot a plane around the world single-handed.

"I was full of this plan when I reached Vienna last August," he said, "and I had been looking up equipment concerns for a gyroscope and other instruments useful to a flyer traveling alone and likely to fall asleep at the controls."

"This business took me to Paris, and, while I was there, I got the bright idea of making little medals with my head stamped on one side and on the other a globe with a plane flying around it. I was going to distribute these as I went around the world.

"The details I proposed to work out later, but the very morning after this idea struck me I went to an engraver. I had found the name of one in the telephone directory, and that was the fellow I went to."

Before Levine opened up with this story he had told the Associated Press the whole thing was syndicated and he couldn't say a word. After some persuasion, however, he consented to tell it all.

Woman's Death Stirs Charges

BERKELEY, Dec. 6. (Exclusive) Discovery by the District Attorney's office that Mrs. Ora Griffin, 49 years of age, a cancer sufferer from Alhambra, has succumbed to the disease, today opened a possibility of manslaughter charges against the operators of the Bohannon Cancer Institute of Berkeley.

Mrs. Griffin, one of the patients whose treatment caused a raid on the institute, operated by Grover C. Bohannon, with Dr. A. Dion Crew as resident physician, at the time of the raid told of Bohannon himself performing a crude operation on her with a pair of surgeon's scissors.

MRS. SHEDD SHEDS MATE

RENO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Mrs. Mabel H. Shedd was granted a divorce here today from Harrison P. Shedd, said to be a junior partner in Marshall Field & Co. The suit was dismissed of in less than ten minutes. The grounds for the divorce were desertion.

LONG SOVIET PLOT TRIAL CONCLUDED

Eight Prisoners Await Sentences of Court Due to Be Given Today

MOSCOW, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eight engineers, confessed plotters for foreign intervention in Russia and the overthrow of the soviet union, tonight awaited the sentences of the Supreme Court which will mean to them either death or imprisonment.

After a brief session of the court today during which the last two of the defendants, Sergei Kuprianov and Xenophon Sitnin, pleaded for life in order they might "work for the upbuilding of the country," the judges retired to deliberate on the sentences which will be pronounced probably at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. The trial has lasted since November 25, last.

Prosecutor Krilenko in a long closing argument demanded the death penalty for all eight defendants, but it was generally expected mercy would be shown some of them who, perhaps, would be sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, the usual soviet maximum.

Indiana Team Outplows Best

MULBERRY (Ind.) Dec. 6. (AP)—Winning 91 points out of a possible 100, Cleveland Combs, farmer of Mulberry, Ind., drove his nine-horse plow team to the championship in a national big-hitch contest here.

While 3500 spectators applauded his cool precision, Combs piloted his powerful team, hitched three abreast to a heavy gang plow, with no more effort and for no less effective plowing than if he were breaking land with a two-horse walking plow.

The award was based on the time required to plow one and one-half acres, horsemanship and the quality of the work.

SHEPARD DEATH PLOT DEPICTED

Federal Trial of Army Post Scandal Under Way

Prosecutor Declares Major Planned Wife's End

Love Notes to Stenographer Will Be Featured

KANSAS CITY (Kan.) Dec. 6. (AP) A picture of Maj. Charles A. Shepard as plotting the death of his wife that he might marry 22-year-old Grace Brandon of San Antonio, Tex., was spread before a Federal court jury today as S. M. Brewster, United States District Attorney, outlined the government's case in the murder trial of the army medical officer.

In contrast, Harry S. Class of defense counsel, depicted the 59-year-old tuberculosis specialist as a kind and affectionate husband, worried over his wife's addiction to liquor, disappointed in his home life and naturally becoming attracted to the pretty Brooks Field stenographer during his short period on duty at the Texas post, taking a course in flight surgery.

LETTERS PROMISED

Testimony began after a noon recess, but only four witnesses were heard, including Maj.-Gen. M. W. Ireland, surgeon-general of the Medical Corps of the United States Army. Adjournment was taken until Monday because the government asked time to assemble an array of medical testimony it next wished to present.

The chief prosecution counsel, whose statements several times brought objections from the defense because of what they termed argumentative and impassioned expressions, told the jury the government will introduce ardent love letters from the major to Miss Brandon as part of its case. One of these letters, Brewster stated, was written three hours after the death of Mrs. Zenana Shepard at Fort Riley June 15, 1929, and reban: "My darling sweetheart."

CALLS ACTS NATURAL

Summing up his statement of more than an hour, Mr. Class contended the government could prove things about Maj. Shepard. Mr. Class placed great stress upon what he termed the major's "natural" actions before and after his wife's death, and in his relations with Miss Brandon.

Opening statements began after the completion of a three-day attempt to get a jury.

MEXICO TAKES TO SAFE ROAD

Southern Republic Outlines Plans in World Crisis

Agriculture and Industry to Get Government Help

Program Calls for Relaxing of Radical Legislation

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6. (AP)—Mexico has set about solving her share of the world economic crisis by reduced government expenditures for 1931 and projected legislation to improve conditions in the agricultural and industrial fields.

Facing a situation that officials have admitted is serious the government has mapped out an impressive program which it hopes will encourage manufacture and increase the production of prime foods.

It also has lopped off an average of 10 per cent from the departmental budgets. These savings will be used as payments on the foreign and domestic debts, thus improving Mexico's credit rating and at the same time reducing the nation's financial burden.

The agrarian and labor reforms, principal planks in the revolutionary platform and at the same time among the main causes of the present state of unemployment and poverty, are to lose their radical wrinkles if President Ortiz Rubio's plans bear fruit.

LANDOWNERS' GUARANTEE

He himself sent to Congress a bill which would give large landowners guarantees against expropriation of their property for distribution to peasants, and he is behind a movement to define the obligations of the employer toward his help in reasonable terms.

Due largely to the fact that after planting they are likely to lose important portions of their land, owners of big haciendas have been reluctant to till the soil on an extensive scale. This has caused a decrease in food crops and consequently an increase in the importation of foodstuffs.

And owing to the exaggerated demands made by employees, often amounting to impossible terms, industrialists have found themselves in a hard way and many prospective investments have been withheld.

These are the conditions which the government is seeking to correct in 1931. Mexico's leaders hope to inspire confidence among investors and persuade landowners that they may till their acres without fear of losing part of them.

The Mexican revolution was accomplished chiefly by peasants and workers, and revolutionary governments, to remain in power, have had to cater to the demands of these classes, with the result that in twenty years of frequent turnovers, labor and agricultural legislation went from the capitalist to the proletariat extreme.

ROAD TO STABILITY

Now Ortiz Rubio believes that the people, impressed by the hardships of the moment, have been brought to an understanding of the need for back tracking on some of the reforms. For revolutionary Mexico, this stand is ultra-conservative. If it succeeds it may be said that Mexico has passed through its pink era and is safely on the road to stability.

But only by meeting its foreign obligations can Mexico balance its budget. So despite domestic depression President Ortiz Rubio made arrangements for payment on the debts in 1931. He pointed out that so long as the debts went unpaid, prosperity at home would be a mere sham, with the ever-waiting creditors casting their shadows over the country.

Therefore, the reductions in the budget will go to meet payments on the debt, but this will be reviving foreign credit and ridding Mexico of a bothersome burden.

AUSTRALIAN UNIT LOSES ON RANCHES

Queensland Experiment in Socialism Proves to be Costly

BRISBANE (Australia) Dec. 6. (AP) The State of Queensland has disposed of public ownership cattle ranches at a huge loss, completing a disastrous experiment in Socialism.

Believing that profits of cattlemen were too high and that the public paid too dearly for its meat, the State government, when the Labor party was in power a few years ago, purchased a number of splendid ranches. These were managed by government officials with the aid of young men whose knowledge of ranching had been acquired at agricultural colleges.

In theory the ranches should have been remarkable scientific successes and the public should have obtained much cheaper meat. In practice they failed and meat was dearer.

SIX NEW YORK OFFICERS OUT

Additional Policemen Named in Vice Ring Charges

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (AP)—While an Appellate inquiry into city magistrates courts continued in secret today six more policemen were suspended on charges that they acted with a "vice ring" to extort money from arrested women.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney announced that the six suspensions, which followed eight last Thursday, resulted from testimony by "Chile" Acuna, ex-police informer, that twenty-eight members of the police department had paid him to trap women on trumped-up vice charges. Testimony involving other fourteen of the twenty-eight, Mulrooney said, was under examination.

Trial of the suspended policemen on departmental charges will begin Monday.

NAVY BUILDING TO BE STUDIED

[illegible] Will Confer With [illegible] Tomorrow

[illegible] To Be Discussed in Secret Meeting

[illegible] Allowed Under Treaty Sought

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Additional plans for building the navy to the London naval treaty limitations are to be discussed Monday by Secretary Adams before the House Naval Committee.

Shortly after being summoned by Chairman Britten along with other naval chiefs, Secretary Adams went to the Senate Naval Committee room to request legislation authorizing modernization of the battleships New Mexico, Mississippi and Idaho, among other proposals for construction.

Secretary Adams and Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, will discuss the plans behind closed doors.

The modernization recommended to the Senate committee would cost $30,000,000.

Although Secretary Adams did not specify what vessels he desires to construct, the Navy has under way plans for several new destroyers, submarines, an aircraft carrier and one experimental six-inch cruiser with a flying deck. The destroyers and submarines would replace aged craft of the same type now in commission.

The Naval Secretary asked for experimental power plants for submarines, many of those in use being unsatisfactory. He urged action on legislation to accept free sites for a dirigible base either at Sunnyvale or Camp Kearney, California.

Legislation affecting protection of naval petroleum reserves, increase in pay for personnel, disposition of surplus graduates from the Naval Academy, erection of emergency radio stations, regulation of promotion, distribution, and dropping of officer personnel and relief of personnel who have suffered loss through service also was proposed.

LEGION ASKS LARGER NAVY

Fleet of Full Treaty Strength and Increase in Army Officers Urged on Hoover

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—The national defense committee of the American Legion presented to President Hoover today recommendations for national defense, the most important of which was strengthening of the Navy to the point authorized by the London treaty.

Increase of regular army officers from 12,000 to 12,300, those added to be allotted to the Army Air Corps, was advocated.

The committee proposed the National Guard be given a strength of 210,500 and sufficient appropriations to train 26,000 reserve officers and 40,000 citizen military training camp trainees.

The committee reported the Legion opposed the bill introduced by Representative Williamson of South Dakota for a single department of national defense.

NAVY AIRCRAFT RULE EXTENDED

New Policy Puts Coast Air Forces Under Admirals

Combat Planes Would All Be Controlled by Fleet

More Results From Protests of Army Commanded

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—A new aviation policy has been worked out by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, which may have an important bearing on final settlement of the eleven-year-old controversy between the Army and Navy over which branch of the service should be charged with the responsibility of guarding the country's coast line from the air. Under the new plan only part of which has gone into effect, all combat aircraft, whether at sea or on land, will be under command of the battle and scouting forces afloat. Thus the naval air stations at Coco Solo, Panama, and at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, will be controlled henceforth by admirals in the battle and scouting forces, rather than by commanders of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth naval districts.

EFFECT OF ORDER

The effect of this order is to concentrate the command of combat aviation to the fleet and to relieve the Navy in part, at least, from the criticism that it operates combat aviation from the land, as charged by the Army.

The Army-Navy row over coastal defense functions centers largely around the question over whether the Navy should be permitted to operate tactical aircraft, that is, airplanes used in actual combat or fighting, from the land.

HOOVER TAKES HAND

The Navy claimed the right to operate such planes from Coco Solo and Pearl Harbor, asserting that these were outlying coast lines. The Army argued that the Navy should confine its aviation to the sea and leave all land-based planes under Army control. In other words, the Navy has been encroaching on what the Army considers its preserves and the Army has been trying to push them back into the sea.

In an effort to settle the dispute which has proved a source of irritation to the White House and a clog to efficient defense, President Hoover directed the Bureau of Efficiency some months ago to study the whole situation, determine if duplication and waste of effort existed and submit recommendations. This report is due this coming week.

AUTOMOBILE DEATHS HIT NEW MARK

Accidents in California Account for 1885 Lives in Ten Months' Period

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6.—Automobile accidents cost the lives of 1885 persons in California during the first ten months of 1930, as compared to 1798 killed in the same period last year, according to figures made public here by Victor Killick, statistician of the State Division of Motor Vehicles.

In October 211 deaths resulted from motor accidents, the same number that occurred in October, 1929.

There were 25,000 automobile accidents reported in the ten months' period with 33,401 persons injured, as compared to 21,536 accidents that injured 28,439 persons in the same period last year.

Servant Supply Shy in Chicago

CHICAGO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Paradoxical as it may seem, Chicago and surrounding cities still face the servant problem despite general employment conditions, it was said today by John Keane, general superintendent of the Illinois free employment service.

His assertion is based on a report from Mrs. Lilla H. Walter, director of the activities of the women's department of the service, who said she has been "swamped with calls for domestic workers" and has been unable to supply the demand. She reported about 1200 orders for servants have been received in the last two months.

Bay City Road Pact Drawn Up

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—An agreement under which the city and county of San Francisco would maintain roads and trails in the Hetch-Hetchy area equal to the extent of park service roads will be submitted to Director Albright of the National Park Service Monday by City Attorney O'Toole of San Francisco.

Pending acceptance by the director of the agreement, drawn under the terms of the Raker Act, details are withheld.

AMENDMENT PROPOSED ON ABSENT VOTER ACT

SACRAMENTO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Assemblyman H. E. Dillinger of Placerville, told the Associated Press today he planned introducing a bill in the coming session of Legislature amending the absent voters act so as to eliminate some of the "obviously bad features of the present law."

Commenting on the law and his proposed changes, the Assemblyman said:

"First, under the present law only a few may avail themselves of it and they are not clearly defined.

"Second, the absent voters are tallied separately and usually being very few it is often quite easy to identify a voter's ballot. Thus the secrecy of his ballot is destroyed. As result of that a person might hesitate to vote.

"Third, the absent voters' ballots are not canvassed for some fifteen days. As a result the election of even a President might remain undecided for that length of time."

BANDIT VICTIMS REACH PEIPING

American Woman Describes Ordeal in China

Captured and Rescued in Pitched Battles

Make Forty-Day Journey From Interior

(Copyright, 1930, by New York Times)

PEIPING, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—A stirring account of their captivity by Mongolian bandits was given today by Mrs. Helen Hayward, American missionary, and Miss Emily Gomersale, her British nurse, who on Saturday completed a forty-day adventurous journey from Lancho, on rafts, boats, oxcarts and camels.

"A few days' journey from Pao, with a party of wealthy Chinese bearing gold and furs, and accompanied by a Mongolian escort, we were suddenly attacked by a band of brigands," they said. "In a pitched battle, with heavy shooting, our Mongol guard was overpowered and retreated.

"The brigands, who were on horseback, grabbed our sleeves and dragged us along, separating us from the rest of the party, evidently with the intention of holding us for ransom. Everybody was robbed of everything he had, including overcoats.

"The Mongols returned for another battle and we were rescued and carried into the mountains. There we remained for eight bitterly cold days, eating only millet.

"During all that time the bandits encircled our camp completely, and although the provincial authorities had 4000 troops, nothing was done to effect our rescue until a legation party arrived and insisted that we be aided."

The two women came through the experience in good condition.

BANDITS AGREE TO REDUCE RANSOM

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6. (AP)—American Consul-General Frank P. Lockhart of Hankow, reported to the State Department today that bandits holding Rev. Bert N. Nelson of Minneapolis, and Rev. K. N. Tvedt, a Norwegian, had agreed to a reduction in ransom.

The Consul said he had received a letter from the missionaries dated November 30, last, stating the captors had agreed to accept about $800 in cash or $1200 in medicines.

BANKER'S DAUGHTER SEIZED

Girl Released in Chicago by Gangsters After Being Held as Hostage on Wild Ride

CHICAGO, Dec. 6. (AP)—A thrilling tale of a frustrated bank robbery, kidnaping and a night ride with desperadoes came today from the lips of the 19-year-old daughter of an Indiana banker.

Before she returned to Stockwell, Ind., with her father, overjoyed to find his daughter unharmed, Miss Helen Louise Hamilton related to policemen and reporters how she was kidnaped from her home, held hostage to assure the escape of a gang of would-be robbers, and released in Chicago.

The men were described by the girl as "Chicago gangsters." "I think they said they worked for Mr. Capone," she said.

They went to the Hamilton home in Stockwell last night, she said, and bound up the adults of the family, including her father, Oscar Hamilton, cashier of the Stockwell State Bank.

Upon her return from a "date" the men tied her up, Miss Hamilton said, but about that time they discovered her 15-year-old sister, Mary, had escaped by sliding down a drain pipe.

Fearing (and correctly so) the younger girl had gone to summon help, the men discarded their plans for looting the bank, grabbed her because "no one would shoot while the girl was in the car" and drove away.

The wild ride through the night at a rate which the girl described as "just as fast as the car could go," followed.

"The men didn't say much on the trip," said Miss Hamilton. "They talked mostly in generalities and boasted about having "got $67,000 the other day from the Frankfort (Ind.) State Bank. I think another car followed us, but I couldn't be sure.

"When we got into Chicago they kept a sharp lookout and didn't go fast. They warned me not to make any noise and to sit still. Finally they let me out on a street-car line, told me how to get to the police station, gave me 15 cents for carfare and drove off."

There were three men in the car in which she rode, but she did not know how many others were in the gang. All the men she saw had pistols, while there was a weapon that looked to her like a machine gun in the car.

The banker took his daughter home this afternoon.

RUSSIA ALOOF ON ARMS SLASH

Reds Refuse to Sign League Disarmament Report

'Program Inadequate,' Given as Soviet Reason

Loudon Inquires Why They Can't Do as Others

GENEVA, Dec. 6. (AP)—Soviet Russia today refused to participate in the report which the preparatory disarmament commission will submit to the League of Nations along with a draft convention for a future general disarmament conference.

Anatole Lunacharsky, the soviet delegate, labeled the draft convention as "both inadequate and sterile," demanded the right to have all the soviet reservations appended in a separate document and asked that all reference to Russia's views be stricken from the report itself.

He added that as a nonmember of the League the soviet government wished to have nothing to do with a report which it considers strictly negative.

Dr. J. J. Loudon, chairman of the commission, inquired why the Russians require different treatment from other members of the commission, both members and nonmembers of the League. He asserted that it will be impossible to attach the soviet reservations in a separate document.

DIXIE EDUCATOR DIES

ATLANTA, Dec. 6. (AP)—Peter Allman Downey, 81 years of age, educator and lecturer, died today.

WOMAN SOUGHT IN MURDER CASE

Blond Linked to Slaying of Jewelry Salesman

Victim's Bound and Gagged Body in Hotel Room

Compact and Cigarette Tips Hint Female Lure

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 6. (AP)—Police tonight are looking for Jean Doyle, 29-year-old blond, in connection with the slaying and robbery in a hotel here early this morning of Sam Frank, 65, a jewelry auctioneer of Memphis. Jewels and money to the value of about $5000 were taken.

Frank's unclad body, with mouth gagged and hands tied, was found in his hotel room this morning by a chambermaid. A broken liquor bottle with which his skull had been fractured, a partly filled liquor glass, an empty drug vial and a woman's beauty compact told the police a story of a drinking party there last night. Numerous cigarette butts stained with lipstick added to their clew.

A woman's voice and laughter issuing from Frank's room shortly before midnight deterred his partner, Martin Perel, from entering when he returned to the hotel last night after attending a wrestling match to which Frank had declined an invitation.

The woman being sought was declared to have checked out of another hotel about 9 a.m., today, after having sent a taxicab driver for her effects. Police were told she had been with Frank earlier in the day.

The loot included a diamond ring, a diamond stick pin and $600 in currency and drafts.

Frank is said to leave a widow in Memphis, two children and several grandchildren. He had been in the auction business for thirty years.

Ohio Student Trio Drowned

FINDLAY (O.) Dec. 6. (AP)—The bodies of three high school students were recovered tonight from the ice-locked waters of the old city reservoir in suburban Riverside Park.

The victims are David Davis, 16 years of age; Glen Love, 17, and Don Whities, 16. A holiday lark led them across the partially frozen surface of the reservoir and the ice broke.

A fourth member of the party, Cloe Edgington, 16, escaped and summoned aid. Efforts to revive the three were futile.

Los Angeles Fugitive Found

SALINAS, Dec. 6. (AP)—A seven-year search for Roque M. Gallegos, charged with killing Ramon Reyes in Los Angeles, ended in his restaurant, La Fame, here today.

Chief of Police Griffin said Gallegos admitted shooting Reyes, but said he did so in self-defense.

How I Licked Wretched Old Age at 63

"I Quit Getting Up Nights . . . Banished Foot and Leg Pains . . . Got Rid of Rheumatic Pains and Constipation . . . Improved Embarrassing Health Faults . . . Found New Strength."

"At 61 I thought I was through. I blamed old age, but it never occurred to me to actually fight back. I was only half-living, getting up nights . . . embarrassed in my own home . . . constipated . . . constantly tormented by pains and aches. At 62 my condition became almost intolerable. I had about given up hope when a doctor recommended your treatment. Then at 63, it seemed that I shook off 20 years almost over night."

FORTY — The Danger Age

These are the facts, just as I learned them. In 65% of all men, the vital prostate gland shows up soon after 40. No pain is experienced, but as this distressing condition continues, sciatica, backache, severe bladder weakness, constipation, etc., often develop.

PROSTATE TROUBLE

These are frequently the signs of prostate trouble. Now thousands suffer these handicaps needlessly! For a prominent American Scientist, after seven years of research, discovered a new, safe way to stimulate the prostate gland to normal health and activity in many cases. This new hygiene is worthy to be called a notable achievement of the age.

A NATIONAL INSTITUTION FOR MEN PAST 40

Its success has been startling, its growth rapid. This new hygiene is rapidly gaining in national prominence. The institution in Steubenville, O., has now reached large proportions. Scores and even hundreds of letters pour in every day, and in many cases, reported results have been little short of amazing. In case after case, men have reported that they have felt ten years younger in seven days. Now physicians in every part of the country are using and recommending this treatment.

Quick as is the response to this new hygiene, it is actually a pleasant, natural relaxation, involving no drugs, medicine, or electric rays whatever. The scientist explains this discovery and tells why many men are old at forty in a new book now sent free in 24-page, illustrated form. Every man past forty should know the true meaning of those frank facts. No cost or obligation is incurred. This book is entirely free. You should call, if possible, in person for your copy. If impossible to call, mail the coupon immediately, as the edition is limited.

INDIAN PRINCES PREFER AUTOS TO ELEPHANTS

JODHPUR (Rajputana, India) Dec. 6. (AP)—Elephant transport, slow but sure, survives in the rough country of Central India and Rajputana, but is gradually being discarded by Indian princes and merchants for the faster automobile.

On the great estates of the maharajas the elephant carriages are retained for state occasions, when the animal plays a leading role in the display of Indian pageantry.

From ten to thirty elephants are used at festivities of this kind, especially when a local potentate celebrates a birthday. The beasts are gorgeously outfitted for such occasions, and painted. Their trunks, ears and tails are covered with red, yellow and green flowers and their foreheads are daubed with gilt to match the decorative coats of the howdahs and the trappings of the carriages.

TWO SIOUX CITY BANKS CLOSED

Total Deposits Involved About $12,000,000

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) Dec. 6. (AP) Notices were posted on the doors of the Sioux National Bank and the First National Bank, the two oldest financial institutions here, that they had been closed by unanimous vote of the directors late today.

The notices were posted about two hours after the banks closed for the day. Large crowds collected around both institutions, which were not affiliated.

The First National Bank, capitalized at $1,000,000, is headed by J. L. Mitchell. It was established in 1870. John A. Magoun is president of the Sioux National Bank, which has a capital of $400,000 and was founded in 1890.

Deposits in the First National Bank total more than $7,000,000 and in the Sioux National more than $5,000,000.

director of agricultural extension in the University of California.

At the present time, he says, the California Cotton Co-operative Association with headquarters at Delano is in process of reorganization.

C. O. Moser, vice-president of the American Cotton Co-operative Association, is in California to serve as organization campaign director with John H. Caufield as assistant director. J. W. Guiberson, cotton grower of Corcoran, Kings county, is chairman of the State organization committee.

The announced purposes of co-operation are in brief: To sell cotton in an orderly manner at time and place that offer most profit to growers; to hold cotton off the market when there is temporary surplus; to adjust the amount of cotton grown; to improve quality; to do everything that will lower cost of production.

The selling plan provides two pools—the seasonal pool and the optional pool. All cotton delivered to the California association is to be sold by the American Cotton Co-operative.

Barthou Encabeza el Consejo de Ministros

PARIS, Diciembre 6.—Un radical encabeza el nuevo gabinete integrado para suceder al del primer ministro saliente André Tardieu. Es Louis Barthou, miembro de la Unión Democrática y Radical, quien ha aceptado hoy la invitación del presidente Doumergue de organizar nuevo gobierno que reemplace al que dimitió con su jefe Tardieu.

Barthou ha sido miembro de nueve consejos de ministros, y en 1913 fue presidente de uno. Dos veces ha sido vicepresidente.

Los Yanquis se Incorporan a la Exposición Colonial de Paris

PARIS, Diciembre 6.—Se ha abierto una nueva oficina en la embajada yanqui de esta ciudad. La preside en su escritorio el señor C. Bascom Slemp, secretario que fue del presidente Coolidge. He venido a Francia como delegado general de los Estados Unidos a la Exposición Colonial Internacional Francesa, que va a inaugurarse en Mayo próximo.

Asistido de Charles Henry Burke, que tiene el titulo de delegado, el señor Slemp está determinando la clase de representación que han de tener los Estados Unidos en la exposición, y preparando los planos de un edificio en que se exhiban los efectos que se envíen.

Los objetos que expongan los Estados Unidos se compondrán de los que manden las empresas particulares y de los que oficialmente envíe el gobierno yanqui para hacer ver lo que están haciendo sus colonias. Tomarán parte importante entre éstas las Islas Filipinas, y figurarán asimismo Hawaii, Alaska, Guam, Puerto Rico y las Islas Vírgenes. La exhibición comprenderá todos los artículos relacionados con la colonización.

Seis países tendrán pabellones en el Parque de Vincennes, cerca de París donde va a radicarse la exposición: Italia, Portugal, Bélgica, Dinamarca, Holanda y los Estados Unidos. Muchos otros países tendran parte en la "Ciudad Informativa", donde podrán obtenerse toda clase de datos sobre colonización. Allí estará representada la Gran Bretaña.

Rápidamente se están construyendo los edificios franceses del parque; algunos de ellos serán facsímiles de templos y estructuras exóticas que se encuentran en las colonias asiáticas de Francia.

Una Cirujana Pone en Duda la Teoria de Darwin

NUEVA YORK, Diciembre 6.—De labios de una frágil rusita viene la declaración, dirigida a los sabios norteamericanos, de que se incorrecta la teoría darwiniana de la "supervivencia del más apto".

Hablamos de la señora Nadine Zavadsky, que estudió para cirujana en Petrograd antes de la guerra, y que se halla hoy desterrada de su tierra natal.

Es la señora Zavadsky colaboradora de la señora Curie en el Instituto del Radio en París, donde, desde 1927, ha venido estudiando biología, y ha aplicado el radio y los rayos X al tratamiento del cáncer. Actualmente visita a los hombres de ciencia de los Estados Unidos y sus laboratorios, y comunica a los primeros el resultado de sus investigaciones.

Pasó muchos años la señora Zavadsky auxiliando a los soldados rusos en la guerra mundial, y luego prestó servicios a las tropas rusas blancas que combatieron contra los bolcheviques. Desbandadas esas tropas, dejó la cirugía para dedicarse a estudiar los efectos de la radiación.

Sus experimentos la han conducido a estar en desacuerdo con la teoría de Darwin. Dice que la naturaleza crea espontáneamente un individuo de especie enteramente nueva, sin experimentos ni tanteos. Darwin creía que la naturaleza experimentaba con varios cambios en las criaturas vivientes y escogía luego la forma más adecuada para la lucho por la vida como base de la nueva especie.

La señora Zavadsky ha provocado modificaciones en las células reproductoras de los ratones, mediante irradiaciones de rayos X; pero esos cambios no produjeron especies nuevas en las generaciones subsecuentes.

Esto indica que la naturaleza es extremadamente conservadora, dice la sabia, y que las fuerzas exteriores son incapaces de influir en la formación de las especies, contrariamente a lo afirmado por el gran Darwin.

Centenares de Personas Arrestadas en una Bacanal

En el "raid," quizá de mayor sensación, que ha practicado la policía de Los Angeles, han sido arrestadas la madrugada de ayer cerca de 400 personas por faltas a la moral. 150 guardias disolvieron una escandalosa tertulia de hombres solos, que se celebraba en el piso décimocuarto del Edificio Guardamuebles de Hollywood, sito en el 1025 de la avenida de Highland Norte. Todos los aprehendidos, salvo cuatro, son hombres.

El "raid" resultó de un soplo que dieron a unos guardias de la brigada del vició. Cuatro detectives, vestidos de smoking fueron despachados a tomar datos. Llegaron temprano a la fiesta y se mezclaron con los demás asistentes, que pagaban $1 por entrar. El festival había sido anunciado como "smoker a beneficio de una hermandad", y desde muy temprano comenzó a cobrar todas las fases de una orgia, según reza el parte policíaco.

Pero no fue sino hasta ya cercana la media noche cuando los guardias de la brigada del vicio se convencieron de que la cosa había alcanzado serias proporciónes, pues se presentaron cuatro muchachas a desempeñar un número verdaderamente indecente. Para colmar la medida, según declaran los policías, vino otro baile en que las mismas actuantes se aparecieron sin más vestido que su sonrisa. En tal momento, los detectives se abalanzaron hacia las salidas del salón y anunciaron que todos los concurrentes quedaban arrestados.

RAMON NOVARRO es estrella y director del bellísimo romance en castellano "Sevilla de mis amores" representándose hoy en el Teatro California.—[Advertisement.

Whenever a new product . . . be it song, play, motor car or washing machine . . . hits the bulls-eye of public approval . . . imitators spring up over night.

You hear countless imitators of Amos 'n' Andy over the radio . . . on the stage mammy singers imitating Al Jolson . . . but still imitators . . . and imitation is the sincerest flattery.

While there are green washers . . . round washers . . . some good-looking and others not so good-looking . . . they are imitators of the Thor . . . but imitators in outward appearance only. They lack the Thor trade-mark . . . one of the greatest names in the household appliance field. They lack the matchless value due to the manufacturing genius and experience in building washers for a quarter of a century.

Thor is the oldest and largest manufacturer of electric washers and ironers . . . the first to build a self-contained electric washer.

Thor has always been noted for the high quality of its product and its life-time service . . . many of the first washers built 25 years ago are still giving good service.

Airport Built in Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM (Ala.) Dec. 6. (AP) Birmingham's $1,000,000 airport is to be ready for service before Christmas.

Grading of the 330-acre field practically is completed, and the drainage system is nearing completion. The administration building and hangar, of brick and steel construction, have been designed to meet requirements of the Department of Commerce.

A $1,000,000 bond issue for the field was approved by the voters last February. The airport is about fifteen minutes from the heart of the city.

CHICAGO BANDITS GET BANK'S $40,000 ROLL

CHICAGO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Five robbers obtained between $40,000 and $50,000 in a hold-up of the State Bank of Clearing, on the Southwest Side, today. The quintet forced twenty-five bank customers and employees into the basement. The money was taken from vaults where it had been placed today preparatory to cashing pay checks.

TRAPPER SOLVES UNEMPLOYMENT

SANTA CRUZ, Dec. 6. (AP)—William E. Gale, 20 years of age, of Santa Cruz, has solved the unemployment problem for himself.

Instead of spending his time seeking a job Gale has laid out a fur trap line 100 miles long, no part of which is more than a few miles from the city limits. He has 125 traps, and makes his rounds on a motorcycle.

In its first week the line yielded four coyotes, one mink, two raccoons, several opossums and six skunks.

RICHFIELD OIL EARNINGS DROP

Nine Months' Net Profits Set at $58,076

Loss of $302,532 Shown in September Quarter

Curtailment of Production Lowers Income

Richfield Oil Company of California for the nine months ended September 30, last, reported final net profits after all charges of $58,076.06 in a statement released yesterday by J. A. Talbot, chairman of the board. Before providing for depletion, depreciation, intangible drilling expense, abandonments, interest and Federal income taxes, the company earned $7,285,904.56.

For the quarter ended September 30, last, the company earned $1,940,279.80 before charges and after providing for all charges, the consolidated operations of the company resulted in a net loss of $302,-531.77 for the three months.

In the first nine months of 1929 the company showed net profits of $8,472,340.05 after all charges and Federal taxes, equal after preferred dividends to $3.05 a share on 1,947,-000 common shares, while the September-quarter profits last year were $2,225,943.47, or $1.05 a share on the common stock.

The company now has outstanding 399,500 shares of $25 par 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and 2,670,882 shares of common stock.

OUTPUT CURTAILED

Regarding the operations of the company, the report stated that as a result of the voluntary production curtailment program that has existed during the nine months in California, Richfield has been obliged to close in 45 per cent of its own production and to purchase at the posted market price approximately 70 per cent of its crude requirements, producing only the remaining 30 per cent.

At the first of the year the average price paid by the company for its purchased crude oil was $1.06 a barrel and the average price at present is $1.36 a barrel, representing 30 cents per barrel or nearly 30 per cent increase in the cost of the company's crude oil purchases. This increase was brought about by the gradual advance of posted prices for crude oil and because of the terms of the company's crude-oil purchase contracts, it was unable to correct this situation until October, when it gave cancellation notices on purchase contracts aggregating 25,000 barrels per day of crude oil.

EARNINGS TO GAIN

The purchases thus canceled amount to approximately $1,000,000 per month, the cancellations becoming effective from March 1 to June 1 of 1931. It is planned to replace these purchases by company production and this change will increase the earnings approximately $750,000 a month, according to the report.

The company now has a domestic distribution in the United States in excess of 400,000,000 gallons of gasoline per year. In spite of the unsatisfactory prices which prevailed on the Atlantic Coast during the first nine months of the year, the company is netting back more per gallon for its gasoline sold through the eastern company than it could secure by selling offshore in cargo lots, the report stated, adding that it is expected the price situation on the Atlantic Coast will be adjusted early in 1931.

Richfield production is expected to reach 50,000 barrels per day about the middle of 1931, the report stated, after pointing out that the largest monthly earnings in the company's history were slightly more than $1,000,000 in December, 1929, at which time the company was producing approximately 50,-000 barrels per day of its requirements.

Credits Hold in Local Area

While sales of the larger downtown stores have not been as large as in 1929 collections have been in very good shape, especially during October, and seasonal buying has increased during the past four days, according to the weekly summary of business in Los Angeles, issued yesterday by Bradstreet's.

Although radio sales fell off materially during October, small-set manufacturers here report that their sales throughout the country are holding up well with factories working practically at capacity. Women's wear, a most important drawing industry in Los Angeles, is still between seasons, most of the manufacturers preparing for spring delivery, the summary stated.

SALES REPORTED OF NEW TYPE CADILLAC

DETROIT, Dec. 6. — Cadillac Motor Car Company delivered at retail 5010 Cadillac V-16's in the nine months to the 1st inst. The V-16 was introduced at the New York show last January, but deliveries were not started until March 1, last. Records reveal that the majority of sales were made in metropolitan areas, but distribution in smaller communities, however, was stated as "surprisingly large."

INVESTMENT TRUST TO PAY EXTRA DIVIDEND

Corporate Trust Shares will distribute an extra cash dividend of at least 6 cents a share on the 31st inst., Hector C. Haight, California representative for Ross Beason & Co., syndicate manager of the trust, announced yesterday. Accumulations on hand total 41 cents a share, which is 6 cents in excess of the regular 35-cent coupon rate.

Net Profits of Pacific Telephone Company Equal $5.69 Per Share

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.—Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company and associated companies reported today consolidated net profits for ten months ended October 31, of $14,379,109 after all charges and taxes against $14,059,451 a year ago, an increase of $319,658.

After allowing for preferred dividend requirements there was a balance available for the common stock and surplus of $10,279,109. This compares with $8,959,451 after preferred dividends reported for the same period last year and represents an increase of $1,319,658.

The ten months profits after preferred dividends are equivalent to $5.69 a share on the 1,804,867 shares of common stock outstanding at the close of the period. The per share earnings for the same period last year were $9.63 on 930,000 common shares then outstanding.

October net profits after all charges amounted to $1,629,183, against $1,443,727 in October, 1929, an increase of $185,456.

BROKER OPINIONS BEARISH

General Tenor of Market Views on Spring Street Gives Little Hope for Early Improvement

What Spring-street brokers think of the current stock market undertone and the probable future course of price is summarized in the representative opinions following:

Lacking any important changes in underlying conditions, the stock market continues to be governed almost entirely by its own technical situation. This is likely for the remainder of the year to cause irregular price movements with the leading stocks responding to moderate orders on either side, but with active investment demand developing only on recessions. There is some evidence that the lows established on November 10 may be tested in the near future.—John S. Young, Young, Clarke & Co.

This week has been featured by a slow, irregular decline which has developed without increase in volume. There apparently has been some necessitous selling in certain stocks, but thus far nothing has occurred to suggest the revival of general liquidation all along the line in substantial volume. At the close of the week active stocks appeared to be forming a better line of resistance, but either on the long or the short side the market, we think, will continue for the present to offer only mediocre trading possibilities. — Norman B. Courteney, E. A. Pierce & Co.

Stocks moved uncertainly throughout the week to a closing that showed some signs of weakness. Action of the rail shares in particular was rather disappointing. There was also renewed talk of gasoline price cutting, but the oil stocks acted as if they probably have discounted any bad news to come from that source. The ends of liquidation may remain to be completed before the recovery really gets under way, but we believe the present character of the buying is much better than the selling. —Jno. O. Knight, Los Angeles Investment Securities Company.

During the week the market was dull and reactionary, no evidences of any forced liquidation and some evidence there is an accumulation under the market of scale-buying orders. An encouraging factor is the upward turn in newspaper advertising, a sign that business is facing the near future with reviving confidence for generally advertising activity precedes a corresponding activity in general business. An improved situation in the copper metal market and in textiles and minimum prices set by the Carnegie Steel Company are some of the helpful evidences.—J. D. Kennedy, H. J. Barneson & Co.

Selling pressure continued throughout the greater part of the past week and, except for the possibility of a minor rally in the next day or so, the trend appears to continue downward. It would seem within the sounds of reason to expect a further drive on the stock market before the end of the year, inasmuch as there appears to be a great amount of tax loss selling for it to absorb. Furthermore, it is interesting to observe that the low for the year in every bear market of the past twenty years (i. e., 1914, 1917 and 1920) has been established in December. Excellent profit possibilities should, therefore, be just around the corner for those in a position to take advantage of possible reactions over the near term.—Wilcox Drake, Wilcox Drake & Co.

As the week closes the market action of the oil list indicates that some unpleasant developments in the industry are immediately imminent. First-grade oil stocks are discounting something more unfavorable than appears on the surface. In general, the market gives strong indication of being headed for lower levels. Long-term commitments in carefully selected securities are justified but a generous proportion of capital in liquid form should be held in reserve.—Walter V. Dobbs, Banks, Huntley & Co.

The market rallied fairly well on Friday but was not entirely convincing and softness developed in the short Saturday session. Unless unforeseen bad news develops, it would appear that the general list should resist selling with certain stocks going somewhat lower. It is entirely possible that the general list will hold in a narrow range on small volume.—Guy Witter, Dean Witter & Co.

Since the beginning of 1920 the January daily rate of ingot production has in only one instance been lower than the December rate. And, in the same period, there has only been two years when February has shown a lower rate than January. Thus, the steel industry, with the coming of 1931, is faced with a more attractive outlook. Similarly, present indications are that the automobile output in the initial month of 1931 should show a large increase over December. These developments, representing the first constructive news in months, should receive considerable attention marketwise. In anticipation of the same, we would use further weakness to accumulate leading securities around their year's lows.—F. V. Hargear, Suiro & Co.

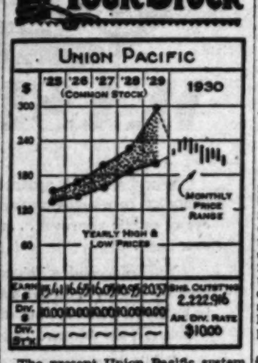
Further steps toward stabilization of business and a return to normal activity were effected last week by the steel industry following previous action in the copper, rubber and sugar groups. Foreign buying of prime American securities is reported on an increasing scale, and it is confidently expected that a turn for the better in business may will become apparent shortly after the first of the year.—J. B. Edwards, Howard G. Rath Company.

STOCK BUYERS COMFORTED

Boston Economist Says Failure to Control Emotional Stresses Responsible for Losses

BY EARLE E. CROWE

"Sick in Bed With Common Stocks" is the apposite title of a new book by R. W. McNeel, head of a Boston financial advisory service, who dedicates his little volume to the thousands of investors who have spent many sleepless nights since the 1929 collapse, "in the hope that it may enable them to sleep better."



"Investors were not told," Mr. McNeel contends, "of the wear and tear on the human system which is incidental to carrying out the policy of buying common stocks for long-term investment. — To merely point out that those buying common stocks for long-term investment would unquestionably be richer with the flight of time is comparable to directing a motorist to a certain city 500 miles away without telling him of the difficulties he must encounter."

PRINCIPLE PROVEN

Statistically, points out the author, the theory of common stock investment has been amply demonstrated by recognized authorities. Many investors assumed, however, without studying the principle that all they had to do was to buy good common stocks and then wait for increase in value without regard for the price paid. The thought never occurred that some time these stocks were certain to show a paper loss unless they were bought at panic prices.

While statistics will show the soundness of common-stock principles over the long pull, if correctly applied, they fail to take into account the human side of the equation, Mr. McNeel declares. It requires a stout heart and an abundance of faith to adhere to principles through alternate periods of hope and despair. On high prices the investor erroneously calculates his fortune, and at panic levels he just as foolishly reasons he is ruined and takes his losses.

To trace the gamut of human emotions and the cycles of financial success and failure, the author takes his investor through the series of bull and bear markets dating from 1901. Enthusiasm rode high in 1902, 1905-06, 1909, 1916, 1919, and the long years of the Coolidge boom. But in 1903, 1907, 1914, 1917, 1921 and 1929 the investor went through periods of worry, doubt and terror.

PROFIT REALIZED

Despite these conflicting emotions and fluctuating profits and losses, Mr. McNeel's theoretical investment would have shown a profit $21,954 greater in 1922 than if the principal had been invested in bonds, and an even greater profit if the investment had been carried through 1929.

"So long as human nature is what it is—so long as the basic forces in human nature remain what they are and have been since the beginning of time, we may expect people," Mr. McNeel concludes, "in every walk of life to go to extremes wherever they are acting in large bodies. In business and finance these extremes are translated into booms and panics.

"Only by a recognition of this, and a familiarizing of himself with the emotional states which accompany these extremes and which tempt the investor from the sane path, can anyone hope to be successful in common-stock investment."

The present Union Pacific system comprises 9878 miles of road extending westward from Omaha and Kansas City via Denver and Salt Lake City to Portland, Los Angeles and Seattle on the Pacific Coast. Aside from its investments in subsidiaries whose lines are necessary to the economical and efficient operation of the Union Pacific system, the company has extensive holdings in important railroads entirely unaffiliated with it. Investments are carried in the Illinois Central, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central and Chicago and Northwestern railroads. Subsidiary motor coach companies, acting as feeders to the rail lines, operate over more than 7000 miles of highway.

Although nine months' net operating income is off about 26 per cent from the similar 1929 period, results for September are slightly in excess of last year—indicating a reversal of the down trend. Even taking into account the sharp contraction of railroad earnings in 1930, Union Pacific's 1930 results are estimated to be about 25 per cent in excess of the $10 dividend requirement.

REPORT ON CHINA DUE SOON

Senate Committee Survey Leads Sinclair to Point Out Nation's Amazing Trade Growth

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR

[Copyright, 1930, by the North American Newspaper Alliance]

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The future of China has been the subject of a recent study by a subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate. The report of the subcommittee will be issued shortly.

China has a population of 400,-000,000 people, and a low standard of living, but is now seething with quickening interest in modern business life.

War has delayed and at times wrecked her plans. But the modern Chinese believes that China's vast program of internal expansion is about to begin. As a matter of fact, it has already begun.

The United States Department of Commerce shows that in the last fifty years exports from China have increased from $95,000,000 in 1870 to $650,000,000 in 1929, and imports during the same time have increased from $110,000,000 to $810,-000,000.

There is no country in the world which offers such a choice field of co-operation to American business men as the Republic of China—rich in natural wealth, an industrious people, and a "good will" not granted to the nationals of any other nation, for Americans have been popular in China ever since the Boxer rebellion.

How much money has the United States invested in the Orient? The Department of Commerce figures show that at the end of 1929, American direct investments there totaled $543,694,000. Based on dollars, this appears to be a substantial amount, but it is really only 7.3 per cent of the total American holdings abroad, which total $7,477,000,-000.

Dividing the figures, we find that American holdings in the Far East, Australia and New Zealand, account for $149,154,000 of the amount, while the rest, $394,540,000 is invested in Asia, where China accounts for nearly one-third. The Department of Commerce says that if we include the $25,000,000 representing the Chinese trade act companies, our direct investments in China are more than twice as large as they are in Japan. This, in spite of the fact that Japan's trade to the United States is much the more important of the two.

The second place in direct American investments in Asia goes to the Philippine Islands, not to China; and third, to The Netherlands East Indies.

American interests in the Philippine Islands, especially in the field of railroads, public utilities, factories, etc., total now about $65,-000,000.

But how does The Netherland East Indies happen to have such a large amount of American money? The answer is—investments in rubber.

Japan, fifth country in point of American investments, centers largely in silk and cotton manufacturing. India is next with total American investments of about $32,676,-000, burlap manufacture largely.

Grouping direct investments by industries, we find that the following is the order:

			P. c.
(1)	Petroleum	$182,497,000	33.6
(2)	Manufacturing	124,000,000	22.9
(3)	Selling and distribution	58,770,000	10.8
		39,335,000	7.2
(4)	Rubber	38,770,000	9.6
(5)	Communications and transport	10,077,000	1.9
(6)	Mining and smelting	14,525,000	2.6
(7)	Miscellaneous	11,326,000	1.5

But it is in China that American financial expansion is expected to be greatest during the next decade.

Sharp Drop in Valley Cotton Planting Due

MEMPHIS, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Both the willingness and the necessity to reduce cotton acreage next spring through the Mississippi Valley, where economic conditions have been aggravated by the severe drouth, should produce a drastic cut in the crop, local authorities agree. With fertilizer prices still high showing little resilience, large planters who usually contract at this season for the next crop are adamant in refusing to buy and this promises to create an unusual demand during the early spring, which may have still buoyant effects on prices and subsequent reduction in volume of fertilizer being used, especially by the smaller farmers.

At all odds, the next cotton crop probably will be produced at the lowest cost per pound since the beginning of the World War. While obviously weather and insect conditions during the growing season will weigh heavily on the out-turn per acre, there is every prospect that the live-at-home movement will be more pronounced next year than ever before.

With thousands of farmers being helped by the Red Cross during the winter, labor should be plentiful and cheap, unless the various States actually inaugurate immense road-building programs. It is believed, however, there will be sufficient idle laborers to supply both demands, if one may speculate this far ahead.

Cotton Crop Output High

Pacific Southwest Production Shows Little Change

Greater Yields Obtained on Smaller Plantings

Sharp Reduction of Acreage Forecast by Merchants

Pacific Southwest cotton growers, having passed the peak of their harvesting, find that despite a 12 per cent reduction in plantings this year, ginnings to date have showed a decline of only 2 per cent from the volume for the same period last year, according to the census bureau report being circulated by the California-Arizona Cotton Association.

However, in view of the low prices prevailing this year, cotton merchants predict that next spring's plantings will be further substantially curtailed, the reduction possibly averaging between 15 and 20 per cent depending largely on the season's final prices.

Cotton, which in California ranks next to citrus fruits, hay and grapes from the standpoint of dollar return to the agriculturist, had a gross value last year of about $65,-000,000 in the Pacific Southwest territory. It is unofficially estimated that the gross return this season will be around $55,000,000.

Better weather conditions, more intensive cultivation and other factors have contributed to result in a better yield per acre this season holding the volume of the crop only slightly below last year in the face of the sharp reduction in plantings, it was stated.

Based on ginnings to date cotton merchants estimate that the production for the full current season will approximate 550,000 bales against 575,000 last year. In California the year's output is predicted at 235,000 bales against 255,000 a year ago.

Ginnings in the Pacific Southwest territory up to November 14, last, aggregated 292,409 running bales against 298,733 for the same period last year, off 2 per cent. In California ginnings for the same period totaled 127,850 bales against 135,383 last year, a decline of more than 5 per cent.

Pacific States Life Continues Business Gain

Pacific States Life Insurance Company's steadily increasing monthly production of new insurance continued into November which showed an increase of 137 per cent in written business over the same month last year, William L. Vernon, president, announced yesterday. The increase for the eleven months of this year was 62 per cent over the same period of 1929.

Issued insurance for November was 83 per cent more than for the corresponding month of last year and for the eleven-month period the gain was 64 per cent, Mr. Vernon said. The total of insurance in force on the 1st inst. was approximately $35,000,000, as compared with $17,499,000 on January 1, last, an increase of $7,500,000. President Vernon predicted that Pacific States Life will close the present year with $30,000,000 of insurance in force.

"The total of insurance issued by Pacific States Life during 1930 has exceeded by millions the production of any previous year in the company's history. In fact, it has been the company's banner year in every regard," Mr. Vernon added.

NEW CATALINA BOAT PLANNED

Bids on Glass Bottom Craft Asked From Yards

Will Take Place of Emperor Damaged in Storm

Project Estimated to Cost About $75,000

BY WAYNE B. CAVE

Construction yesterday was authorized for another large glass-bottom boat for the fleet exhibiting submarine gardens at Catalina Island, it was announced yesterday by Milton Patrick, manager of the fleet at Avalon.

Bids have been placed in the hands of Los Angeles ship and boat yards, and it is hoped to get construction under way within a week or ten days.

The craft will be 107 feet long, twenty-two feet of beam and a depth of 5.9 feet; will possess a gross tonnage of 124, a net of seventy, and will be propelled by a 200-horsepower gasoline engine, the latter being chosen to obviate fumes.

It will have a passenger capacity for 125, and will cost around $75,000. Completion is called for by May 1, in preparation for the island's next summer season.

No name yet has been chosen, but the craft will take the place of the Emperor, irreparably damaged in the freak blow at the island November 22. It will be along similar lines to the Emperor, but of a finer model, Patrick said.

CAN MANUFACTURER IN CHEERFUL REPORT

The American Can Company, contrary to economic trends, has not reacted typically at all, has not curtailed production, but, in fact, is experiencing the largest business year of its career, according to Carl G. Preis, chief engineer of the company, with headquarters in New York.

Mr. Preis returned yesterday on the Lasco flagship City of Los Angeles from Honolulu, where he has been directing construction of a new can-manufacturing plant for the pineapple trade to cost $1,750,000, and of a make 400,000,000 cans yearly when completed the middle of 1931. The company has six other plants on the islands.

Preis said Hawaii will use 310,000,000 cans this year, 360,000,000 next year and 500,000,000 in 1932 to handle closer plantings. The Pacific division, which includes Hawaii, leads the Midwest and eastern divisions, with a yearly use of 1,000,000,000 cans of the company's annual output of 2,500,000,000.

Los Angeles' plant, now manufacturing around 140,000,000 cans, will have to be augmented in the near future by additional construction, he added. He will continue into the Northwest today before returning to New York.

Panama Pacific electric liner California arrived from New York and Havana yesterday morning to disembark 225 of her 400 passengers, and discharge 1000 of her 4000 tons of package merchandise and 8030 stems of Panama bananas. Passengers included Mary Pence, New York actress; Mrs. Oliver Hardy, wife of the film comedian; Mrs. John Mahlstead, bringing a tiny dog which recently captured—five blue ribbons in New York to exhibit at Los Angeles; Dr. T. F. Joyce, medical superintendent of the California Narcotic Hospital at Spadra; Cameron Beck, personnel director of the New York Stock Exchange, and John B. Waddell, Montreal banker.

Judge John York, Superior Court; James J. Jeffries and James Woods, former State boxing commissioner, were among the passengers sailing on the Wrigley liner Catalina yesterday for a week-end at Catalina Island. The liner Avalon is on drydock at the yards of the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Corporation undergoing her annual overhaul and will be back on the run January 1, next.

Lumber receipts at Los Angeles Harbor were up 25 per cent during the week closed yesterday, according to the Marine Exchange. They totaled 16,771,000 board feet, compared with 12,725,000 the previous seven days. Oil shipments dropped from 2,649,820 barrels to 1,757,841 during the same period, while ship arrivals numbered 142, compared with 156 the previous week.

The Lasco coastwise liner Yale, beginning the 5th inst., when she sailed from San Francisco for here with football fans, has taken the schedule of the Harvard until next Thursday. The Yale will take the football crowd back, sailing from Wilmington at 2 p.m. today and arriving at the Bay City tomorrow at 8 a.m.

GUN BANDIT RECOGNIZES HIS VICTIM

Robbed Him Once Before, but This Time Takes Car; Woman Loses Jewels

As Joseph S. Eibenschutz, secretary of the J. B. Feldman Company, accompanied by his wife, drove to the door of his garage at 1259 South Windsor Boulevard last night, a bandit stepped from the shadows with a gun in his hand.

"Don't move or I'll shoot," he commanded as he drew closer to the car. Then he stopped short and peered intently into Mr. Eibenschutz' face.

"Say," he demanded, as he still pointed the gun, "haven't I seen you someplace before?"

"You sure have," nervously responded Mr. Eibenschutz, "you held me up at Olympics and Windsor Boulevard last October and took $1464 worth of money and jewelry from me. Don't you remember?"

"Yes, yes, to be sure," replied the bandit abstractly, "but this is new business. Hand over what you've got."

Mrs. Eibenschutz handed over jewelry valued at $1350 and Mr. Eibenschutz's pockets yielded $30. The bandit then forced Eibenschutz to drive him two blocks away and then ordered him and his wife from the machine, and drove away.

Crowd Menaces Driver After He Runs Down Girl

After running down and severely injuring a woman pedestrian at North Main and Workman streets last night, A. E. Carpenter, 46 years of age, of 5910½ East Ocean avenue, Long Beach, was taken into custody by Lincoln Heights detectives who reported arriving at the scene of the accident just in time to avert violent handling of the accused man by a score of angry citizens who had effected his capture.

The prisoner, who, following his arrest, was examined by Police Surgeon J. E. Kirkpatrick and declared intoxicated, is reported to have driven his machine into one parked at 227 South Workman street, then, in trying to escape, to have crashed into another car at Main and Workman streets driven by Mrs. Jeanette Bell, of 610 South Vermont avenue. Following the second crash, the police report stated, Carpenter backed his machine across the intersection, running down Miss Amelia De Navarro, 20, of 253 East Twenty-ninth street, who was taken to General Hospital suffering from internal injuries which may prove fatal. A third crash occurred, the arresting officers were told by witnesses, when the driver proceeded after injuring the woman and collided with a car driven by Mrs. Mary Gilman of 550 South Workman street.

Angelo Masi of 548 South Workman street told Detective Lieutenants Witt and Kopytek of Lincoln Heights division that he leaped on the running board of Carpenter's machine and with the help of several citizens took the driver into custody.

Wallace Wright, 50, of 61 South Binedo street, Pasadena, who was riding with Carpenter, according to detectives, was boked on a charge of drunk in an automobile.

Realty Dealer Killed by Car

Carroll Daly, Venice real estate man, was instantly killed by a hit-and-run driver at Sixtieth street and Broadway last night. The driver of the car abandoned the machine at the scene of the accident and the police are seeking information from the registered owner, Spencer Ranum, 7621 Wadsworth street. Ranum had not returned home at a late hour last night.

Daly, who headed the Venice real estate firm of Carroll J. Daly & Co., lived at 9 Avenue 19, Venice. He was 40 years of age.

HOSPITAL'S CORNER-STONE WILL BE LAID TODAY

Thousands to Attend Ceremony at New County Institution, Largest in World

Civic pride in an achievement which, when completed, will give to Los Angeles county the largest and most modernly equipped hospital in the world may well be the reaction when today, following the corner-stone laying ceremonies, the public will have its first opportunity to inspect the new $11,800,000 Los Angeles County General Hospital, now under construction on its fifty-six-acre site at Zonal avenue east of Mission Road.

The program which has been arranged under the direction of Supervisor Shaw, general chairman, County Counsel Mattoon, master of ceremonies, and a committee of others, will begin at 2:30 p.m. Although some 10,000 invitations have been sent out, the committee in charge emphasizes the fact that it is not necessary to have an invitation and the county invites everyone to attend. Five thousand seats will be provided for spectators in the basement of the new building.

ROUTE TO SITE

The new building is reached by driving out Mission Road to Zonal avenue, which is the first street south of the present County Hospital, then proceeding east on Zonal avenue to the new building.

Musical numbers by the University of Southern California band and other musical organizations of the university will open the program, after which an invocation will be pronounced by Capt. J. J. Tynan, U.S.N., chaplain of the battleship U.S.S. California.

Principal speakers for the occasion will be Governor-elect James Rolph, jr., whose subject will be "Humanity in Government," and Dr. Willis Gerry Morgan, president of the American Medical Association, who will discuss "The Medical Profession." Other speakers include Supervisor Shaw, Lieut.-Gov. H. L. Nelson, Edwin Bergstrom, architect, Dr. Frank W. Wood, superintendent of the General Hospital, and Hon. Everett W. Mattoon, chairman of the visiting staff.

MARY PICKFORD TO AID

During the program will come the placing of the corner-stone by Supervisor Shaw with the assistance of Mary Pickford. Documents of future interest have been selected by a committee composed of Supervisor Shaw, Dr. F. W. Wood, Edwin Bergstrom and County Counsel Mattoon, to be placed therein, and with the county charter, the constitution of the State of California, reports of the Board of Supervisors, the county budget, the annual publications of the hospital and of nursing, the annual of the visiting staff of the hospital, plans and specifications of the new building, the names of the members of the Board of Architects Association who planned the structure, and a sealed basket of all the daily newspapers of Los Angeles.

At the close of the ceremonies the guests will inspect the interior of the building, and guides will be at hand to direct them on the tour.

CONSTRUCTION DETAILS

The structure, which will house the first single unit hospital in the world to be done in the modern style of architecture, is depended upon for its beauty of effects rather than decoration. It has a steel frame with an exterior finish of rough concrete and the walls and floors are of reinforced concrete, this construction being the most economical and at the same time the most enduring to withstand the ravages of time. It is absolutely fireproof.

According to Karl W. Muck, architect, empowered by the board of supervisors to act in an advisory capacity with the architects of the building, all ornamentation and unnecessary architectural features were dispensed with and the building is characterized by its utmost simplicity.

Beauty, convenience and efficiency, Muck explained, were the guiding principles which the designers concentrated on and in every conceivable assignment present the very last word in modern sanitation and convenience. Two outstanding examples of these features are the wide corridors throughout the interior of the building to facilitate the handling, and the twenty-two high speed, self-leveling automatic elevators located at strategic points to provide a maximum of efficiency in the transportation of patients.

PURCHASE OF SITE

Following the passage of a $5,000,000 bond issue in 1923 for a new County Hospital, the first step toward its accomplishment was to obtain the necessary site. Accordingly, 20.20 acres, or four entire city blocks, adjoining the present County Hospital site of 35.71 acres were secured, making the entire General Hospital property an area of approximately fifty-six acres.

Then, before the final plans were drawn up a committee composed of former Supervisor Boan, Dr. Wood and Edwin Bergstrom and William Richards, both of the Allied Architects' Association, made an extensive tour of the United States in order to study the best hospitals of the country. In 1925 a contract was entered into with Bergstrom, Hunt, Davis, Hunt & Richards, architects, and two years were spent on the perfection of the plans for the building.

In March, 1927, the excavations were started and the contracts for the foundations, the steel work and the general construction followed shortly thereafter. The steel contract, which involved an amount in excess of $950,000, was one of the largest ever to be let on the Pacific Coast.

OPENS NEXT OCTOBER

Actual construction on the building began in July, 1927, with the Weymouth Crowell Company as the general contractors. To date, all the steel and concrete work has been finished and the terraces and driveways graded. The first unit of the hospital containing 900 beds is scheduled to open for service in October, 1931, and it is estimated that the entire hospital will be ready for occupancy some time in 1933.

Some idea of the size of this massive structure may be obtained from the following figures furnished by Supervisor Shaw. A total of 600,000 sacks of cement were used in the building, which contains 90,000 cubic yards of concrete; the entire building contains 16,665,000 cubic feet of space; the floor area is 1,355,400 square feet or approximately thirty-one acres; electrical, plumbing and heating contracts call for 106 miles of electric conduit, 720 miles of wire and cables and 250 miles of pipe line to be installed in the structure and its ultimate cost, exclusive of furnishings, will be approximately, $12,000,000, the excess over the $5,000,000 bond issue to be paid from the general county funds.

TOTAL CAPACITY

The total capacity of the hospital normally will be 2404 beds, with facilities for increasing this capacity under stress of emergency to 3600 beds. Five acres of roof space, which ordinarily will be equipped for the use of convalescing patients, has been so designed that it may meet this emergency need if necessary.

Throughout the hospital a unit system of wards exists, a typical unit, with one nurse in general charge, consisting of two six-bed wards, two two-bed wards and a one-bed ward, with baths, service rooms, etc., for each unit. A few wards contain eight beds, but none more than that. There are electric outlets for nurse calls and a radio headset at each bed. These radio sets are considered an economy even in a hospital which serves only the indigent sick, according to Dr. Wood, superintendent, because their cost of installation is small, compared to the saving they bring in the demands upon the time of nurses.

ARRANGEMENT OF WARDS

Beginning with the top floor of the building, its arrangement of departments is as follows: An emergency isolation ward, made up of fifteen small wards containing from two to six beds each, for patients who suddenly develop contagious diseases; the next floor is the museum floor, containing space for educational exhibits and supplies; next is the surgical operating floor, which in addition to bed wards, has six operating rooms and a large operating amphitheater.

With a view to conserving as much time as possible for the physicians and surgeons who donate their services to the hospital, the operating rooms are arranged in pairs so that one chief surgeon may be working in one room while his next patient is being anaesthetized in the other room and in every other way every possible time-saving device has been provided.

All the operating rooms are done in tile and each one has its own steam pressure sterilizer connected

Fleet Commander Plans Mammoth Reception for City's Elite to Repay Courtesies to Navy

Plans were announced yesterday by Admiral Frank H. Schofield, commander-in-chief of the battle fleet, for a pretentious informal reception aboard the fleet flagship California on the 17th inst., to 2000 leaders of Southern California social, political, professional and business circles.

The affair, exceeding in size and importance any social event given by the Navy since the fleet came to local waters in 1919, is announced by Admiral Schofield to be in return for the many courtesies extended him and his officers by the Southland since he hoisted his flag.

PLEA MADE FOR MISSION PLAY HELP

Chamber Asks County Aid to Prevent Closing Down of Old-Time Attraction

An appeal for financial aid to help save the Mission Play at San Gabriel, which has become one of the fixed institutions of the county is made in a communication to the Board of Supervisors, signed by President Au[illegible] of the Chamber of Commerce. The letter will be read tomorrow.

If the Mission Play is to be held in 1931 it will be necessary, according to Austin, to raise not less than $15,000 by subscription and county aid to underwrite it, or guarantee no deficit. Already, he says, $5000 has been raised by private subscription.

The chamber several years ago organized a committee to save the play and build a playhouse. Some of these men, he declares, have put up their personal funds to keep the performance alive.

In spite of the efforts of the directors, the communication says, the play has been forced to raise a guarantee fund of $15,000 from year to year to keep it going. It adds that unless there is some community effort undertaken it is likely the Mission Play will have to be canceled.

Austin says there is no doubt that in time the play can be made to pay.

The Mission Play was founded some twenty years ago by John Steven McGroarty and has been to the west coast what the Passion Play has been to Germany. It was founded to perpetuate the spirit of the padres of the early days in California in religion, science and culture. It has been a valuable asset to the county because of its historic setting and has greatly appealed to visitors and tourists.

Miss Susan Clemson, president of the Felipe De Neve Chapter, Children of the American Revolution, was the recipient of a silk flag at an entertainment given yesterday at the home of Mrs. Clarke Stull, 1717 Virginia Road. The flag was given into the keeping of Katherine Gibson, color-bearer.

Mrs. Lawrence H. Quirolla of Washington, D. C., vice-president of the National Society, Children of the American Revolution, told of the work in patriotic education being done by the society.

Other features included the presentation of a pageant written by Mrs. N. Smith, patriotic selections on the piano by Mrs. J. L. Byrnes, a vocal solo, written by Mrs. Charles Baker and sung by Mrs. Charles F. Quillian, and recitations by Mmes. Stull, John Gates, Jr., Wilbur E. Labry, Orlando Vogel, John H. PEACE MEETING OPENS TONIGHT

Institute of International Relations Gathers

Leaders in Good Will Among Nations to Speak

Riverside Inn to Be Scene of Brilliant Sessions

World peace and friendship through knowledge and understanding will be the keynote of the seventh session on the Institute of International Relations, which opens tonight at Riverside Mission Inn.

DR. R. B. VON KLEINSMID

Dr. Herbert H. Gowen, professor of oriental studies at the University of Washington, will open the session with an address on "The Spirit and the Wheels" in the music room of Mission Inn at 8 p.m. This will be the first of a series of evening lectures at the same place throughout the sessions. The evening lectures are open to the public free of charge, although preference of seating is given members of the institute. The session will close next Friday evening. Dr. R. B. Von KleinSmid, president of the University of Southern California, is chancellor of the institute and Dean Henry F. Grady of the University of California is director.

IDEAL OF PEACE

In discussing the purposes of the institute Dr. Von KleinSmid expressed the thought that the ideal of world peace cannot be implanted in the hearts of the people incidentally. "Neither can one expect international good will among those taught unless the teacher himself has caught the vision of world amity and universal brotherhood," Dr. Von KleinSmid said.

BEN CHERRINGTON

Among the leaders who will participate in the six-day program are faculty members from such institutions as University of Washington, University of Oregon, University of Denver, University of California, Mills College, Stanford University, College of the Pacific, University of Southern California, Pomona College, California Institute of Technology, Los Angeles University of International Relations, California College in China and various semi-private and public organizations, including the Carnegie Endowment of International Peace and others.

MRS. RUTH WEIMER, the "mercy slayer," has been sent home a free woman.

The verdict is amazing. The lady jurors say they acquitted her because of her "frankness" in telling all about it. Her able attorney says she was acquitted because of her attack of "amnesia"—which prevented her knowing anything about what she was doing.

DANGER FOR GROUCHES

The question is, is the acquittal of Mrs. Weimer to be understood as a general invitation legally to kill off all our complaining relatives?

WHAT'S THE MATTER?

"Because a thirsty Bedouin in the Sahara was unable to locate a particular oasis you would not say that the oasis was overstocked with water, but rather that the desert was ill equipped with signboards and means of transportation."

With this illustration Lord D'Abernon shoots a hole into the theory that our hard times have come from overproduction. He says that, with half the world starving for the actual necessities, it is absurd to say too much has been produced. The real difficulty is the lack of gold—the circulating medium.

BREAKING INTO FILMLAND

The case of Philip Holden, the millionaire boy shot robbing a bank, ought to have a moral for the hordes of writers trying to break into Hollywood.

Scenario writing was difficult in the days of silent pictures. Writing dialogue is no green pasture for amateurs. It involves not only great experience as a writer, but an intimate knowledge of acting. If you don't know to an exactitude what "timing" and "pace" mean in acting, let the studios alone. And even if you do your chances are ten times better playing a roulette wheel.

A TRUSTING SOUL

Fremont Older must be doing some tall thinking following the Supreme Court findings in the McCooney dynamite case.

He wrecked a brilliant newspaper career by allowing himself to become a tool for labor unions and convicts who yearned to "reform." Huh!

They reformed about as much as the "match burglar" did in Alhambra; talked himself out of a capture in Judge Gould's house in time to hurry over to burgle the house next door.

with a steam-pressure sterilizer system piped throughout the building. Each room also has five different anaesthetic gases piped into it as well as lines for compressed air and vacuum. To prevent the tragic results which might follow if the electricity failed during an operation, the hospital is provided with electricity from two different sources, in addition to an emergency generator plant.

The ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth floors will be devoted to medical patients. On the ninth floor also there are four occupational therapy rooms.

The seventh floor is devoted entirely to patients with clean surgical conditions, containing in addition to seven wings or nursing units, two large examination and treatment suites for out-patients who come for treatment.

MATERNITY SERVICE

Maternity service will occupy the entire sixth floor, with bed facilities for 132 mothers and 144 infants and operating rooms.

The fourth and fifth floors are designed for patients of the department of internal medicine. The third floor provides for the departments of internal medicine, eye, ear, nose and throat, oral and dental surgery patients.

Space on the second floor will be devoted to out-patients who do not remain to occupy beds and part of the X-ray department, the remainder of which will be on the first floor. With the Cleveland disaster in mind, a special solid concrete vault in a solid concrete storage room equipped with a special sprinkler device has been provided for the X-ray department.

The first floor is devoted to the care of patients suffering from orthopaedic conditions, including fractures, and to the main plant of the X-ray department.

Beneath these floors are three ground floors, in the first of which there will be store rooms, refrigeration plant, switchboard, electrical supply room and transformer vault. There is also a tunnel from this floor connecting the new building with the old hospital buildings.

The general administrative offices of the hospital will occupy the second ground floor in conjunction with the admitting and out-patient departments, the discharging department, the physio-therapy department, the school of nursing and the dining-rooms and kitchens.

On the third ground floor are the filing department, the pharmacy, laboratory, morgue, library, the infirmary ward or wing for slightly sick employees and the children's department. The children's department was put on this floor in order that convalescing children might easily have the use of the terraces which surround the building.

NURSING SCHOOL

In connection with the hospital the largest nursing school in the world will be maintained, with facilities for training 600 nurses, which include classrooms, equipment and an auditorium with a seating capacity of approximately 1800.

There will also be a 50 by 90 foot cement finished swimming pool, a completely equipped gymnasium and recreation rooms for hospital employees and staff members.

Plans for the terraces, lawns and gardens of the new hospital are under consideration now, according to County Architect Muck, so that the landscaping may be started the moment actual construction work is finished.

It is the belief of Dr. Wood and Supervisor Shaw that this new edifice will provide for the hospital needs of the county for the next fifty years and they point out that the county's motive in constructing such a tremendous building was to effect economies that would not be possible if a haphazard system of building additions every few years had been adopted. According to Dr. Wood, the building was not designed to provide luxuries for the indigent sick, but to prevent the taxpayers of the county from having to bear a permanent lifetime burden of cripples and invalids who might have been cured had the proper attention been available at the critical moment.

The following persons were named to serve with Supervisor Shaw on the committee on arrangements for the ceremonies today:

Judge Thomas L. Ambrose, John C. Austin, Norman A. Bailie, R. C. Baldwin, Dr. Frank F. Barham, Dr. John V. Barrow, Supervisor Beatty, Brig. James C. Bell, Edwin Bergstrom, Remsen D. Bird, James A. Debate Slated for Tomorrow

Reservations indicate that individuals interested in modern social problems, as well as educators and students, are looking forward to the symposium debate on humanism as it affects religion, to be held tomorrow night at the Wilshire-Ebell Theater as part of the educational program of the Jewish Institute Forum.

With the general subject, "Resolved, That Theism Must Give Way to Humanism," Rabbi Herman Lissauer, head of the forum, and Ernest Caldecott, minister in charge, First Unitarian Church, will present the humanistic aspect, while Rabbi Julius Leibert of Temple Emanu-El and Prof. Frederic P. Woellner of the University of California at Los Angeles, will support the theistic principle.

The symposium debate is the second event of the 1930-1931 program of the Jewish Institute Forum.

Miss De Rosa testified in Superior Judge Gould's court last week that she was one of the women Hartman had wed. "But he and I never lived together as man and wife," she said yesterday. "I returned to my own home immediately after the ceremony."

Toys and Clothes Donated for Needy Children

Mrs. F. B. Winslow, Troop Leader, and Group of Girl Scouts

BOY Scouts of troop No. 65 and Girl Scouts of troop No. 60, both organizations composed of pupils of the Glen Feliz Boulevard elementary school, directed by the Parent-Teacher Association, are finding that not only is it "more blessed to given than to receive," but "it's a lot more fun."

Aside from making personal donation of toys, tools and clothing, the two Scout troops are devoting all their spare time to repairing old or damaged toys and clothing, collected by their school, to be given to those who otherwise would go without at Christmas time.

The Scout work is performed in conjunction with the annual Glen Feliz Boulevard school "white Christmas," in which a number of needy families are taken care of. The renovation and repairing of the gifts will continue until the 12th inst. when school holiday begins.

VICTIM LEFT FOR DEAD BY ASSAILANTS

Man Found Unconscious on Hollywood Street After Mysterious Attack

Robbed, beaten and left for dead by his assailants, Dan Gustovish, 36 years of age, 6123 Romaine street, was found unconscious early yesterday at Vine street and La Mirada avenue by pedestrians who notified Hollywood police.

At the Hollywood Receiving Hospital the victim partly regained consciousness and told detectives the last he remembered was when he started home after attending the boxing matches at the Hollywood Legion Stadium. Inquiry at the Romaine-street address disclosed that he left there Friday night with the word he was leaving for San Diego.

He was treated for a severe head injury and later in the day departed for San Diego. He said he had $120 and two suit cases when he was attacked.

Paul C. Moore, druggist, of 7825 South San Pedro street, was robbed of $14 cash and two boxes of candy by two bandits who entered his store shortly after he opened it yesterday morning.

Two bandits who called Ralph Sinich, jeweler of 7250 Melrose avenue, by name, locked him in a closet and took $33 from the cash register. The victim escaped about thirty minutes later and called police.

Ed Kookson, driver of a Los Angeles Railway bus, reported that he was robbed of $10 and a watch by two youths who accosted him as he was waiting for a street car at Fifty-ninth street and Avalon Boulevard.

With seventy-six burglaries and thirty-three robberies already recorded for the first five days of December, police officials yesterday prepared for an even more vigorous crusade against banditry. In the same period of last year, sixty-four burglaries were reported and thirty-one robberies. The first five days of November, 1930, recorded a total of ninety-two burglaries and thirty-eight robberies.

William Culley and Robert Culley, his brother, of 110 East Sixty-seventh street, were arrested on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon upon Victor Quillin Logue of 152 West Seventy-first street. They were seized on Sixty-eighth street, east of Central avenue, following an altercation in which they are asserted to have attacked Logue with a razor. Logue was taken to Georgia-street Hospital.

AID GIVEN TO "TIMES" PROPOSAL

Club Adopts Resolution Urging Sending Surplus Foodstuffs to China

Predicating its action on a recent editorial in The Times emphasizing the need of some plan of distribution whereby China's starving millions might avail themselves of the vast oversupplies of foodstuffs in the United States the Placentia Round Table Club has adopted a resolution urging President Hoover and Congress to take suitable action.

The plan suggested by the resolution is for Congress to pass legislation enabling the Farmers' Relief Commission to sell to the Chinese government at a fair price the grain now stored by that commission, and that a sufficient sum be appropriated to meet the cost of distribution.

It is recommended that the Chinese government be permitted to give forty-year bonds bearing reasonable interest in payment, thereby solving a situation which sees famine and suffering in a large portion of the world because of a lack of marketing facilities of products of which another country has no need and which, in fact, are the cause of business depression.

The resolution was introduced at the meeting of the Placentia Round Table Club by Mrs. W. W. Blackmer.

In amplification of the club's action it was explained yesterday that the organization hopes to aid in relieving the problem of American farmers, and in disposing of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat now held by the Farm Relief Commission.

The club believes that by diverting the surplus to China's starving millions not only would that country be benefited, but the United States also.

Congress Shown on Opening Day in News Reel

Opening of Congress attended by a riot of Reds, along with other pictorial events at the national capital, are now being shown in the Los Angeles Times-Universal Newsreel at the leading theaters.

Other news events, described by Graham McNamee, make a complete calendar of interesting information from all points. Names of theaters showing the newsreel may be obtained by telephoning the Universal News Reel.

One of the features brought to the audiences by the newsreel is the thrilling accident occurring at the automobile races at Ascot Speedway when a driver's car skidded and after crashing through a fence turned over several times. The newsreel also shows parts of the six-day bicycle race in New York and the sailing of Sinclair Lewis, author, to claim the Nobel literature prize of $46,350 in Sweden. Other pictures show the disastrous floods in France and Germany.

RAID VICTIMS CROWD COURT

Central Police Station Not Able to Hold Throng

Nearly 400 Caught in Foray on Asserted Nude Show

Judge Announces $5 or One Day Penalty for Patrons

Arrested on moral charges during a police raid on a "fraternity smoker" on the roof of the Hollywood Storage Building late Friday night, nearly 400 men and youths appeared for trial in Municipal Court at Central Police Station last night. The courtroom was filled to overflowing, literally. Scores of relatives and friends of the accused men who began assembling at Central Station early in the evening found it impossible to gain entrance to the trial room, congesting all approaches to the building.

Judge Edward H. Miller began hearing the prisoners' pleas shortly after 8 o'clock and indicated he would continue the session until all the cases had been disposed of. In order to expedite the procedure Judge Miller announced that he would read the charge against each prisoner and impose a sentence of $5 fine or one day in jail on each complaint.

WOMEN HELD

Four women entertainers arrested in the raid pleaded not guilty to vagrancy charges before Municipal Judge Eagan yesterday and were released on bond pending trial on the 19th inst. Seven men were booked on charges of conducting gambling games in connection with the smoker.

The raid was the result of a tip received by vice squad officers and four detectives, clad in tuxedos, were assigned to gather evidence. They arrived early and mingled with other spectators, who paid $1 each for admission. The affair was billed as a "fraternity benefit smoker" and early in the evening began to take on the aspect of an orgy, according to the police report.

BATTLE STARTS

Not until nearly midnight, however, did the vice squad officers feel that the revelry had reached its height, when four young women appeared in what was described as an indecent performance. This was climaxed, tney declared, by another dance in which the four appeared without even a semblance of drapery. Rushing toward the exits, the detectives announced that every spectator was under arrest.

Meanwhile, just outside and in the streets below, guarding every means of escape, were 150 reserves who had been summoned in anticipation of a riot. Dozens of men attempted to flee by means of fire escapes, but they were driven back by officers who had expected such attempts.

Hand-to-hand fights were numerous as the officers rushed into the hall, once an exclusive Hollywood night club, and beer bottles crashed through windows as the melee increased in violence. Several thousand persons had gathered in the street below to watch the proceedings.

GIRLS DENY CHARGE

A check-up revealed 362 men had been arrested in addition to the four women. The latter described themselves as: Ruth Williams, 21 years of age, of 1347 North Serrano street; Isabelle Clemons, 20, of 420 Fetterly street; Dolores Moreno, 19, transient, and Ruth Scott, 22, of 1215 West Tenth street. They pleaded not guilty before Municipal Judge Eagan to the charge of being dissolute persons. Bail was fixed at $150 each pending trial on the 19th inst.

Six of the men taken into custody were booked as promoters of the show. They gave their names as Glen B. Mates and George N. Hammond of Glendale; Harry Gaston of Long Beach, Otto Good of Ocean Park, and Lloyd Baxter and Ray J. Faeth of Los Angeles.

Directors of the Live-Stock Show last night expressed themselves as elated over the attendance, which they said to be in excess of 150,000 during the course of the show, with the high prices paid for the fat cattle and the registered bulls at the auction, and with the exceptional showing made by the junior entrants.

"It was the greatest and most magnificent live-stock show ever held in the West," said Director McNaughton. "The exhibits of so many pure-bred animals from all over the country, particularly those of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' Association, never have been surpassed anywhere for quality. Authorities on all classifications, cattle, swine and sheep, agree that the exposition set a new mark, and all were enthused over the results obtained—that of creating more interest in better live stock on the part of the growers, and that of acquainting the public with the intelligent and progressive efforts continually being made to provide a superior meat supply."

The show was widely publicized, and attracted approximately 25,000 people from outside the State. Twenty-four States were represented in 3011 entries valued at several million dollars—more than three times the size of any previous show held here.

ANGELENO HONORED BY BOLIVIANS

Famed Lawyer Nominated for Vice-Presidency

Await Election Returns

OUT of the turmoil of South American politics has come opportunity for at least one resident of Los Angeles, Dr. Jose Luis Tejada S., an international lawyer and business man, native of Bolivia. Last week he was nominated to stand for election as first Vice-President of his republic.

Mrs. Tejada, wife of the Vice-Presidential nominee, has been in Los Angeles since the departure of her husband in October and will probably remain here until after the elections in January.

"After the June revolution in Bolivia," Mrs. Tejada said last night in explanation of the political situation in the South American republic, "a group of citizens decided upon an effort to form a fusion of the three political parties and Mr. Tejada was asked to return to Bolivia to help in the movement.

"I only have a brief cable from my husband telling me of the nomination, but I have heard from New York that the three-party union was successful and that the January elections will find a united party instead of three."

Mrs. Tejada said her plans for returning to Bolivia are indefinite and that she will await the return of her husband to Los Angeles when the January election returns are completed. Then, she said, the family will probably move to the capital city, La Paz.

"I am a member of a number of women's clubs in La Paz," Mrs. Tejada said, "and will take up my work there. The clubs are working in Indian welfare, trying to help the original natives of the country. We will both be busy, my husband with his official duties and I with my family and club work."

FOREIGN OIL MAN FIGHTS LAND TITLE

Transfer of Kettleman Hills Tract Made on Improper Notice, He Says

In a suit filed yesterday in the United States District Court J. Foster Kell, acting as trustee of the British California Oil Company, sought to have declared null and void title given to one company and seven persons to 160 acres of land in the Kettleman oil fields in San Joaquin Valley, asserted in the complaint to be valued at more than $25,000,000.

Kell, who in the complaint sets forth that he is a resident of Frankfort on the Main, Germany, asserts that in 1914 he and his company acquired title to the land in question and that in December, 1927, the defendants paid the delinquent taxes on the property and acquired a tax title. It is recited that, while an effort was made to serve Kell with notice of the action of a Fresno county court giving title to the defendants, the notice was not to Kell, but to another man by a similar name then living in London.

The defendants in the action are M. D. Huffman, Laura K. Huffman, Idyll M. Hardie, the Superior Oil Company, F. R. Kellogg, G. J. Symington, Elmer Wegley and C. W. Hamslip, all said to be interested in the land.

The plaintiff in the action seeks to recover title to the land, upon the ground that he was not given legal notice of any action tending to change the title.

Elks Lodge to Honor Dead in Service Today

The annual memorial day service of Elks' Lodge, No. 99, will be held at 2:30 p.m. today in Elks' Temple, with Exalted Ruler Frank S. Hutton presiding.

The senior choir of St. James Episcopal Church will appear in full vestments. Sibley G. Pease, resident organist of the local lodge, is in charge of the program, and Charles J. O'Hara, Esteemed Leading Knight and chairman of the memorial day committee, is directing the general arrangements.

Mrs. Lillian Scanlon Gee will sing "Nearer My God to Thee" as the roll of those who have died is called. There will also be a baritone solo by Hugh Wellington Martyn and a harp solo by J. A. Apert.

L. A. Lewis, lawyer, will deliver the tribute.

Lipps Defeated in Divorce Suit

Superior Judge Rankin yesterday denied William L. Lipps's suit for divorce, and granted a decree of separate maintenance to Mrs. Rhoda Lipps. The wife also obtained custody of their daughter, Mary Ann, 2 years of age, over physical possession of whom the Lippses scuffled in a courtroom Thursday.

The judge ordered Lipps to pay $60 a month toward the support of his children, Mary Ann, and William, 1, and permitted the father to have custody of his daughter over week-ends once a month. Mrs. Lipps was awarded the personal property for the use of the children. Judge Rankin admonished the Lippses to get together on saving their equity in the dog kennels which they established at Monrovia, and which Mrs. Lipps manages.

AUTO CHIEF TO TELL OF 1931 PLANS

Willys-Overland's Leader Will Outline Projects to Southland Dealers

Plans of the Willys-Overland Company of Toledo for 1931 will be outlined to the company's Southern California distributors and dealers by L. A. Miller, president of the company, who will arrive in Los Angeles tomorrow on one of his swings around the country.

L. A. MILLER

Mr. Miller will be accompanied on his visit by Ward M. Canaday, president of the United States Advertising Corporation advertising counsel for the Willys-Overland company, and H. C. Tillotson, president of the Tillotson Manufacturing Company.

Since his election to the presidency of his company about eighteen months ago, Mr. Miller has spent much of his time in the field with his retail merchants. He was among the first to sound a warning to the automobile industry as a whole that it must immediately apply corrective measures and produce merchandise only on a scale with public consumption or suffer the worst reversal in the history of automobile manufacturing.

DYAS STORES TO OPEN RADIO DEPARTMENTS

The B. H. Dyas Company will hold an informal opening of its radio department at both the downtown and Hollywood stores next Friday. Three well-known lines, Radiola, Gilfillan and Philco, will be handled. The finest of radio service divisions also has been installed, it is said. The radio department in each store is on the second floor. S. P. Dalton, pioneer radio engineer, will be in charge of the downtown radio shop. Old-timers will remember he installed the first broadcasting station in Los Angeles. The engineer in charge of the department at the Hollywood store will be announced tomorrow.

CASEY EXPOSES EXTORTION PLOT

Says He Paid $35,000 as Hush Money

Threatened With Prison Term Exposure

Financier Lacks Funds to Make Restitutions

Details of payments of approximately $35,000 to parties in Missouri to prevent an exposure of a prison term served for forgery will be made to the authorities tomorrow by Thomas Casey, president of the Casey Investment Company of Huntington Park, it was announced at the District Attorney's office yesterday, when he will complete his story of an issuance of $175,000 worth of fraudulent notes and mortgages.

Casey started his revelations of forged notes Friday and admitted, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Ferguson, that he had obtained thousands of dollars from some thirty-five Huntington Park residents through his operations. He has also announced that he will plead guilty to charges of grand theft which will be asked in an indictment from the grand jury when it convenes Tuesday.

Authorities are anxious to obtain information from Casey on the asserted payments to Missouri people so they may make a complete investigation of the affairs of the 76-year-old financier. Casey said he used the money to pay Missouri parties who threatened him with exposure on a five-year term spent in prison after the collapse of a bank in that State.

With the whereabouts of $35,000 of the funds established, investigators from the District Attorney's office will start a close check on other business affairs of Casey in an attempt to locate some $140,000 not yet accounted for. Casey has expressed a desire to repay as much of the money as possible, but first investigation reveals only about $25,000 as all the property and holdings of the accused man. A bankruptcy proceeding will be necessary, according to the authorities, before this amount can be prorated among those who lost through purchase of forged notes and mortgages.

SUIT OVER GOLD CLAIM CONCLUDED

Defendants Win Decision of Judge in Contest Over Silver Lake Property

Gold in them thar hills formed the basis of a lawsuit decided yesterday by Superior Judge Morton, who found for the defendants in the action of Yetive A. Feinstein against Tom Chapman and Ray Whitson for money on a contract. Mining claims in the Silver Lake district, San Bernardino county, assertedly valued at $100,000, were involved.

According to Miss Feinstein's complaint, her father, Louis Feinstein, mine broker, on February 1, last, entered into an agreement to sell a group of seven claims to Chapman, Whitson, and others, the first payment of $12,500 to be paid August 6, last. The complaint continued that the defendants failed to make the payment, and Feinstein later assigned his interest to his daughter, Yetive, who brought suit.

The defendants denied that they contracted to purchase, setting up that Feinstein merely gave them an option to purchase the mining claims for $100,000, and that they subsequently took possession of the property and later abandoned it. Admitting they did not pay $12,500, they asserted that Feinstein did not have title from the original owners and was unable to deliver. Attorneys W. I. Gilbert and Thomas P. Cruce represented Chapman and Whitson.

ELECTRICAL BUSINESS PICKING UP

Visitors From East Here for Conferences Report Substantial Gains

"Electrical business hit the absolute bottom in September and since that time our books show a small but noticeable improvement. I am sure the turn has come, at least for us, and I hope for the rest of the country," declared T. K. Quinn, manager of the electric refrigerator department of the General Electric Company, yesterday.

Mr. Quinn, together with P. B. Zimmerman, sales manager, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday from Cleveland and attended the Notre Dame game and will preside at a two-day conference this week of Pacific Coast sales departments and distributors at the Biltmore. They are the guests of George Belsey at his home in Beverly Hills.

Within three years a $100,000,000 refrigerating business has been built up by the General Electric Company under the direction of Messrs. Quinn and Zimmerman.

"This climate is wonderful," said Zimmerman. "A week ago in Cleveland where we have our headquarters there was a two-foot snowfall. It has been nasty and raw and cold. I sat out under the open sky with a warm California sun playing on me and then I thought of Cleveland."

CAR KILLS NEGRO

An unidentified Negro was killed by an inbound Whittier Southern Pacific train yesterday at Sixteenth street and Long Beach avenue. Car company officials said he was apparently about 35 years of age and was walking on the right-of-way when struck. The body was taken to the County Morgue.

SEALS FUND PAYS FOR CLINICS

Mothers Given Health Instruction

Knowledge Passed to Homes

Dr. Harry Cohn, head of the tuberculosis division of the city health department, instructing mothers in the care of children. This clinic is supported by funds raised through Christmas Seals sales.

A REPORT issued yesterday by Miss Sidney M. Maguire, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Tuberculosis Association, now conducting its annual Christmas seal sale campaign, reveals that the association conducts an intensive drive in the home as part of its program to prevent the spread of tuberculosis.

The report states, "The follow-up work into the homes brings to the attention of the association numerous problems which seem to be only indirectly related to tuberculosis work but which are, nevertheless, of great importance.

"Often cases of malnutrition among both children and adults are found in homes where the family income is ample for proper feeding. In these cases an economic study is undertaken and an effort made to show the family how to live properly on its income. Instruction is given not only in what to buy, but where to buy it, how to cook it, and how to avoid waste. This work is included in the 'City Housekeeping Plan.'

"The so-called foreign problem has very little specific relation to the tuberculosis work. The lines of demarcation are very distinct. For example: A very large ratio of the American-born cases brought under the observation of the association's workers are Mexicans born in the United States. Second in number to these are native Mexicans and Negroes. The resistance of these classes is lower than that of the white races, but on the other hand, they are more docile and obedient."

CALIFORNIA HIGH COURT ADJOURNS

One of Busiest Sessions in Southland Completed as Tribunal Turns North

Completing a calendar made up of some 125 cases the California Supreme Court adjourned yesterday, with its next term scheduled for January in San Francisco.

Court attaches pointed out that the Los Angeles meeting was one of the busiest conducted here. Ninety-one cases were before the court on its opening day. Afternoon sessions were necessary on several days.

Among the important appeals heard was the State's appeal from the decision of the District Court of Appeal granting Alexander Pantages, theater man, a new trial on a charge of having attacked Eunice Pringle, dancer, in a downtown office building. The court took the case under submission, thus making a decision possible within ninety days from January 1.

SIGNALS RECOMMENDED

The Police Commission yesterday recommended to the City Council that traffic signals be installed at One Hundred and Sixty-fifth street and Vermont avenue. The report was transmitted to the Traffic and Lighting Committee.

PRIZES OFFERED FOR SOCIAL AID

How Would You Spend $1500 Monthly for Welfare?

Dr. Bogardus Announces Interesting Contest

Plans Must Provide for Existing Local Needs

A social service project contest for the best plan to spend $1500 a month to benefit humanity in Los Angeles and environs, for a period of from three to five years, has been announced by Dr. Emory S. Bogardus, director of the school of social welfare at the University of Southern California, who has been elected contest director.

Prizes of $600 have been provided by an unannounced donor to be given for the three best projects submitted, $600 as first prize, $250 as second prize and $100 as third prize.

JUDGES ANNOUNCED

Project manuscripts will be judged by Superior Judge Scott, Dr. George M. Day, professor of sociology at Occidental College; Henry P. Henderson, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A.; Mrs. Charles H. Richmond of the Social Service Commission, and Dr. George B. Mangold, professor of sociology at the University of Southern California.

The contest is open to anyone except relations of the judges, of the donor, and of the director. The closing date is February 15, 1931, and all projects should be submitted to Dr. Bogardus at U.S.C. by mail or in person during the first two weeks of February. Awards of prizes will be announced in March. More than one project may be submitted by an individual if different fictitious names are used. The donor reserves the right to put into operation any of the projects submitted, irrespective of judges' awards.

CONDITIONS LISTED

"The project that is planned must be in the social service field, must fill a need in Los Angeles and environs, and may be carried out under either religious or nonreligious auspices," states Dr. Bogardus.

"The project must conform to the laws and ordinances of the community in which it is to be carried out. The papers submitted must describe carefully (1) the particular need that is to be met, (2) give reasons why the project is important, and (3) furnish practical details in full for the administration of the project.

"Each proposed plan should include assurance of effective functioning without any supervision on the part of the donor of funds, who is in earnest in wishing to find some worthy cause that he may finance."

SUMMARY NECESSARY

Typed, and in double space, the manuscripts must be from 3000 to 5000 words in length, exclusive of any charts that may be included. Each paper must be prefaced by a one-page typewritten summary, giving the name of the proposed project, a condensed description of the need in three or four sentences, and a condensed statement of the project in a few sentences. All papers shall be signed with a fictitious name and be accompanied by a sealed envelope giving on the outside the fictitious name, and on the inside both the fictitious name and the real name of the contestant, with the address and telephone number.

Additional information may be obtained from Dr. Emory S. Bogardus, director of the school of social welfare, University of Southern California, University Park, Los Angeles.

Mexicans Try New Methods on Pineapples

MONTERREY (Mex.) Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Growing of pineapples in the States of Tamaulipas and Vera Cruz will be undertaken on an intensive scale by a number of planters. Heretofore the chief difficulty in profitably carrying on the industry has been the poor quality of the fruit produced. Efforts are now being made to improve its standards by importing scions from high-grade varieties in the Hawaiian Islands.

Alex Smith & Co. of Tampico have placed orders for several thousand pineapple scions with growers on the island of Oahu, one of the Hawaiian group. The soil and climate of different parts of Mexico are said to be ideally adapted to the commercial production of pineapples, and from the very earliest history of the country this fruit has been grown in quantities sufficient to supply the domestic demands. The fruit is practically immune from insect pests and there is no bar against its exportation to the United States and other countries.

Swiss Harbor Remains Busy

BASEL (Switzerland) Dec. 6. (AP) The Rhine harbor of Basel, handling 1,000,000 tons of freight up to November 1, is one of the few institutions in Switzerland which have not suffered from economic depression.

The 1,000,000 tons in the first ten months of 1930 compared with 810,000 tons in 1929 and 370,000 tons in 1928.

The traffic was about evenly divided between the Rhine-Rhone canal to Lyons and other points in France and the Rhine route itself to Strasbourg and down to the sea.

ECONOMY URGED IN SCHOOL GARB

Superintendent Bouelle in Warning to Executives

Elaborate Graduation Dress Barred as Unsuitable

Parents Asked to Co-operate in Curbing Expense

Lavish expenditures on the part of parents or pupils in connection with school graduation exercises is distinctly inimical to the democratic spirit of the Los Angeles school system, according to a statement sent to school executives yesterday by Superintendent of Schools Bouelle.

The statement embodies a general policy in regard to graduation ceremonies, which has been approved by the Board of Education and the superintendent instructs the various school executives to adhere to this policy with a view not only to keeping such ceremonies "simple and in keeping with the ideals sought to be established in a free public school" but also to preventing graduation day from becoming an economic burden to the parents of the graduates.

Mr. Bouelle's statement follows:

LONG STUDY

"At the request of the superintendent's office committees of vice-principals in the junior and senior high schools have for some time been studying the various problems which are continually arising in connection with the graduation ceremonies in the various schools.

"After a study of all the elements involved in the problem the vice-principals recently submitted a report of their recommendations to the superintendent's office.

"It must be stated at the outset that for many years school authorities have recognized the seriousness of the situation and have been doing everything possible to discourage lavish expenditures on the part of parents for dress and other items incidental to such occasions.

PARENTS RESPOND

"In the main, parents have responded wholeheartedly to the suggestions of school officials, with the result that in most of the schools these ceremonies have remained simple and in keeping with the ideals sought to be established in a free public school. In a few instances such co-operation has been lacking, resulting in extravagance and show, both of which are entirely out of harmony with the spirit of the occasion.

"To avoid unnecessary expense on the part of parents and further, to keep the ceremonies within reasonable limits, the following statement of general policy approved by the Board of Education is being sent to the various schools with instructions that it be carried out to the letter.

GENERAL POLICY

"(1.) The ideal of simplicity and avoidance of show should form the basis of all graduation exercises.

"(2.) The only positive requirement made of students for graduation is that they shall have been found worthy in character and citizenship and shall have completed in a satisfactory manner a required course of study prescribed for the secondary schools.

"(3.) The matter of dress is not a graduation requirement and students are at liberty to wear clothing which they already possess. In all cases, however, the graduation outfit, whether old or new, should be of an inexpensive type and in strict conformity with the ideals herein set forth.

ELABORATION BANNED

"(4.) In schools where girls' uniforms are used it is suggested that these be used for graduation dresses, thereby saving extra expense. When new dresses are made it is required that they be simple and not extreme in design and of such a type that they can be used after graduation. No materials more elaborate than crepe, georgette, voile or chiffon should be used. Lace and velvet are unsuitable materials. In all schools opportunity for making the graduation dress in the home economics department is afforded and girls should be encouraged in this project.

"(5.) Efforts on the part of students to add various items of extra expense to the ceremonies should be prohibited by school officials in charge of the activity.

"In conclusion it is earnestly hoped that through a close co-operation of parents and school officials a better understanding will result and the graduation season come to be a source of real joy and satisfaction to everyone concerned."

Students Index Patents for College Money

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 6. (AP)—As if secrets of zoology and engineering are not enough to weary one's brain, two students here have spent their spare time indexing steel patents to earn their way through college.

V. Everett Kinsey, 20 years of age, a senior in zoology at the University of Pittsburgh, and Thomas Hopkins, 21, a senior in commercial engineering at Carnegie Tech, met such success in publishing the index in limited numbers that they are compiling an index of patents on nickel and its alloys.

Their first book comprised 350 pages dealing with 1800 patents. They may continue their index work after graduation to cover the entire patent field.

BATON ROUGE (La.) Dec. 6. (AP)—A collection of old plantation diaries, journals and records and Confederate banknotes, dating from 1840 to 1900, has been given the Louisiana State University library by the De Clouet family of Lafayette, La.

Today's Bible Text

Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.—Rev. xxii:14.

THE INDUSTRIAL BAROMETER

Four hundred thousand dollars spent in industrial expansion in Los Angeles in one month, November, ought to convince the most pessimistic calamity howler that he has a myopic point of view.

MENTAL MENUS

This is a season when everybody's mind is turning toward buying books as gifts for Christmas. The covers of a book are much more deceiving than the traditional poke that covers the legendary pig. Why does not some one give short, informational book reviews on the radio?

THIRD DIMENSION

Science has invented an instrument which will enable an observer to look right through man and see all of his inner organs in three dimensions. If it would but establish his connection with a triangular domestic situation the instrument would find a ready sale among suspicious wives.

OLD AS HE FEELS

The time-honored adage that "a man is as old as he feels" is admirably exemplified in the statement of the well-known local club man and promoter, who on celebrating another birthday anniversary says he is "permanently 38." His friends, however, are surprised to find that he feels so old.

VICARIOUS EAR

If America just must make itself heard in a pandemonium of crashing noise maybe that electrical ear which has just been invented will save us from deafness, madness and perpetual irritation by hearing "America first." It is claimed that the device will decrease noise to a considerable degree.

FREE EMPLOYMENT

The woman who thought she would not have to pay the wages of a man whom she procured to do housework at a free employment bureau, is on a par with the idea of a woman in a near-by town who, on renting a house which was listed as "Free rent for a month and water paid" wanted to know how much she would be paid!

GEOGRAPHIC CONTENT

Those who cannot take their usual trip to Europe or the Orient this year should feel, with volcanic eruptions and earthquakes in different parts of the world, violent cyclones and floods in other sections and a far greater economic unrest in other countries, that California is just the place to which they would want to come if they were anywhere else.

STICK 'EM UP!

The bandits who held up the Security-First National branch on Western avenue got a real surprise party from a couple of courageous citizens who were not afraid to take a hand.

Chicago hides in the cellar until the police have let them all slip back into the underworld. New York pays tribute to the land pirates who ride high on the crime wave.

But when an oil station youth wrecked the machine and hopes of a get-away and a householder of the community kept his head and slipped out unnoticed from his home where one of the robbers was hiding to give the alarm, they accomplished a fine piece of strategy and courage.

Racketeers are finding that some desperadoes still know how to shoot and make it unhealthy for hold-ups in our salubrious climate. If a couple of citizens can put a crimp in the bandit business, the crime wave would soon ebb to a trickle with similarly prompt action on the part of others.

Sticking 'em up in the air is a setting-up exercise not many Angelenos feel the need of taking. Vigilance committees cleared the West of cattle rustlers and bad men a generation ago, and if Chief Steckel is stuck and his officers are too few to cope with the criminals, we have a few citizens to function. The western way may not always be according to Hoyle; but it seems exceedingly salutary and effective in a depressing situation.

A few more such captures and there will not be enough bandits to go around!

TARDIEU IS OUSTED

After what seems an unusually long existence for a post-war French government, Andre Tardieu and his ministers have been forced out of control by an adverse vote of the French Senate. While this is only the fourth time in fifty years that the Senate has overthrown a government, the more popular branch of the national legislature finds its principal amusement in making changes in the ministry. The parliamentary form of government has been contrasted with that of the United States, unfavorably to the latter, by many students of political science, yet its workings in France and its breakdown in Spain and Italy give rise to the doubt if the parliamentary form is after all so advantageous.

Both forms seem to have their strengths and their weaknesses. The American form is less responsive to popular will, but it has a stability and definiteness that no parliamentary government can have. One of the defects o. the American system is in evidence right now, in the meeting of a "lame-duck" Congress many of the members of which have been repudiated by their constituents and have thus ceased to be truly representative. But this is a defect readily curable; the "lame-duck" session will be abolished in time; while the defects of the parliamentary system seem inherent.

By parliamentary system is meant, of course, that system by which Cabinet ministers direct both executive and legislative action and either resign the moment any major item of their program fails of legislative support or dissolve the legislature and carry the issue to the voters. The American system consists of officials elected for set terms, with new elections automatically at fixed intervals. Of this system it may be said that the terms are usually too short for a good official and too long for a poor one, and that there is no method, except the very lumbering and cumbersome one of impeachment, or in the case of local governments the equally unsatisfactory recall, of getting rid of a man the voters want out.

In our system, disregarding the fiction of the Electoral College, the head of the nation is selected directly and given sufficient power so that he is the leader of his party, a real factor in the situation. President Doumergue of France is merely a figurehead; the real head of the French government is chosen, not directly by the people, but indirectly through the Parliament—disregarding another fiction, that the President selects him. The executive and legislative functions coalesce both in theory and in practice.

Here they are theoretically separate, but in practice the President directs legislation to a very large extent and would do so to a larger extent but for the breakdown of party responsibility introduced by the direct primary election system of choosing Congressmen and Senators. If the party had more to say about Congressional and Senatorial nominations, or rather if the party leaders had more to say about them, real party responsibility could be obtained and such malcontents and boat rockers as Borah and Hiram Johnson would quickly find themselves stripped of power for mischief.

It will be recalled that the London naval parley had to stop because the French government was overthrown in its midst and Tardieu and Briand had to go back to France and repair their political fences before it could be resumed. That is only one instance of the uncertainty of international negotiations where governments have uncertain tenure. The United States has been reproached because it turned down the Versailles Treaty after President Wilson took such a prominent part in its framing. While the United States Senate is the "graveyard of treaties" as no parliament has ever been, there is no danger here of the party leader being turned out of office unexpectedly in the midst of negotiations.

Nor is there danger of a general election being precipitated by the negotiations, with a delicate international adjustment thrown into the heat of politics. The American system permits an avoidance of such matters.

The parliamentary system is not necessarily more responsive to the popular will, either. The life of parliamentary bodies is indefinite and may easily be prolonged beyond the term of popular favor. The British law, for example, provides that there shall be a general election at least once in seven years, yet it is admittedly within the power of Parliament to amend this law and extend its own life, and a determined and well-organized majority could conceivably hang on for many years in defiance of popular will. In the space of four years, however, the American government can be changed completely, beyond the power of either President or Congress to prevent or modify.

The American system holds a pretty safe middle course between undue conservatism and undue radicalism, while parliamentary government is capable of going to extremes. This is genuinely a source of danger. The checks and balances incorporated in the American Constitution do at times hinder swift action when swift action is needed, but it oftener happens that they prevent impulsiveness when impulsiveness would be very bad for the country.

DRYS' DANDER UP

"The Drys' Dander Up" is the heading of a page in the Literary Digest. This was a straw vote that was not on the program.

The damp minority won a seeming victory because of the dry stay-at-homes in the last election; but it now finds it won also an aroused dry. It might have been better to let him snore.

The dry may have been asleep at the switch; but now the switch is open and the prohibition train is running out onto the main line. The drys are a modest, unassuming bunch that like an easy chair. They are camera-shy and are even willing to be used as doormats rather than stir up a fuss. They are worms that hesitate to turn. But when they do turn, it is generally a revolution. They turn into twisters that sweep everything into oblivion.

Some of the drys may be cranks; but cranks also turn. They have turned loose into the gutter before. They may even turn the alien Representatives in Congress back to the unwashed and fill them with the unsoaked before they are through.

Yep, the drys' dander is up! It is up into the tall hat of the parson who has been cartooned unpleasantly of late. It is rising up into the church steeple. It is up to the swivel chair in the factory; for industry finds prohibition a blessing. The dander is up to the driver's seat; for he knows a car cannot survive half sober and half drunk.

The drys' dander is not only up; but it is likely to stay up. It took considerable kick to wake it up; but it is up and will uphold the President and hold his hands and his policies up!

That was a bad day's work for the wets when Raskob, et al, got the drys' dander up.

WHAT'S THE HURRY?

Drivers zoom up street into collision. They rush down inclines at breakneck speed to be sirened off to the hospital. They snort up grades to keep up their momentum and screech down again like the king in the nursery rhyme—and for no other purpose.

Every intersection is a potential shambles and in many homes is a vacant chair. The sportsman calls it a bad break; but the coroner pronounces it bad brakes.

Furious travel is the weakness of an immature mind. Beginners are usually guilty of taking turns too hard. For this reason a large per cent of the snorting around that menaces safety is done by youngsters. Parents have lost control of their kids and the kids lose control of their cars.

Hurry is a lazy way of driving. It takes effort to throw out the clutch and on the brakes. So men gamble with death at blind intersections and take chances that would make the hair stand on end at Agua Caliente.

Almost all trouble can be reduced to the common denominator of hurry. Sideswiping is Death's favorite amusement on the big road. Horrors happen on the straightaways because an open stretch invites fool minds.

It is better to be tail of a funeral procession than its head in the hearse three days after..

What's the hurry?
Is the hoosegow homey?
Is the hospital inviting?
Is the mausoleum attractive?

LEE SIDE O' L.A.

By Lee Shippey

A COUPLE of years ago a novel called "The Singing Gold" appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal and its originality and force aroused such interest that afterward Houghton Mifflin brought it out as a book and it became one of the six best sellers in America, besides being much discussed in Australia and in England. That book was followed last summer by "Tharlane," by the same author, which through several months ranked second in the monthly list of best sellers. "Tharlane" has been published in England, too, under the title of "Earth Battle," and is just about "the book of the year" throughout the British Empire.

In fact, those two books have aroused more interest throughout the entire English-speaking world than have any other pair by one author in the last few years.

So Southern Californians ought to know that Dorothy Cottrell, the author, does not live on the far-flung plains of Australia, the locale of both stories, but in an adobe house she and her husband, Walter Cottrell, have been building on the hillside above Lake Elsinore these last two years.

Where There Still Is Breathing Room

But Dorothy Cottrell was an Australian and lived the life she has pictured so vividly. She grew up on a ranch of 500 square miles. They don't fool around with acre measurements much in Australia, where that wasn't considered a big place at all. It was forty miles from a railroad and to reach the railroad "town"—three general stores, a couple of hotels and about twenty residences—they had to pass through part of another ranch which contained 12,000 square miles.

As a little girl, Dorothy learned to drive a dog team and to shoot. When she was 7 infantile paralysis almost ended her career, but she recovered enough to be able to drive her dogs and shoot kangaroos and skin them herself, but never enough to be able to stand. She can drive a car now, but she still cannot stand.

But when she was in her teens she thought nothing of driving away twenty miles or more in that country of gigantic distances and primeval legacies, and took such excellent care of herself that her mother didn't have to worry about her. She trained one dog to come to her to be unhitched, in case her dog cart got ditched and she was rolled out helpless on the ground, and then to run home with a note asking for help.

She didn't ask anyone for sympathy. She was always the gayest member of the party. She is yet.

Yearning for Expression

A string of distracted governesses did their best to make a perfect lady out of Dorothy, but she was too lively for all of them. She studied art for a while, but though the natural beauty of her surroundings interested her much the romance of them interested her more. There was a great plain so full of larks and blooms and the yellow dust that the great droves of sheep sent up to make the whole atmosphere gleam with golden motes that the drovers called it the meadow of singing gold, but when she tried to picture it she thought more of man's struggle against nature there than about its physical aspects. Despite her gayety, she was interested in serious and fundamental things and the drama of life was far more to her than the color of it.

And then along came a young fellow named Walter Cottrell, who had a head full of ardent beliefs about men and things and human welfare and she got so interested she began to write. And writing was so much more fascinating to her than drawing had been that she wrote many columns of serious economic articles for Australian newspapers.

Islands of Romance

In 1922 she and Walter eloped in a wheezy Ford and went to one of the lovely islands off the coast of Australia for a honeymoon. It was just a small island about the size of Catalina and they weren't at all lonesome because they had two neighbors on the other side of it. It was a place in which life was so prolific that everything one stuck into the ground began to grow—even fence posts, if they weren't thoroughly dried out first. You could go down into the little bay and come back with a bucket of fresh oysters, if you cared for such things, and there were jungles of oranges.

One of their neighbors was a writer. Being thrown in such close contact with him that way, Mrs. Cottrell naturally got more interested in writing as a profession. She had never written anything but short articles. She determined to write a complete novel.

When it was finished she liked it so well that she decided to send it to some Sydney or Melbourne publication. But Walter was Scotch. "They won't pay you more than $300 for it," he advised. "Try it first on one of the big American magazines. Then if it comes back you still may send it to Melbourne."

It didn't come back, but a cablegram did. "Will you accept $5000 for first American serial rights?" asked the cable. The young author misread it at first. She thought it said $50. Then she looked again and thought it said $500. When she saw that it said $5000 she couldn't believe it. She drove forty miles over to the postoffice, through which the cable had come, to ask the postmaster if he were sure there was no mistake.

Dorothy Cottrell is young and very full of life, even though one leg won't quite function yet. Though she has only two books and some short stories to her credit, those books and stories have met with most unusual response. She has made a real impression on the entire British Empire and on the United States—and that totals up quite a few people. We ought to hear a good deal of her during the next three decades.

WHOSE WHO AND WHENCE?

Most of the victims of "Who's Who" are college graduates and the majority of these are guilty of graduating from Harvard and Yale. However, these two seats of learning are losing their grip and the big red book will have a hiatus of many pages in the future. Neither of these universities won a game this year, until they played each other. The Whosis now come largely from Southern California. Westward forward passes wing their way!

CORPSE CANDLES

Strange lights have been burning nightly with a weird purple glow at the tops of masts and on ends of spars of ships in San Francisco Harbor. Old salts call them "corpse candles" and say they presage calamity. They were seen just before the great earthquake. However, modern science has drained the swamps and put out the jack-o-lanterns and is snuffing out the corpse candles of the sea.

TO A TROUT

By James J. Montague

You should have had another look
Before you swam, in mad career,
From out the limpid depths and took
Inside your maw that fatal sphere.
You thought you'd done a feat, no doubt—
Bagged some new bright and shining fly,
But you don't know as much about
The game as I.

That orb you swallowed as you dashed
So swiftly from some hidden deep
And somewhere in your vitals cached
Will keep from you your meals and sleep.
No more you'll know a peaceful day
As here and there you sadly roam
Thus freighted with its weight; it may Break up your home.

Before I'd heard of such a thing,
My soul was calm, my heart was gay,
I often used to try to sing,
I knew full many a pleasant day.
But now I know what futile strife
Is wrapped up in a pill like that;
A once serene and cheerful life
Is dull and flat.

For now, till lengthened shadows slant,
Your soul consumed with dark remorse,
About the pond you puff and pant
Like us poor fish around the course.
From woe you never shall be free,
Your act you'll bitterly recall,
And curse the day you chanced to see
That wretched ball.

CONGRESSIONAL REAPPORTIONMENT

BY KYLE D. PALMER

Eighty years ago California elected two members to the national House of Representatives—both from San Francisco. That number remained fixed for thirty years and all of those elected came from localities in or around San Francisco Bay. In 1881, two additional Congressional Districts were created in this State and again all four Representatives came from Northern California.

Under the Federal census of 1890 California showed a growth that resulted in three new Congressmen for the State—all seven being elected from Northern California.

Just thirty years ago—in 1901—Southern California could boast of its first locally elected member of Congress—Representative Russell J. Waters, who went to Washington then the State's total House membership was increased to eight. Ten years later, in 1911, with the California delegation remaining the same, another Southern Californian, James McLachlan of Pasadena, was elected and one of the northern members was retired in favor of Sylvester C. Smith of Bakersfield.

Ten years ago, when the Federal census gave California three added seats in the House, making a total of eleven, eight seats were allocated in such a manner as to result in the election of eight Northern Californians and three districts, two being in Los Angeles county and the third consisting of Orange, Riverside, Mono, Inyo, San Bernardino, Imperial and San Diego counties, of necessity, going to residents of Southern California.

Now we come to the current situation in which, as a result of the census figures of 1930, California gains nine additional Congressmen and will, in the next Congress, seat twenty Representatives.

Thus, when the State Legislature meets in Sacramento next month for its biennial transaction of public business, one of the most important—perhaps the most important—item of legislation will be a measure enacted for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Federal Reapportionment Act.

Aside from the incidental perplexities attendant upon the business of carving nine new constituencies from the eleven now existing, and with due allowance for the understandable anxiety of the incumbents who desire a rearrangement that will not jeopardize their future political prospects, there are two formidable obstacles to a just reapportionment which should be understood and, if possible, eradicated.

Possibly the lesser of the two is the injudicious agitation of various redistricting problems by a few members of the State Assembly who seem more bent upon personal advantage than upon disinterested public service. A very large part of Southern California's strength in legislative action at Sacramento depends upon Southern California solidarity and if this is impaired by dissension, disagreement or working at cross purposes the consequences, it seems, should be obvious.

A more serious effort to defeat Constitutional action is sponsored by a determined clique of Northern California politicians. This group has promulgated a program entirely unacceptable to the people of Southern California and one wholly antagonistic to the welfare of this region and the State as a whole. It is a program based on selfish sectionalism, personal ambition and political expediency.

Briefly, the situation is this: Constitutional reapportionment of the twenty Congressional districts will bring not less than seven new districts to Southern California and, probably, add two new districts to the general region of Northern California. Thus the two great geographical divisions of the State, which are about even in population, will have a balanced representation at Washington.

The plan of those opposing Constitutional reapportionment calls for retention of the present district lines and the election at large of the nine new Representatives.

On this issue the question will be debated.

Gov.-elect Rolph has announced himself unequivocally in favor of strict Constitutional handling of the redistricting measure—and his influence will be a powerful one. However, opposition to adequate representation for this portion of the State comes not alone from political sources, but is found among certain business, industrial, banking and commercial elements in Northern California.

Southern California, from time to time, has had reason for complaining somewhat with respect to the share accorded this end of the State in local and national governmental affairs, but never more so than with regard to representation in the national Congress.

The 1930 census shows that California has a population in excess of 5,672,000; that slightly more than half this population is in the southern portion of the State and that Los Angeles county has approximately two-fifths of the total with a population of 2,199,557.

Division of the State into twenty Congressional Districts will establish an average population unit for each district of 283,600. This figure, of course, cannot be definitely followed, but it gives the unit upon which redistricting will—or should—be accomplished.

On such a basis, Los Angeles county, which now embraces the Ninth and the Tenth Congressional districts, will gain five new districts and have a total of seven Representatives in the 1933 Congress. Southern California outside of Los Angeles county will gain two new members—probably resulting in the division of the Eleventh District into two districts, and a new district to be worked out by legislative conference in which counties now belonging to the Eleventh, Eighth and Seventh districts may be arranged in a new relationship.

And thus, by logical steps, the subject of gerrymandering comes to the fore. This word was coined by a disgruntled Massachusetts editor more than 100 years ago when Gov. Gerry of that State so manipulated the districting of Massachusetts counties as to perpetuate a veritable monstrosity upon the political structure of the Bay State.

Gerrymandering has been a favorite occupation of countless politicians since the enterprising days of Gerry as, for instance, witness the manner in which California itself was redistricted in 1911.

The First California District runs along the coast all the way from the northern boundary to the outskirts of San Francisco; the Eighth District begins at the city limits of San Francisco and runs south to a line several miles south of the northern boundary of this county; the Second District starts at the northern boundary of California in the latitude of Cape Cod and runs south to a point far below San Francisco and many miles south of the latitude of Richmond, Va.

And the Eleventh District, which includes Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, Imperial, San Diego, Inyo and Mono counties, adjoins Baja California on the south and dwindles into its northernmost point on a line almost directly east of the State capital at Sacramento.

It is doubtful that the wily Gerry himself could have done a better job and now, 118 years after his historic accomplishment, he has numerous emulators who would, if the opportunity offered, attempt marked improvement on the original.

Of course, in justice, it should be explained that a not inconsiderable cause of California's crazy-quilt Congressional districting plan arises from the State's geographical formation, which sometimes makes it easier to travel several hundred miles from north to south than to go a very few miles from east to west, or vice versa, but even such physical obstacles doubtless can be minimized in the new districting scheme if the work is undertaken with better results as the goal.

Causes of Crime

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please accept my congratulations on the bold stand which you have taken recently in your articles on organized crime in this city. You have placed the responsibility of the increase of crime squarely on the shoulders of the present city administration and on the Mayor in particular. The employment of his private snooper squad not only amounts to flagrant, unprofessional conduct, but it frustrates the attempts of the police force while only a group of fanatical would-be moralists are served thereby. The hounding down of experienced and professional officers, instigated as it is from the Mayor's private office, serves no purpose than to divide the city against itself. No city government can stand under that strain.

May I call your attention to another factor which affects the crime situation in Los Angeles most vitally? I refer to our juvenile delinquency problem which is a growing concern in our city. During the last three years that ominous specter has assumed very definite proportions under a milk-and-water diet administered by our Juvenile Court. With Judge Scott on the juvenile bench the probation wards have grown to such alarming numbers that our probation office force is simply swamped. Since Judge Blake has taken charge of that department of the Superior Court conditions have improved hopefully.

Numerous repeaters and recidivists have been discharged with a pat on the back until juvenile car thieves, burglars, robbers and other delinquents smile at a threat of Juvenile Hall, where they meet their cronies only to plan newer and better tactics of crime. In fact, the initiated apply voluntarily for entrance when they know their confederates are detained there. The probation officer and the Board of Education, through its attendance division, could lay over evidence in volumes to show that we are breeding here as large a crop of young criminals as the old guard gangsters are sending us from the East, if not larger.

OYSTER HAS THREE SENSES

Inert as the oysters are they can still do astonishing things. The oyster pays no attention to ordinary noises. However, if while he is feeding he is startled by a thunderclap or explosion, the mouth closes tight. So he can hear.

If an oyster is placed in a tank near a window, and the shade is drawn to shut out the light, he closes his shells. Hence he can see.

The "mantle" is fringed with delicate tentacles, which have been identified as organs of touch and feeling, as well as of taste and smell.

Skies Cloud Up for Rain Maker

Charles Mallory Hatfield, self-styled rain-maker of Glendale, makes $6000 a year on contracts to produce rain by means of releasing chemicals into the atmosphere, according to the separate-maintenance complaint of his wife, Mabelle Claire Hatfield, an answer to which was on file yesterday.

Hatfield asserted his present property is worth only $4000, and that the only community property is a small deposit in a Glendale bank. This money was divided by stipulation of attorneys.

SUIT REVEALS SOCIETY MART

Bartering of Contacts for Business Exposed

Introduction Worth $24,082 in Realty Deal

Sale of Actor's Home for $540,000 Involved

How contacts in Beverly Hills society circles were commercialized as the basis of the sale of a $540,000 home to L. S. Barnes, oil millionaire, was told during the trial of the suit of J. E. King, Santa Monica real estate agent, who claimed damages for having "tipped off" to the firm of J. Earlton Moore & Co. the fact that Barnes was in the market for a big estate.

A jury in Superior Judge Warne's court subsequently awarded King a verdict for $24,082.50, holding that his introduction of Miss Gloria Barnes, the oil man's daughter, to Harley A. Moore, a member of the firm, was the opening wedge to one profitable deal for the defendant. Moore cultivated the acquaintance of Miss Barnes, it was testified, through their mutual enjoyment of horseback riding on West Bay bridle paths.

The property purchased by Barnes was sold by Frances Marion, widow of Fred Thompson, film actor. Its is situated in the Santa Monica Mountains back of Beverly Hills, and the house, of twenty-two rooms is in the midst of a fourteen-acre estate. It contains spacious stables, riding rings and corrals. A deposition by Mrs. Thompson stated that she had paid Hedda Hopper, motion-picture actress and real estate operator, a commission of $7500 for the sale of the Thompson property.

Another piece of property involved in the suit was the old Charles Ray residence in Hollywood, one of the show places of Southern California in the days when Ray was active on the screen. This property was sold for $110,000, and King claimed to have introduced the purchaser, Alfred F. Smith, president of the Monolith Cement Company, to a member of the defendant real estate firm.

LOS ANGELES NEW SOURCE OF OPTIMISM

Returning Clothier Avers City May Lead Nation to Prosperity Once More

Los Angeles is well prepared to sound the keynote of a new national business optimism. This conclusion is based by Harry Dine, vice-president and general manager of Harris & Frank, clothiers, on his recent first-hand observation of eastern conditions, as well as on local business developments. His firm, he asserts, has done more business in the last month and a quarter than it did in the same period last year, with indications of a favorable continuance of trade.

With Los Angeles exerting a large influence in national affairs its expression of confidence in a dawning new prosperity should have a profound psychological effect throughout the country, he believes. Pessimism has been hiding the fact from too many persons that the country is fundamentally sound and it is high time for the nation in general to realize that conditions are shaping for the better, according to Mr. Dine's view of the situation. In this new concept, he advocates a leadership on the part of Los Angeles, warranted by a progress actuated with the right kind of energy and vision.

Needy Children Will Get Gifts From Mission

Thousands of poor children of Los Angeles will be guests of the board of directors of Midnight Mission at an entertainment to be given at Philharmonic Auditorium at 2 p.m. on the 23rd inst., according to announcement made yesterday by Mrs. D. R. Covell, executive secretary of the mission.

The program will include vocal and instrumental numbers by artists, selections by a choir of children picked from various churches, and the appearance of Santa Claus who will be assisted by motion-picture stars.

Following the entertainment each little guest will be presented with a specially prepared box lunch, together with a shopping bag containing enough food for a normal family.

Planter Sues Hotel Man in Damage Case

A. C. James, 83-year-old Nicaragua coffee planter, yesterday sued Charles B. Hamilton of the Alexandria for $150,000, asserting he was assaulted and thrown out on the sidewalk in front of the hotel.

The incident occurred last Wednesday, according to the complaint, which was filed by Attorney Nathan Goldberg.

"Nothing to it," hotel officials said.

CITY BEAUTIFIERS TO MEET WEDNESDAY

The Los Angeles League of City Beautifiers will meet at Barker Brothers' auditorium at 11 a.m. on Wednesday. Lunch will be served at 12:30. Byrd Mock in Indian costume will recite an original Indian poem, "The Maid of Pend Oreille,' accompanied by Chief Thundercloud in an original chant.

STEAM BOILERS PROTESTED

Steam boilers placed next to his home at 34 Thirty-second avenue, Venice, yesterday caused Edgar W. Johnson to complain to the City Council. The Council tabbed it "referred to the City Engineer for attention."

City Planners to Meet Soon

The annual officials' day of the Association of City Planners is to be held on the 13th inst. in the main dining-room of the Chamber of Commerce. George R. Bliss, secretary of the special beach and coastline committee appointed at the last session of the Legislature, will give a preview of the committee work. Tom Rivers, secretary of the International Recreation Congress, will report on the national situation regarding recreation.

ILLINOISANS TO MEET

Illinoisans will meet Monday evening at 246 South Hill street for a program of readings, classic dances and songs.

Siren Nuisance to Be Abated

If a recent order of the Police Commission is complied with, residents hereafter will not be annoyed by the screeching sirens of motorcycle officers acting as outriders to some visiting nonentity or advertising stunt. The commission yesterday reported to the City Council, in connection with a complaint voiced against the practice some weeks ago by Charles Brown, that "strict orders" have been issued.

However, the matter, as reported to the Council, says that "strict orders will eliminate any repetition of complaints of this character," but makes no mention of eliminating the practice.

AFFAIR WILL BE GIVEN TO AID FREE-BED FUND

"A sermon in song," arranged by Edith Claudia Wirsen, will be given under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of the California Hospital at the Angelica Lutheran Church, Fourteenth street and Burlington avenue, for the benefit of the free bed fund at 8 p.m. Monday.

TRAFFIC HAZARD PROTESTED

A petition from C. E. King and other residents was received yesterday by the City Council asking that some steps be taken toward correcting what they term a traffic hazard at Sixth street and Beaudry avenue. The communication was referred to the Board of Police Commissioners and the Traffic and Street Lighting Committee.

Ramona Village Offers Program This Afternoon

Frontier history will be re-enacted this afternoon at Ramona Indian Village on West Washington street when Chief White Horse Eagle will be the honor guest at a program of Indian dances and riding stunts by cowboys. School-children will be admitted free.

In addition to the program, visitors will be invited to visit the $25,000 museum, which includes relics collected by Robert E. Callahan and San Diego Rawson. Mr. Rawson, poet and world traveler, will be present.

Many articles will be exhibited.

AUTO ACCIDENTS LESS THIS YEAR

Orange Coroner Called in Forty-nine Cases

Safety Campaigns Helped to Remedy Conditions

Highway Patrol Given Much of the Credit

SANTA ANA, Dec. 6.—The annual toll from automobile accidents in Orange county, which reached the record number of seventy-four in 1929, will be well under that figure this year and probably under the 1928 total of fifty-seven, records of County Coroner Charles D Brown showed today. So far there have been forty-nine deaths that could be attributed directly to motor vehicles this year, Brown's books reveal. If the death rate continues over the holiday period as it has in the past eleven months the total will approach fifty-five deaths from automobiles in the year, it was said.

Various reasons have been assigned for the decrease in motor-vehicle fatalities, chief of which are the safety campaigns in the public schools and the economic depression which has brought about reduced operation of motor vehicles. Tightening of penalties for persons convicted of driving while intoxicated is said to have had a beneficial effect in reducing the number of persons killed this year.

Increased vigilance of the California highway patrol in granting operators' licenses and cancellation of licenses where persons are shown to be incompetent to drive are other factors entering into the reduction of the annual death toll, officials said.

Automobile deaths in Orange county since 1925 are as follows, according to Brown's books: 1925, thirty-six; 1926, twenty-nine; 1927, fifty-two; 1928, fifty-seven; 1929, seventy-four; 1930 to date, forty-nine.

Woman Holds Boy Prowler for Police

GLENDALE, Dec. 6.—Waiting in the darkness of her home until a burglar had opened the window and crawled into the bedroom, Mrs. Adella Wichert, 1141 East Harvard street, met the intruder with a revolver and held him until the arrival of the police.

Mrs. Wichert heard the prowler before he attempted to open the window and telephoned police headquarters. The burglar, who gave his name as William W. Lock, 17 years of age, of 236-A South Adams street, is said to have confessed to Mrs. Wichert and to the police that he had robbed her home on a former occasion.

Mrs. Wichert, before turning the lad over to the officers, took him to his home, where she recovered jewelry that had been taken in a previous burglary and the police later recovered several other articles that had been taken from the Wichert home. Locke has been turned over to the Juvenile Court authorities.

REALTY MEN TO AID ASSESSOR IN WORK

BURBANK, Dec. 6.—The local real estate board is to serve an additional service here. County Assessor Ed W. Hopkins has written requesting that the board's appraisal committee place values on certain pieces of property in Burbank as an aid to the Assessor's office in reaching a proper valuation for the coming assessment season. The letter from Hopkins inferred that he intends to appeal to various real estate boards in the county to assist him in readjusting values according to present business conditions. The local board will immediately comply with Hopkins's request.

FILM CORPORATIONS TO START BUILDING

BURBANK, Dec. 6. — Building permits were issued today to Warner Brothers and First National Corporation for an addition to the restaurant building on the premises of the two companies in this section of San Fernando Valley. The expenditure will be $8000. A $1200 addition also will be built to the Vitaphone building. It is stated today that these two activities are the beginning of a large building program soon to be carried out by the picture companies.

ACCUSED MURDERER IN COURT FRIDAY

SANTA ANA, Dec. 6.—Albert Sutherland, 30-year-old Smeltzer rancher and truck driver, who in asserted self-defense shot and killed Bert Meeks, a neighbor, last Sunday night, appeared before Superior Judge George K. Scovel on an information filed against him by the District Attorney's office charging murder. At the request of Attorney David G. Wellin, defense counsel, arraignment of the defendant was postponed until next Friday morning.

CONTRACT LET FOR SCHOOL AT ORANGE

ORANGE, Dec. 6. — The Orange elementary school board met last evening and awarded contracts for the construction of a building for the Lydia D. Killefer school, which will front on Olive street a short distance from Walnut avenue.

A bid of $31,692 by Jules Markel, a Santa Ana contractor, was accepted. H. O. Ehlen got the heating contract. Work on the new structure will begin not later than the 15th inst. and will be completed by April 1.

MINISTERS' MEET DISTURBED

Hotel Proprietor and Waiter Engage in Fight Concerning "Tips" Given at Meal

UPLAND, Dec. 6.—A quiet, peaceful convention of preachers at Camp Baldy, September 17, was the inspiration for the most enthusiastic battle of crockery and potato mashers ever staged in this conventional canyon, it was brought out when Foster Curry, proprietor of Camp Baldy resort, appeared in Superior Court at San Bernardino to answer charges filed against him by Ben W. O'Rear, who was formerly employed by Curry as a waiter at the resort.

O'Rear asked $20,000 as his purse for the fight he and Curry and others are said to have engaged in at the resort. At the hearing it was brought out that the ministers from Ontario and Upland were in session at Camp Baldy and left tips on the table, which O'Rear refused to split with the rest of the help in the kitchen and dining-room.

According to his version of the battle Curry took it upon himself to divide the tips, even though they were in O'Rear's pocket. To get to the tips it became necessary to upset O'Rear and shake him, it was testified.

O'Rear objected, and hurled a barrage of missiles at Curry in the dining-room, the missiles consisting of most everything except the building itself.

During the melee O'Rear was downed and somehow Mrs. Curry was precipitated upon him, he testified.

Then when things began to pick up a little livelier O'Rear picked up a large water jug and took careful aim, with Curry the objective or target. While he was aiming, a cook appeared on the scene from the kitchen. He was armed with a potato masher, and brought it down with a thud on O'Rear's head, so the story said in court. O'Rear went down again, and the two sought to shake the tips from his pockets.

The fight waxed still warmer, and came to a halt by O'Rear hurling a glass through the door as he left. He filed suit for $20 000, saying the scrap was worth that much to him.

The number of witnesses called told so many interesting angles of the battle, and told them so fast the court reporter gave up his job of trying to get official report of the proceedings for the court records. Superior Judge Allison decided the fight was a good one, but not worth that much money.

Consequently O'Rear got nothing but the pleasure of telling about it to an enthusiastic court audience.

Redlands Opens Christmas Week With Preview

REDLANDS, Dec. 6.—Redlands celebrated the opening of the holiday season with a big preview of the Christmas windows and Christmas decorations in the stores last night, bringing one of the largest crowds into the business section in the history of the city. Most of the decorations in the downtown section are now complete.

There were no sales made in the stores, according to the agreement among the merchants. All the windows were dressed with Christmas merchandise and the lights along the front of the stores and the Christmas trees placed all through the downtown section were lighted.

The American Legion drum corps furnished music and also the high school band. The merchants of the city say they have the finest stock of holiday goods they have ever had and they are hopeful for a good Christmas trade.

Redlands is getting ready now to provide a merry Christmas for thousands of children with oranges, for every packing house in the district is busy packing fruit to be sent east for the holiday trade.

Boat Service Into Mexico Is Increased

ENSENADA, Dec. 6. — Organization of special Mexican tourist parties from Seattle, Vancouver, Portland and San Francisco is planned by the Pacific Steamship Company, according to R. B. Schutten, assistant general passenger agent of the Admiral Line.

Advantages and fame of Ensenada, Baja California, as a winter and summer resort, are to be broadcast over the Pacific Northwest by the steamship company, and the excursions by water here will include stopovers in Los Angeles and San Diego.

Liners to be used in the Canada-to-Mexico service will include the Emma Alexander, Ruth Alexander, Dorothy Alexander, Admiral Rogers, Admiral Peoples, Admiral Watson and Admiral Evans.

The San Diego stopovers will make it possible for the northern visitors to cover both Agua Caliente and Ensenada, Mexico's two famous playgrounds, during their southern voyage.

Nervy Burglar Attempt Fails

OXNARD, Dec. 6. — "Don't move, I'll blow your brains out," was the command given C. E. (Dad) Burns, local automobile salesman, when he was awakened this morning at his residence at 618 Palm Drive.

Burns did not move, but Mrs. Burns, in an adjoining room, heard the talking and turned on her light. When the light shone, the burglar, who was dressed in a gray suit, a cap and without a mask, departed hastily, shouting: "Everybody outside."

The attempted robbery occurred about 2 a.m. No trace of the burglars has been found.

JUDGE LEARNS ABOUT COSTS OF LIVING

SANTA ANA, Dec. 6.—Judge Scovel of department No. 3, Orange county Superior Court, had a new slant on the high-cost-of-living problem which frequently confronts him in deciding actions involving domestic relations. According to calculations of court attaches and newspaper observers the existing records for lowness of upkeep were smashed to very small bits when William Griset, Orange county dry farmer, testified that he could live on $4 a month. The judge could hardly believe it and asked Griset to repeat it. Griset did repeat it and added "$4 is what I said."

The dry farmer, haled into court by his wife, Mrs. Eva Griset, to show why he should contribute to the support of his three children, said he had a cow and chickens and their produce plus $4 paid the monthly food bills. Judge Scovel noted the fact very carefully.

He allowed Mrs. Griset $40 a month for the support of the children.

MAYOR ELECTED AT MANHATTAN BEACH

MANHATTAN BEACH, Dec. 6.—George C. Knox was elected Mayor of this city at the regular meeting of the City Council last night. Knox has been a member of the City Council for two years and succeeds Mayor George E. Delevan, Jr., who has resigned.

Edward Lockly of the Metlox Corporation, is filling the vacancy on the board.

BURBANK WILL GET TELETYPE MACHINE

BURBANK, Dec. 6.—One of the new police teletypes is to be installed in Burbank by the Sheriff's office, it is given out here by Chief of Police Bergh. County Supervisors recently appropriated money for ten of the new machines. One of them will be installed here.

BILLBOARDS TARGET OF COUNCILMEN

Redlands Dads May Adopt Drastic Law in Near Future

REDLANDS, Dec. 6.—An ordinance which would eliminate all the billboards in the city is being considered by the City Council at the urging of the public-affairs committee of the Contemporary Club, of which Mrs. M. J. Sweeney is the chairman.

The ordinance is similar to that which is in effect in Palo Alto and is drastic, for it eliminates billboards of all kinds and permits only advertisement of a business being conducted on the property where the sign is placed and also signs of for rent or for sale.

Some of the Council members are doubtful whether such a drastic ordinance could legally be enforced and City Attorney Walter Hartzell is making a careful study of the ordinance to report at the next meeting of the Council.

The public-affairs committee of the Contemporary Club has for months been waging a campaign to rid the transcontinental highways of billboards and signs and has made considerable progress, the chairman reports.

Should the ordinance be passed it would clear away all the billboards in the city within a period of thirty days.

Ontario Board Fails to Select Election Date

ONTARIO, Dec. 6. — Meeting at Hotel Ontario for the purpose of setting a date for a special election to decide whether Ontario enters the Metropolitan Water District, the Ontario city committee on water failed to reach a decision, and another meeting will be held in January, it was announced yesterday.

At the close of the meeting, Dr. C. L. Emmons, chairman of the committee said: "We failed to recommend any action at the present time."

Unless Ontario votes to enter the water district, by March 1, next, the city will have to go through the process of making application again for entry.

When the City Council decided not to hold a special election last November 4, to permit the voters to decide on entry, the present committee of twelve was appointed to set a future date.

PROMINENT CLUBMAN THROWN FROM HORSE

PASADENA, Dec. 6. — Harvey Bartlett of 1016 Echo Park avenue, Los Angeles, is reported to have been seriously injured today when he was thrown from a horse at the Flintridge Riding Club. The horse shied at a flying bit of paper, and tossed Bartlett over its head.

The victim, said to be a prominent clubman, was given first aid in the Pasadena Emergency Hospital for deep lacerations of his head and legs. His condition is not critical.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR DAM MATERIAL

TORRANCE, Dec. 6.—The first contract on work incident to the building of Boulder Dam to reach local industries was awarded the International Derrick Company of this place yesterday. The order is for approximately 24,000 tons of steel ties for the Southern Sierras Power Company of Riverside, to be used in the company's power line from San Bernardino to the Boulder Dam site. Full-time work at the plant is scheduled to start within a week.

HELP TO UNEMPLOYED

REDONDO BEACH, Dec. 6. — All city street employees have been placed on an alternating shift schedule as an aid to the unemployment situation here. Voluntary pay cuts made by heads of the departments, which were accepted tentatively by the City Council yesterday, will be given special consideration at the meeting of the Council on the 18th inst.

Glendale Busy Finding Jobs

GLENDALE, Dec. 6.—Out of a total of 320 applications filed with the municipal employment bureau organized to cope with the unemployment situation here, more than half, or a total of 115, have been placed at work on various city or private projects, the bureau officials reported today.

Conditions here are declared to be favorable, the officials pointing out that out of a city of more than 60,000 population only 320 applications for work have been received. Two street contracts, the widening and paving of San Fernando Road and the installation of lights on Chevy Chase Drive, are to be started shortly and it is predicted that these two operations will afford openings for many more workmen, especially as the contractors have agreed to employ Glendale labor wherever possible.

WANT PAVING HALTED TILL BONDS PICK UP

VAN NUYS, Dec. 6.—A petition today was sent to the Board of Public Works asking that work on the improvement of Tyrone avenue, between Bessemer street and Magnolia avenue be held up until there is a favorable change in business conditions. The petition, signed by property owners along the thoroughfare, asks that the board turn down the only bid made on the work, asserting that the bid is 30 per cent too high and much above the estimate of the City Engineer. The petition states that street improvement contractors are now bidding extra high on all work because the bond-buying market is extra weak, and that in order to sell the improvement bonds at the huge discount at present demanded, contractors make their bids high in order to cover such a loss. "Wait until there is a better call for street bonds," the petition states, "and then ask again for bidders on the improvement."

NIBLICK MADE SECRETARY

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 6.—Charles Niblick, North Hollywood postmaster, was elected secretary of the local Kiwanis Club at the annual meeting held here. He succeeds Wilbur Price. The club's new president, Harvey E. Oatman. D. C. Coates, vice-president, and Clarence Kennedy, district trustee, will be installed at the last club meeting of this month.

JOBS GIVEN WORKMEN

HUNTINGTON PARK, Dec. 6.—Twenty-five additional workmen have been given employment at the S. Karpen & Brothers' furniture plant on Irvington avenue. The company has recently added a mattress and bed springs department to the plant, and new machinery is being installed in the factory building.

TICKETS ARE TEMPTATION

Valuable Pasteboards Recovered After Disappearing in the Mails; Janitor Missing

ALHAMBRA, Dec. 6.—Alex Crampton saw the U.S.C.-Notre Dame game today, but for the past few days the prospects had been uncertain. All because of Crampton's tickets falling into the wrong hands.

United States postoffice officials are today searching for Fred Walker, 25 years of age, who is charged with fraudulently securing four football tickets belonging to Crampton.

The pasteboards were recovered at noon today, however, and turned over to the rightful owner.

Walker lives next door to Crampton. When the postman brought a notice of a registered letter for Crampton he left it in Walker's mailbox by mistake.

Walker, it is said, went to the postoffice and signed for the letter which contained the tickets. Then he sold them.

The tickets were recovered today, two in Alhambra and two in Los Angeles, just in time to be restored to Crampton. Postoffice Inspector Lowe and Postmaster B. N. Marriott are working on the case.

Walker, who was janitor for a large local business house, disappeared soon after securing the tickets, and has not been seen since. He has a wife and two children.

Chamber Asks Investigation of Accounts

HUNTINGTON PARK, Dec. 6.—Demand that the books of the Walnut Park Mutual Water Company be audited by a public accountant is to be made by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of this community, it is announced by Ross Bartlett, president of the local chamber, and he also states that a demand is to be made that the Walnut Park water system be turned over to the property owners of the community. Thomas M. Casey, at the head of the Casey Investment Company with offices on Seville street, Walnut Park, is president of the water company. Casey was arrested this week on charges of manipulation of trust deeds and mortgages to the extent of approximately $150,000.

Bartlett calls attention to the fact that there are 4000 shares of authorized stock in the Walnut Park Mutual Water Company with a par value of $25 a share; that every Walnut Park lot carries with it a share in the water company.

A report of the water company was presented before the Chamber of Commerce by an official of the company a few weeks ago but this report does not seem to have been satisfactory.

Casey, for several years, had an office in Huntington Park, known as the Thomas M. Casey Investment Company, but three or four years ago moved the offices to Walnut Park, locating on Seville street. The water company has maintained a Walnut Park office in the offices of Casey. It is said by Bartlett that the main office, however, is at 111 West Fourth street, Los Angeles, where the Victor Girard organization has its offices.

Teachers Free to Use the Rod

ALHAMBRA, Dec. 6.—It's no longer necessary for the teacher to get the parents' permission before using the rod. The corporal-punishment rule which has long been in effect in Alhambra schools has been amended by the board of education and from now on teachers or principals may deal out proper punishment without first getting written consent of parents.

The decision of the board was the result of an investigation of several reported incidents involving the punishing of school children by teachers. The survey also showed, according to Forrest V. Routt, superintendent of schools, that only a few Southern California cities required consent of parents to punish children. The board agreed that the rule should be changed to assist teachers in maintaining discipline, but made it plain that a teacher is forbidden to slap or strike a pupil on the face or head.

The new rule on the local books is as follows: Punishment may be administered by teachers or principals in presence of another teacher and out of sight and hearing of the other pupils. Under no circumstance is a child to be slapped in the face or struck on the head.

CITY EMPLOYEES RAISE FUND FOR CHARITY

SOUTH GATE, Dec. 6.—A fund is being raised by the employees of the city to assist in the care of the needy, each employee and department head to place not more than 3 per cent of his monthly salary into the fund, according to Mayor Middlemiss. A board of directors consisting of Councilman Roy Hodgson, Rev. F. L. Bennetts, Rev. Ford Gilbert and Bishop Morris Parry, has been formed and the members of this board will make an investigation into each case where financial assistance is sought. Hart Reynolds is chairman of the organization, Louise M. Rothkranz, treasurer, and H. C. Pieffer, secretary. It is believed that a fund of at least $1300 will be raised.

FACTS ABOUT MARRYING

Orange County Newspaper Man Gathers Some Interesting Data From the Official Records as to Wedlock, Divorce and Alimony

SANTA ANA, Dec. 6.—The average bride in Southern California is 25 years of age and the average bridegroom is about 27½ years of age, according to figures compiled here today by a newspaper man on the Courthouse "beat" and which he says seem to be true. Couples come here from all points of the Southland to be married.

The average must not be far off because it was about the same three years ago when the scribe came out of a mathematical huddle with the same figures on the ages of the average couple.

Further interesting results of his numerical gymnastics showed the following:

Six out of ten couples married here come from Los Angeles and seven out of ten couples come from Los Angeles county.

There is a slight increase in the number of women who are marrying mates younger than they are. Marriage license clerks say that when the bride is the older she usually does the most of the talking.

The average fee handed a justice of the peace or preacher for the ceremony is $1.75. The Mexicans pull down the average. The fees are really gifts.

There are fewer divorces between 30 and 40 than there are between 40 and 50. Divorces between couples 28 to 30 years of age are rare. After the 40 mark has been passed the marital confusions increase, but drop off again after the half-century mark has been passed.

In other words, the first ten years of married life are the least difficult to pass in marital tranquillity, but after the first ten years the casualties increase.

The average amount allowed for support of complaining wives is $40 a month and the average amount allowed for the support of children is $15 a month. Silk stockings sometimes cost as much in the support bill as several other necessities combined.

The average time required to hear the evidence in a divorce case along with corroboration is fifteen minutes. Desertion cases are the cases requiring the least time in court.

Drunkenness is no longer a leading cause for divorce.

Zane Grey to Take Greatest Fishing Trip

ALTADENA, Dec. 6.—Zane Grey, famous author and sportsman, will leave within two weeks for Tahiti, which will constitute the first leg of the most extensive fishing trip ever attempted. Accompanied by his 15-year-old son Loren and Capt. Laurence D. Mitchell, Mrs. Mitchell and daughter, Frances Mitchell, Mr. Grey plans to spend the next two years in covering 18,000 miles of fisherman's paradise.

The group will sail for Tahiti from San Francisco before Christmas and will establish their first camp at Flower Point, fifty-five miles south of Papeete, Tahiti. At this camp the party will await the author's new fishing yacht, Fisherman Eleven, now being completed at Wilmington in the Los Angeles Shipbuilding Company's yards.

After boarding the new fishing schooner, the Grey party plan to cruise leisurely about the waters in the vicinity of the South Sea Islands, New Zealand, Australia, Madagascar and Africa.

In Lake Tanganika, Africa, Mr. Grey will attempt to catch a 500-pound Nile perch, no specimen of which has ever been landed successfully with rod and reel.

Baby Lima Men to Get Payment

RESEDA, Dec. 6.—Member growers of the San Fernando Valley Bean Growers' Association next Wednesday will receive an additional payment on this year's crop, it is stated today by John H. Walters, manager for the growers, who is busy making out checks. A sum in excess of $12,000 will be distributed, bringing payments to date to about 3 cents a pound.

This payment will be the third to have been made this season, the total of all to amount to $109,751 when the present checks are mailed. The first payment released $35,000 in cash in the valley; the second, made about November 15, amounted to $59,000.

None of the growers are satisfied with the present bean-market situation. In the four West Valley bean warehouses more than twice as many baby limas are in storage and awaiting shipping orders than a year ago. The weak market has forced the Association to hold much of its large harvest. It is stated eastern markets are now absorbing Colorado beans. This has greatly interfered with orders on the Southern California crop.

INSURANCE COMPANY PAYS BURBANK CLAIM

BURBANK, Dec. 6.—Burbank is in receipt of $700—just like that. The amount came as a surprise. City Attorney Mitchell presented the City Council with a check for the amount from an insurance company, in payment for damage done to one of the city's fire trucks in an auto accident, July 17, 1929. The payment was a compromise between the city and the insurance company, after Burbank some time ago filed suit to collect the amount of damages claimed. The court case has been withdrawn.

ILL HEALTH REASON FOR TWO DEATHS

Man and Woman End Their Lives at Redlands in One Day

REDLANDS, Dec. 6.—Two suicides in twenty-four hours was the record for this city today, the first being that of W. E. Ellington, 55 years of age, and caretaker at the Redlands Country Club, and the second that of J. R. Brightman, 60, and for twenty-eight years a business man in Redlands.

Mr. Ellington took his life in his room at the country club. He placed the muzzle of a shotgun against his head while lying on his bed and pulled the trigger with the toe of his right foot. Workers in the kitchen heard the shot, investigated and found the body. Ellington had been ill with asthma for many years and brooded over his condition.

Mr. Brightman took his life at his home in the rear of the store on Orange street. He left the store early in the morning and told the men not to disturb him as he was sick and intended to go to bed. They went to the house when the store closed last night and found him in bed with a bullet through his head and his revolver on the bed beside him.

He left a note to his two daughters, Mrs. Frank Gow and Mrs. Roy Glass of Hollywood, telling them that he had been sick so long and suffered so much he could not stand it any longer and asking them to forgive his shortcomings. He had had a large grocery store on Orange street for about fifteen years.

Navy Aircraft in Intensive Hunt for Boat

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 6.—Twelve missing San Pedro fishermen today were the object of search by 1500 navy officers and men, as ten destroyers, thirty navy planes and the aircraft carrier Langley started northward over a 200-mile front from Guadalupe Island, 220 miles southwest of Point Loma, in an attempt to locate the fishing vessel Fidelity, overdue fifteen days at San Pedro. The area to be covered today, tomorrow and Monday approximates 117,000 square miles, it was said today at the headquarters of Rear-Admiral J. M. Reeves, commanding the carrier divisions of the United States Fleet. Of this, the Langley and destroyers will cover approximately 70,000 miles, the remainder being left for search by six seaplanes.

The Langley and destroyers, heading northward on a 200-mile front, will proceed for 350 miles. The seaplanes, at their greatest distance from shore during the search, will be 400 miles at sea.

Truck Driver Held in Jail

SANTA ANA, Dec. 6.—Held responsible for an accident which may cost the life of another man, Cardoza D. Ross, 29 years of age, truck driver, residing at 11627 Ruby street, Los Angeles, was arrested at San Juan Capistrano by State Motor Traffic Officer Joe Cleaver and brought to the County Jail, where he was booked on suspicion of manslaughter.

According to information obtained at the County Jail, Ross, driving a truck, pulled up alongside the highway near Capistrano and came to a stop. He left the truck standing alongside the road, police said. A San Diego motorist, whose name could not be obtained, ran into the truck and sustained severe injuries, including a reported puncture of the left lung, which may have fatal results.

FATHER ASKS POLICE TO LOCATE LOST SON

CUCAMONGA, Dec. 6. — A frantic father today made a strong plea to police of Ontario and Upland to aid him in searching for his son who went to Ontario to witness the Armistice Day parade, and has not been seen or heard from since.

The distraught father is M. Battu of Cucamonga. His missing son is Johnny Battu, student of Chaffey Union High School. Battu informed authorities he gave his son permission to attend the Armistice Day program in Ontario.

There had been no trouble at home, the father said, and he is at a loss to understand the strange disappearance.

The boy was dressed in dark-gray trousers and a light shirt. He has gray eyes and is about four feet four inches tall, the father said.

Battu said he delayed in notifying police in the belief the boy would return to the home in Cucamonga.

MANY-FACETED SONG STAR TO BE HEARD

Elisabeth Rethberg

RETHBERG SINGS HERE THIS WEEK

Opera Soprano Returns Tuesday Night to Appear in Concert

Elisabeth Rethberg, brilliant lyric-dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, who won a host of friends when she appeared with the Los Angeles Grand Opera company last season, returns next Tuesday night for a concert at the Philharmonic Auditorium.

Rethberg last season appeared as star with six different opera companies. Beginning with the summer operas at Ravinia Park, Chicago, she sang twenty-three performances. She then came to the Coast, where she appeared with the San Francisco and Los Angeles Opera companies. A hurried trip across the continent brought her to New York on the eve of her engagement with the Metropolitan. Following a short concert tour, she left for Italy, where she appeared at the New Royal Operahouse in Rome at the command of Mussolini and later sang at La Scala at the request of the famous conductor, Toscanini.

EISENSTEIN SAYS "ADIOS"

Russian Director Leaves for Mexico After Six Months of Marking Time in Hollywood

Capricious Hollywood, glancing over a shrugged shoulder, last Thursday saw enacted the first-act finale of one of its strangest dramas. Mexico-bound, departing without fanfare, with but a handful of friends to see him off, was Sergei M. Eisenstein, the Russian motion-picture director, who came to conquer the film capital just six months ago. With him were Gregor V. Alexandrov, his scenarist and chief assistant, and Edward Tisse, his cameraman.

Summoned by Paramount from Russia to make a picture which should incorporate the qualities that had made "Potemkin," "Ten Days That Shook the World" and "Old and New" great—even above the propaganda for the soviet state without which no Russian film is ever devised—Eisenstein never shot a single scene in Hollywood. Inability of studio executives to decide on a suitable vehicle was the reason given, after Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" and an epic called "Sutter's Gold" among others had been rejected.

MAY WORK IN MEXICO

Rumors flew thick and fast. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal were mentioned as dickering with Eisenstein. Nothing came of them.

Before leaving, the director admitted the probability of his making a picture in Mexico.

"From Mexico City we go to Yucatan, and on to the Isthmus," he said. "We may be gone two months or more. Perhaps I will return then to Hollywood; if I make a picture, it will have to be synchronized.

"Mexico is primitive, close to the soil, its missions alone are many pictures. One can only make a good film when he has the 'positive approach.' This is possible in a country like Mexico, where the struggle

WAR STALKS IN MOVIE EMPIRE

Violent Changes in Films Seen in Coming Year

Antitrust Decision Makes for Much Uneasiness

Independent Efforts Face Brighter Era

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

Competition, fiercely raging, and also fiercely diversified, promises soon to give the movie empire the complexion of a shell-torn battlefield. Nineteen-thirty-one is the year scheduled for many violent and fundamental changes in the picture industry, affecting both methods of production and methods of distribution, extending over a wide area. The situation is already complex enough, but new factional warfare, already developing, indicates even further complications.

United Artists has apparently set its plans to carry its campaign against the policies of West Coast Theaters to a finish, by announcing a program of theater construction independent of any other organization. Preliminary will be the building of twenty-five houses on the Coast, and the construction enterprise may be carried even into other sections.

TROUBLES LIE AHEAD

This is literally flying in the face of an already perplexed condition, for it is generally conceded that the country is overcrowded with theaters. The building of new houses means the making of more pictures to keep them open, and the making of more pictures involves no end of difficulties. In fact, troubles enough obtrude because of the present volume of the output.

Really, this seems like a particularly bright era for independent efforts divorced from the problem of exhibition. Among companies that have registered uniquely brilliant achievements are those which do not concern themselves so much with the theatrical outlet, or—especially—with the attempts to fill a complete program.

Pathe, Universal and Columbia seem to be reaping a surprising harvest in consideration of their restricted programs. Pathe has a variety of bright attractions, including "Holiday" with Ann Harding, "Her Man," featuring Helen Twelvetrees, and "Sin Takes a Holiday," starring Constance Bennett. They seem to have no difficulty in finding channels of distribution, either. At the Fox-West Coast theater, the Carthay Circle, in Los Angeles, "Holiday" was played for a long engagement as one of the most successful attractions offered at that

SYMBOLS TO RULE FANTASY

Emphasis Placed on Pictorial Attractiveness in Imaginative Offering of University

"Golden Youth," a stylized fantasy, will be presented at the University of California at Los Angeles on Friday and Saturday of this week. The prime mover in its production is Mrs. Louise Pinkney Sooy, who is placing emphasis on the pictorial attractiveness of the forthcoming show.

"The type of play," explains Mrs. Sooy, "is somewhat similar to 'The Miracle.' Pan, like the Nun in the Reinhardt spectacle, is the central figure moving in and out of four pantomimes, symbolizing four phases of worldly experience.

"The first is Fun, reminiscent of the 'Chauve Souris' in its ribald action and color. The second is Romance, delicate and exaggerated, interpreted in an all-white scene. The third is Power, a Renaissance scene in rich gold-and-damask pattern. The fourth is Greed, a stark modern bit."

The settings and costumes are declared beautiful in design and execution. Color, light and pattern are used in unusually bold arrangements. Something like 300 art students created these settings and costumes, or had a hand in their making as part of their regular stagecraft classes. Kenneth MacGowan, New York producer who recently visited these classes at U.C.L.A., declared the work he found being done there to be outstanding from a design viewpoint.

DEPRESSION WEATHERED NICELY

Bosco's Animated Nightmares in Celluloid, Where Plausible Plots Shorn of All Semblance of Sanity, Prove Unwavering Ability to Please

BY JOHN SCOTT

Bosco, a funny little fellow who is mostly eyes and mouth, is one character in Hollywood who is weathering the "depression period" nicely. Bosco plays in "Looney Tunes," the animated and synchronized film cartoon short subject which is bringing smiles to the face of the perennial grouch and hearty guffaws from the jaded theater patron.

Leon Schlesinger and Bosco

Bosco is the humorous, nonsensical brain child of Hugh Harmon and Rudolf Ising, youthful artists, who are capitalizing on his foolish antics through the medium of Leon Schlesinger's "Looney Tunes" company. Bosco and Honey, his feminine companion, are faced with only one limitation. They must not do rational things.

"Looney Tunes" as created by Harmon and Ising have been in existence eleven months. About four to six weeks are required to animate, photograph and synchronize the cartoon subjects, each being approximately 650 feet in length. Each frame of the film necessitates a separately drawn picture, in fact, two, for each scene is drawn twice, once on ordinary paper and once on transparent celluloid. There are sixteen frames to a foot of film, so at least 10,000 pictures are composed for each reel. Twelve artists do this work.

When the animaters and inkers have finished with Bosco and his comical associates the pictures are taken to an overhead film camera and photographed, one by one. The camera is so adjusted that one frame can be "shot" at a time. It is possible to save time and expense when, say, the head of a character moves but the body doesn't, to use the same drawing of the body and different positions of the head. This can be accomplished by laying the celluloid showing the body on the background and placing the celluloid showing the head on top of the two, keeping the relative proportions, of course. The camera then "shoots" through the celluloid, picking up the complete image, background and all.

After the film is completed the synchronization is worked out, although this has been done before the picture is finished without undue difficulty, as the musician works hand in hand with the men who figure out the story, the "gags" and the plot characters.

These story conferences for "Looney Tunes" are a treat for the uninitiated. A plausible plot is concocted, then shorn of sense and reason and made into a sort of nightmare. Trees do spring dances, animals become human, fish are given intelligent expressions, and so on. The most difficult part of the whole business is to present a logical story in a ridiculous manner, at the same time making it entertaining.

The present production at the Schlesinger plant will be stepped up soon to one reel every two weeks. When this happens the artists will be forced to draw, trace and synchronize some 600 individual pictures every day. However, practice enables them to sketch the characters in a dozen brief strokes.

"Looney Tunes" are released through Warner Brothers' worldwide distribution, and are occasioning considerable comment from all parts of the globe. Schlesinger is Bosco's patron saint and has no worries about his little charge's ability to please all types and classes of theatergoers. Of course the children are entirely sold on the cartoons, and Schlesinger finds that no complaints of any nature are coming from the grown-ups. What's more, he doesn't expect any.

EIGHT FEATURES SCHEDULED

Eight features will shortly go into production at Columbia Studio, according to an announcement made by Jack Cohn, who has taken charge of the West Coast studios during Harry Cohn's absence in the East. This resumption of activity follows a temporary lull occasioned by the finishing up of seven specials, the filming of which set a new record for high-pressure work in this studio.

The eight pictures on the new schedule include "The Last Parade," a post-war story, to be directed by Eric C. Kenton; "The Flood," which James Tinling will direct; "Subway Express," a picturization of the Broadway stage thriller; "Arizona," Augustus Thomas's stage classic; "For the Defense," an Evelyn Brent vehicle; "The Miracle Woman," starring Barbara Stanwyck; "Virtue's Bed," and "Joaquin Murietta," a Buck Jones feature, which will go into work as soon as Jones finishes "Desert Vengeance," now in production.

SALESKI GIVES RECITAL

Gdal Saleski, Russian violoncellist, who formerly made his home in Los Angeles, gave a recital at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in San Francisco recently which won him much approval. His diversified program included a group of five compositions of his own as well as those by Bach, Vivaldi-Nachez, Ravel, Cassado and Werner. His recital had the distinction of a large number of patrons well known in the north and they actually attended the concert, which is contrary to the custom in Los Angeles. Saleski played with the San Francisco Symphony last month.

HOSANNAHS OF REVUE MISSING

Producer of 'Smiles' Resents Critic's Remarks

All Audiences Do Not Want Filth, Ziegfeld Says

New York Newspapers Cold Toward Production

BY PERCY HAMMOND

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (Exclusive) When Mr. Ziegfeld importuned me to attend the first performance of "Smiles" his persistence was so hospitable that I did not suspect him of selfish motives. Here, I meditated, is a producer who takes such pleasure in my company that he sends me two priceless aisle-chair tickets simply because he likes to have me near him on occasions of great moment.

It did not occur to me that back of the heartiness of his invitation was a faith that I would repay his cordiality with printed hosannahs for his show. I did not think that he expected me to tell my subscribers that the play was perfect, no matter how faulty I found it to be, since he himself has been a victim of my passion for rectitude. Fancy, then, how humiliated I am when I discover that all Mr. Ziegfeld wanted of me was a "good notice," and that he regarded it as certain that I would give it him in exchange for a couple of costly Annie Oakleys!

The wintry peace of my village, East Hampton, L. I., was disturbed at 3 a.m. yesterday by the receipt of a long telegram from Mr. Ziegfeld, sullenly remonstrating with me for my lack of the Rotarian spirit. A vigilant, though sleepy telegrapher, aroused from his rest by Mr. Ziegfeld's urgent summons, called me to the telephone, and when he had got me there repeated the following dispatch, the contents of which makes me fear that its sender read my revue of "Smiles" too hurriedly:

WHERE WERE YOU?

"Percy Hammond, Aunt Phoebe's, East Hampton, L. I.—When did you ever see a show in which Marilyn Miller or the Astaires appeared where nudity was any part of the attraction? Where were you when I produced 'Whoopee,' 'Kid Boots,' 'Musketeers,' 'Rio Rita' and 'Show Boat'? If I ever produce another Follies and you really insist I will try and give you another thrill in that direction by suggestion but I doubt if that is possible after the displays you are compelled to witness and which you evidently enjoy. I really believe that you returned from your trip around the world in an airplane and that your hearing is still affected. Even the

STAR TURNS TO NEW SCREEN EXPERIENCE

Ramon Novarro

DIRECTOR NOVARRO APPEARS

Ramon Discusses Venture Into Field of Supervising Spanish Versions

BY SALVADOR BAGUEZ

About to start on a two-day recreation trip and attired in the conventional outing regalia, it was Senor Ramon Novarro, the director of "Sevilla de mis Amores," now showing at the California International Theater, and most emphatically not its star, who greeted me as I was ushered into his presence at M.-G.-M., for what turned out to be a friendly chat instead of the customary interview.

The result of this event revealing for the first time the talented Mexican actor's versatility and marking his ascent into directorial domains will be watched with tremendous interest by producers of Spanish talkies. Heretofore Spanish pictures have been directed mostly by persons unfamiliar with the language.

"Estoy muy contento," declared the star, meaning that he is enthused. "Because a dream which I had long cherished has finally been realized and I think it was only fate that made it possible." And here he related his intuitive desire to direct pictures, which has been innermost

"PETER PAN" CAST LENGTHY

Originator of Flying Apparatus Tells of Notable Players Who Have Portrayed Wendy in Past

BY MURIEL BABCOCK

George Kirby, the Englishman who arranged the flying apparjus in the first production of "ePter Pan" at the Duke of York Theater, London, twenty-seven years ago, is doing the self-same job this week for the Los Angeles Civic Repertory Theater.

He has, he explained, followed "Peter Pan" into most every part of the globe. He was with it in Australasia, in Canada, in South Africa, France, all the provinces of Great Britain, and he came to America and worked with the Maude Adams company for there seasons.

A quiet, bespectacled little Britisher, he likes to act better than he does to tinker with technical equipment. And he likes to talk of everything but how he arranges the fine little wires and the delicate balancing equipment.

He will tell, with mellow enthusiasm, of the beginnings of "Peter Pan," of its history, of the famous names which have graced its cast, of the difference between the American and English interpretations.

PRESENT PETER HELD GOOD

"I had arranged and was in charge of a radium butterfly dance for Lole Fuller, ballet star, at the Coliseum Theater in London in 1903," he begins, "when one day I was summoned by Dion Boucicault to the Duke of York Theater across the street to confer with him and a Mr. Barrie—plain J. M. Barrie in those days—about the possibilities of introducing flying into a new play they were discussing.

"Boucicault, the producer, told me the play was an extraordinary one in which he placed the greatest hopes. He did not know the name of it, for Barrie had not told him, and, in fact, did not divulge it until shortly before the opening.

"Nina Boucicault was our first Peter. Hilda Trevelyan the first Wendy, George Hersell was John; the original Nina was played by Lupino, father of Lupino Lane; Smee by George Shelton, and Michael by a little girl named Winifred Geoghan.

"The American interpretation as given by Maude Adams was entirely different from the English. In fact, I think this present offering at the Music Box will mark the first time 'Peter Pan' has ever been given in America as Barrie wrote it. I know I was shocked when I first saw Miss Maude Adams. Much of the best part of the role of Wendy had been rewritten into her interpretation of Peter. And it wasn't right."

TELLS OF BEGINNING

Kirby, in fact, thinks Marion Clayton, who is acting Peter for the Civic Repertory Theater, as good as any Peter he has ever seen, and he includes Cissy Loftus, Miss Adams, Marilyn Miller and Betty Bronson of the movies in his list.

He had thought he was done with "Peter Pan" when he came to Los Angeles. He turned his attention to acting in pictures, and recently with a friend worked up the "Chuck and Algy" act, which is heard every night over the radio. He is Algy, a silly-ass Englishman, and he dotes on his work.

But one day by chance he ran into Donald Stuart, just engaged to direct the production for the Civic Repertory. Stuart didn't know Kirby was on this side of the continent, but he forthwith haled his old friend to the Music Box and set him about the business of arranging flying equipment once more.

CREDIT TITLES TURN PROBLEM

Studios Tackle Elimination of Names Preceding Film

Talkies Add Host of Others Seeking Picture Mention

Smaller Fry Being Excluded; Novelties Incorporated

BY JACOB COOPER

To give or not to give credit where credit is due is the problem which is giving many movie studios a man's-sized headache. The few feet of film which precedes the action of a motion picture and on which is noted that such and such people did so and so in the making of the film, is proving as much of a problem as the bulk of the picture itself.

It is only natural for everyone who had a finger in the pie to claim a little pat on the back. Walk down Hollywood Boulevard any day after a picture is "in the can" and stop to talk to the director of said picture. "Did you see my latest picture?" he will ask. Then bump into the star, the cameraman, the author, the dialogue writer, the sound engineer, the first, second, third and even unto the fortieth assistant director, and they will all ask: "Did you see my latest picture?"

Not all of their names will appear on the credit titles of the film but this is no fault of theirs. If they have the least bit of influence they will see to it that they are included. The result has sometimes been that practically everyone who walked across the set had his name appear on the titles. So far, they have managed to exclude the name of the manufacturer of the kitchen stove which cooked the star's breakfast.

HOST OF SEEKERS

This talkie business has added a host of other credit seekers in the form of sound technicians, recorders, engineers, music directors, etc. Naturally, the studios realise that Susie Glutz and her boy friend sitting in a show in Piute Center are not interested in spending a half-hour reading the names of studio employees. Something had to be done, and the studios conceived several ideas.

One of these consisted of including all of these minor credits on one frame. This practice is still extant, but it only means that there are so many of them and they are printed so small that the audience can only grasp a few of them—if, by any miracle, they happen to be at all interested.

Going a step further, in the matter of novelty, Gloria Swanson's picture, "The Trespassers" used the one-frame idea but depicted a huge building, on each floor of which was printed the name and title of the credit seeker.

In cases where the credits are dragged out ad infinitum, novel ideas are concocted to keep the audience awake until the picture itself begins. Another Gloria Swanson picture, "What A Widow" managed this by depicting the masks of comedy and drama engaged in a dialogue anent the various workers. As they talk, the names appear on the screen.

It was a nifty idea, but it resulted in being one of the longest screen credit sequences ever thrown on the screen. At a rough estimate, there must have been about 300 feet of film to it.

NOVELTY IN SAND

Another novelty was that used in Pathe's "Her Man." We fade in on a sandy beach on which an unseen finger has written the credit. Then (with sound effects) there is a rumble and a roar, and a wave breaks on the beach, washing the name away. Fade out. Fade in again on the next one—and so on, far into the night.

Then again there is the quite prevalent idea of having action backgrounds and music to keep the audience amused while the studio personnel list is run off in toto.

There is another idea—and a very good one—which one or two studios are considering. And that is, keeping credits down to an absolute minimum. Paramount has tried this in their forthcoming "The Royal Family." The first contains "Paramount presents—" plus the name of the film and the director. The second frame credits the authors of the original play and the cameraman, and the third frame has the cast. Included also on these frames are such essentials as copyright and Board of Review notations.

All the smaller fry are thus excluded and the audience is given only those names in which they are interested. Paramount, though not consistent in this practice, is yet credit-title-conscious and doing all it can to keep things down to bedrock.

But what about squawks from the poor, excluded adapters, dialogists, prop boys, supervisors and carpenters? Well, in these days of neglected options the weekly pay check is considered the credit title supreme.

HOLLYWOOD ADOPTED BY LEON ERROL

BY ELENA BOLAND

He of the collapsible knees and trained ankles, Leon Errol of the New York comedy stage, is now in Hollywood—with no urgent desire to leave.

With the spring came Errol, nonsense, knees and all. He put his contract in a vault and settled down at Paramount to do a little chattering in three pictures. First it was "Paramount on Parade," this week it is "Only Saps Work" at the Paramount Theater, and he is just finishing a blithe outburst entitled "Fin and Hattie."

As Errol says himself, he is a pantomimist. He likes talkies, but he doesn't have to talk. On Broadway he used to take forty-five minutes during a show to do a bit of pantomiming. There was sometimes twenty or so of the cast thus left standing about the stage with nothing to do but watch the funny man. It made no difference, he could hold his audience.

And that is the principal difference between movies and shows, Errol has discovered. In the latter is freedom of expression; the former is a series of limitations.

Despite the tricks his knees can do, Errol says that his business is with his face.

"I always react. Everything that is said or done, I react first—then speak. You get your points over that way. Pictures are hard. You can't tell where the laughs come; you don't know if the lines are going to be funny or not. In show business you find all that out on the road before you come into New York."

When interviewed, Leon Errol was busy; he was preoccupied and postponed. He was, in fact, on the set happily repeating over and over again to the microphone that he was James Pierpont Haddock. He never got further than that, but he seemed satisfied. It was all for the sake of "Fin and Hattie," the screen adaptation of Donald Ogden Stewart's "Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad."

When he was through for lunch, an hour after he should have been, Errol agreeably settled down to tell his life's story. He ran over a list of shows starting back in 1910, when he came to America for Ziegfeld, and including "Louie the XIV," a couple of "Follies," and "Yours Truly." He was happy; he likes talkies and he likes Hollywood. He was at ease; no work for an hour. He became confidential about California; he likes that too. And the sunshine! No telling how far he would have gone on that, for just as he was warming up to climatic delights two shadows fell across his path. Lunch on no lunch, his directors had come to nab him. Weakly, he was led away in conference.

BROADWAY SEES TWO MUSICALS

"Viennese Nights," "Lottery Bride" Contrasted

Hammerstein-Romberg Effort Receives Praise

Will Rogers Scores New Hit in "Lightnin'"

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (Exclusive) All the money lavished on musical films is not sufficient to make them first-rate successes any more. While the discovery is far from a new one, it receives additional confirmation in two new pictures. They are "Viennese Nights" at the Warner Theater and "The Lottery Bride" at the Rivoli, the latter rounding out a scant week before giving way to another attraction. Both pictures are agreeable enough and efforts have been made to delete some of the music that was recorded in production, but in taking this drastic step the sponsors of these pictures have not succeeded in eliminating the heavy atmosphere of unreality, of artificiality that hangs over musical films like a dark cloud on a humid day.

In composing "Viennese Nights" Oscar Hammerstein, Jr., and Sigmund Romberg have done a far better job than was accomplished by the senior Hammerstein, Rudolph Friml and their numerous collaborators in piecing together "The Lottery Bride." They have at least had the courage of their convictions in presenting a bona-fide operetta with all the virtues and faults of this form of entertainment while their friendly rivals offer a strange, incredible film that attempts to be drama and fails, then shifts to musical comedy and bores, and occasionally goes operatic with results so disastrous that spectators are bewildered. This polyglot result was no doubt enhanced by the decision to omit much of the singing after completion of the film.

MOOD OF UNREALITY

"Viennese Nights" is entirely pleasant, its music consistently tuneful and atmospheric, its libretto reminiscent of various stories dealing with the madcap gayeties of Vienna as well as the recent "Bitter Sweet" and Arnold Bennett's play, "Milestones." But is is thoroughly nice and gentle, sad and sentimental. That it fails to be at all exciting and is only mildly interesting may be attributed to the fact that one does not believe a word of it. The lights and glamour of the stage create a mood that causes the spectators to accept the unreality of the proceedings, but the camera falls in this and not only points out the painted back drops but warns the spectator that the player is about to sing and unfortunately also tells the spectator that the actor is acting.

Both singing and acting in "Viennese Nights" are good, or, rather, as satisfactory as the acting of operetta singers ever has been. Alexander Gray's light baritone is recorded more successfully than in previous efforts and he is generally more at ease. Not quite as much can be said for Vivienne Segal, who, however, manages to convince by her acting as the grandmother of the story, which is rather strange, as her roles on the stage for these many years have asked nothing more than attempted girlishness.

The production is handsome, some of the numbers are brightly pleasing, notably the sequence in which Miss Segal and a small chorus of girls have a "kaffee klutsch," and the picture on the whole achieves the same quality, but it strikes no strong note. Mr. Hammerstein and Mr. Romberg in brief speeches said that music was welcome in every medium of entertainment and if the screen did not accept it they would be compelled to confine their efforts to the stage.

Will Rogers in Lightnin'" at the Roxy has scored a big hit. Considered by many his best effort to date the picture carries wide appeal in spite of being overlong. Mr. Rogers has a more creditable character to embellish with his wit and homely philosophy than came his way in either of his other two pictures for Fox, and it is hardly necessary to add that he takes full advantage of the opportunities afforded him, not only by the character as it was written but in adding lines of his own. The admirable direction of Henry King is a strong asset in lifting the picture above program routine.

Of the supporting players Jason Robards has perhaps come in for more favorable mention than any one else, though Louise Dresser is applauded no less. Nor is Joel A. McCrea accepted as anything but a likable juvenile who reads lines with humor and understanding. Rex Bell, who has become a national figure through recent publicity, attracted attention in a bit that would perhaps have passed unnoticed otherwise and the three divorcees played by Sharon Lynn, Charlotte Walker and Goodee Montgomery are considered especially effective.

STAGE CAST SEEN

Though well received by the public, 'Sin Takes a Holiday," at the Mayfair Theater, is not accepted by the critics as the deliciously deft study in sophistication that it purports to be. Handsome and modernistic settings, rather overdone costuming and some self-conscious acting do not make a convincing picture of worldliness when real wit and distinction are lacking from the lines.

However, it is safe to say that the picture will live up to its advertising in the minds of the majority, particularly those interested for personal reasons in a fable concerning a plain stenographer who marries a rich man and becomes a bird of paradise through no mental effort. Constance Bennett is praised for a good performance and the picture bears every indication of being held over a second week and perhaps a third.

"Fast and Loose," based on the stage play, "The Best People," is the attraction at the Paramount, where the cast is made up almost entirely by players recruited from the footlights. One exception is Carol Lombard, who, by the way, has acquired something of a new name by adding for no known reason a final 'e' to her first name. The other screen player is Tika Chase. Both do well in a film that is curiously uneven and is only moderately interesting because the passing of years has robbed the story of its former novelty.

Evelyn Brent rolls up another distinguished performance in "Madonna of the Streets" at the Globe, with Robert Ames lending admirable support.

VERSATILITY ANITA'S LOT

Blond Ingenue Trips From Comedy to Tragedy at Whim of Studio's Casting Director

Her fellow-players call it "it." Her parents call it "personality." She is thrilled by the former, grateful for the latter and won't venture a personal guess what keeps her pretty blond head busy in front of cameras and microphones at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. But then Anita Page is too modest to think that perhaps acting ability might be the reason.

Every so often fans bring up the question, "Where has Anita Page gone?" About this time up pops the vivacious and youthful actress in two or three films to disquiet rumors. Her appearances seem to come in rapid succession. The latest group includes "Caught Short," "Little Accident" and "War Nurse."

The whims of casting directors are allowed full play in the case of Miss Page. First it's comedy; then it's tragedy. The golden-haired ingenue who cried so well in "Our Modern Maidens" is now a war nurse on the screen at Loew's State Theater. In her next cinema role she shoots a man, proving that the actress is, first of all, versatile.

EMOTIONAL ROLES LIKED

"It's nice to play all sorts of parts," she said, "but the emotional roles hold more fascination for me. I'm not crazy about comedy at all. Comedians have to be born humorous, I guess."

One of Miss Page's chief attributes is her unbounded store of energy. She loves life, and goes along serenely, with only one worry, that is, watching her diet. Pineapple salads do get a bit tiresome as a steady luncheon tidbit.

Energy such as the actress displays is not especially conducive to serious talk about the picture business. However, Miss Page says that at frequent intervals she takes stock of herself and her roles on the screen.

LAST PART ENJOYED

"The parts I have played are varied," she said, "but very interesting. In these days of heavy competition everyone is putting his best foot forward, trying harder and harder and studying a lot more. I thoroughly enjoyed 'War Nurse.' The role was exacting, like all good ones. The story tells of the woman's part in the war, which hadn't been touched on until now. The nurse group in the film included several different types of girls. I liked Zasu Pitts's work especially well."

Miss Page's rise in the cinema was rapid at first and now is going on steadily but surely. She won a berth with the Wampas Baby Stars of two years ago and has remained at M.-G.-M. ever since. The parents of the actress had an art career mapped out for her but the motion-picture bug put an end to this. Miss Page is one of the few who clicked at the start and has continued to do so, even in the talkies.

Festive Togs Adorn Clara at Bard House

Those of the fair sex who wish to get a line on feminine fashions might do well to drop into Bard's Eighth-street Theater this week, according to an advance story. There the festive Clara Bow is holding forth in her latest Paramount picture, "Her Wedding Night." In this opus the red-headed Clara is said to appear in nine of the latest examples of feminine fashion.

Travis Banton, the costume designer for the Bow regalia, is reported to have done himself proud in designing the street frocks, pajamas, evening gowns and negligee worn by the star in the comedy.

In addition to the Bow picture, there is a Lloyd Hamilton comedy, a sound cartoon and news reel.

Brown Cuts New Garbo Picture

Clarence Brown has completed actual production on "Inspiration" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. This picture has Greta Garbo as the star, and is the third talking vehicle and the fifth production in which she has been directed by Brown. An unusually notable cast, including Robert Montgomery, Lewis Stone, Marjorie Rambeau, John Miljan, Karen Morley, Beryl Mercer, Edwin Maxwell, Zelda Sears, Paul McAllister, Judith Vosselli, Gwen Lee, Joan Marsh, Richard Tucker, Oscar Apfel, George Irving, Arthur Hoyt, and others of note are in support of the star.

With his usual economy of footage during production, Brown is going into the cutting room with his picture not much over the customary exhibition length. The task that confronts him at present is one of editing more than it is of cutting. The director established a reputation for minimum footage in production with his early pictures and consistently has maintained it.

NEW YORK EXTERIORS

Exterior scenes for Clara Bow's new Paramount starring picture, "No Limit," were filmed in large part in New York City.

Story of Sea Being Shown at Pantages

"Don't make audiences sea sick!" This was the half-serious instruction given cameramen during the filming of "Way for a Sailor," the story of roughneck sailors played by John Gilbert, Wallace Beery and a large cast, which is now showing at Pantages Hollywood Theater.

LEILA HYAMS.

Because of the rolling and pitching of ships at sea where much of the action takes place, gyroscopic cameras tripods were used to enable the cameramen to shoot the action without the heaving and tossing of the vessels becoming so realistic as to cause a disturbing effect upon those who watched the screening of the picture.

However, the unfolding of the story is not limited to the confines of the decks or fo'castles of the ships. It moves from London to Shanghai with a constantly changing background of barroom brawls, shore frolics and interesting romance. Leila Hyams is seen in the leading feminine role opposite John Gilbert and Wallace Beery is aided and abetted in supplying comedy and humor by Polly Moran and Doris Lloyd.

RAMON DIRECTS SPANISH FILMS

in his mind since his initial appearance before the camera, and how Irving Thalberg came to offer the rare opportunity to carry it out.

"It was during one of my brief rests between pictures," he said. "Mr. Thalberg was looking for some one to help in the direction of the Spanish version of 'Mr. Wu,' in which Senor Ernesto Vilches was about to be starred. I heard about it and immediately reported to him, offering my services. I knew that Mr. Vilches had the utmost confidence in me, and that my knowledge of the many technical angles, both of direction and photography, gained through my observations while in pictures, coupled with his great skill as a stage director and actor, could be used to advantage in filming the mandarin tale.

"Mr. Thalberg did not listen to my offer at all," Ramon continued. "Instead, to my astonishment, he asked me to direct my own Spanish version of 'The Singer of Seville.' ('Call of the Flesh.') I accepted without a moments' hesitation, and the ultimate result is 'Sevilla de mis Amores.'"

"What is your personal opinion of it?" I asked the star.

SPANISH VERSION BETTER

"There are many inclinations to believe that the Spanish version is infinitely better than the English," he declared. "For instance, one of the early scenes where the young postulant's brother comes to visit her at the convent after seven years have passed is typical of one of my own personal experiences. I have two sisters who are nuns in a convent in Spain, and the first thing I did when I went there was to visit them. I had not seen them for many years, and needless to say the resultant scene was one of pathos.

"It is clear to see that in directing that particular scene I endeavored to make it as lifelike as possible," Novarro continued. "My utmost desire, primarily, has been to give the Spanish-speaking world a picture as near correct in every detail as is humanly possible under great difficulties. Whether I have succeeded should be known in the near future."

The circumstances surrounding Ramon Novarro in his first directorial venture have been particularly interesting. This, his initial effort, may be termed an event "en famille," or family affair. Senor Ramon Guerrero, who writes the Spanish column in The Times, and who is responsible for the dialogue of the picture, is his uncle. His sister, Luz, also plays a small part, and last but by no means least, his mother, Senora Leonor de Samaniego, enacts the role of mother superior in the convent scenes.

Their appearance in the picture is not their first opportunity to act. They have taken part in many of the plays and sketches which Ramon occasionally presents and directs in the Teatro Intimo of his beautiful colonial home.

MARIAN MARSH GETS OFFERS

Marian Marsh, the attractive little blond leading lady of "Young Sinners," which enjoyed a run at the Belasco Theater, is receiving screen offers these days. Though under contract to Warner Brothers, Miss Marsh is free to make pictures for other studios until this studio opens again, which will be shortly after the first of the year.

JUVENILE GETS NEW ROLE

Although a popular juvenile player on Broadway for several years, Robert Montgomery had to wait until he landed in motion pictures before he could play musical comedy. This unusual situation was the result of talkie development, which caused Montgomery to quit Broadway for Hollywood, where he won success within a year.

Now, featured in "Love in the Rough," at the Tower Theater, Montgomery is playing his first musical comedy role, the kind of part he often wished for on the stage.

Charles F. Riesner directed the musical comedy romance, a picturization of "Spring Fever," by Vincent Lawrence. Dorothy Jordan has the feminine lead in the film and the cast includes Benny Rubin.

TENEN HOLTZ GIVEN ROLE

Tenen Holtz, one of the screen's character actors, for two or three years under contract to M.-G.-M., has been engaged by Phil Goldstone, Tiffany's chief studio executive, for one of the principal roles with Charlie Murray and George Sidney in "Caught Cheating."

Stage Player Declares She Finds Talkies Not Hard to Make

Stage hands have always been her severest critics, according to Marjorie Rambeau, stage star of "Eyes of Youth," "Kick In," "The Goldfish" and other Broadway hits, who makes her first talking-picture appearance in "Min and Bill," the current attraction at the Carthay Circle Theater.

"In the theater," said Miss Rambeau, "I never noticed the audience, which cannot be seen over the glare of the footlights, but used to watch the stage hands while scenes were on. If they sat around, played cards, or talked, I knew I hadn't gripped their attention and felt that the performance was lacking. If they appeared interested and watched from the wings I knew the scene was clicking.

"In motion pictures I find that one can do the same thing and not miss audiences at all, as some stage players in pictures say they do."

Miss Rambeau is one of the outstanding stars of the American stage and is hailed as an "acquisition" of the talking screen.

"Min and Bill," in which she has a powerful dramatic role, features Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in a comedy-drama of hearts. George Hill, director of "The Big House," created the production.

The supporting cast includes Dorothy Jordan, Russell Hopton and Frank McGlynn. The picture was suggested by "Dark Star," the novel written by the late Lorna Moon.

Abe Lyman and his International Band continue their engagement at the Carthay Circle.

Persistency Characteristic of One Actor

Arthur Clayton is persistent, if nothing else.

An episode in the life of this actor, who is appearing with Dale Winter and Henry Duffy in "Michael and Mary" at El Capitan Theater, illustrates this characteristic.

"When the World War came along, I was at the head of three road companies and things were going along very well," relates the English actor. "As I had been in the service in Africa previous to my career as an actor, I went into the British end of it, but was later sent to Australia. We went to Egypt from there. The result was that I found myself back in Australia invalided and declared unfit for service.

"I was discharged on Saturday and on Monday I enlisted again, as a private this time with no commission. A week later I was a corporal, then a sergeant, and then an officer. Then months later, I was back on the front in Belgium as a captain, was wounded and captured.

"Three of us escaped from the German prison camp. We dug a hole under the barbed wire fences that inclosed our working field and one night broke through. We timed it incorrectly, however. They saw us and only two of us got away. One chap was killed. Seven weeks after our capture, we were back in our own lines again."

NEW PLAY ARRIVES AT MAJOR THEATER

Alice Calhoun

"Everybody's Troubles," a new play by Jack Preston, is described as dealing with the strange entanglements of an honest lawyer in a crooked real estate deal. Tomorrow will mark the premiere of this Preston comedy, which is expected to draw to the Major Theater many who are anxious to witness Alice Calhoun's return to the stage. In the supporting cast are Eugene Parker and Susanne Leash.

FILES GONE OVER FOR LIND DATA

Library Assistant in New York Given Credit for Research Work

A meek little librarian way back in New York is being given a large share of credit for the success of Miss Grace Moore, Metropolitan Opera star, in her first picture, "Jenny Lind," now showing at the Criterion Theater.

Miss Moore declared before her departure for the East on Thanksgiving eve that one of the first persons she will call on upon her arrival in New York is Miss Beryle Hohnsteffer, an assistant in the biography section of the New York Public Library.

Because if Miss Moore had not had Miss Hohnsteffer to help her, she declares, the success of the picturization of the life and love of the Swedish Nightingale might not have been so authentically acted.

The little librarian sought out and obtained nearly every known intimate detail of Miss Lind's personal habits, eccentricities, mannerisms, methods of singing and doing her hair, the kind of clothes she preferred and her every characteristic. With these at her disposal Miss Moore spent hours in perfecting herself to play the part.

Research also was necessary to the young opera star in the realm of yesterday's opera.

"With the advent of Americans into the field of grand opera," Miss Moore said, "traditions changed. Today opera is not sung exactly as it was in the time of Jenny Lind. I was forced to consult many of the old-time teachers and also reference books in order to faithfully portray the stage presence of the nightingale of the 1800's."

"Be Yourself" Advice Given by Director

The first advice Paul L. Stein gives the motion picture players who work under his direction is, "Don't get dramatic."

"I want sincere natural performances and not acting," said Stein, who directed "Sin Takes a Holiday," Constance Bennett's starring picture for Pathe, now in its second week at the Orpheum Theater.

"If there is drama in a situation, such performances will bring it out. Conscious attempts to be dramatic will result in overacting and dispel the essential illusion of reality.

"One of the principal faults of the novice is overacting," continued Stein. "Players who are not sure of their technique cannot 'lose themselves' in their roles.

"On the other hand, seasoned troupers, such as those I worked with in 'Sin Takes a Holiday,' play situations as they feel them, without a conscious thought of technique. They do not have to worry about something that training and experience have perfected. Every member of the cast, from Miss Bennett on down, is a finished performer."

Supporting Miss Bennett in "Sin Takes a Holiday" are Kenneth MacKenna, Basil Rathbone, Rita LaRoy, Zazu Pitts and Louis Bartels.

SISSY ROLE PLAYED BY EX-SAILOR

Eddie Featherston Plays Artist's Model in New Vine Street Show

"It's an effeminate, sissy role and he-man stars were afraid to accept it," grins Eddie Featherston, "but I was out of work and here we are."

Speaking of "She Had to Marry," a farce opening at the Vine Street Theater tomorrow night, wherein Eddie is a girlish artist's model, is a sister to the girls and positively coy with the men.

However, could anyone afford to risk it better than Eddie, he who was the hard-boiled he-man sailor with Clara Bow in "True to the Navy," one of the six leads? Besides, as the artist's model, one senses that Eddie can afford to show his figure.

Likewise Eddie Featherston really did appear on the Navy roster during the war, having made six trips into battle. The Navy, he says, did him no end of good, since they gave him that role with Clara because of it.

The Featherston is an abbreviation of Featherstonehaugh, a very British name, which his parents decided to tone down for America. He began in vaudeville—"just a team act," he explains—and then won through to the stage in New York via "Sally, Irene and Mary" and "Hit the Deck" in Chicago, to "Ain't It the Truth?" and "Fiesole" on Broadway. He has participated in numerous other pictures besides Clara's, and plays comedy for Fox when trade is good.

He was called to rehearsal by the time this much was learned, and Youcca Troubetskoy was offered as a substitute interviewee, he being the nephew of Paul Troubetskoy, the sculptor, well known to Hollywood as a crazy genius, for vegetarianism, against prohibition, and devoted to wolf hounds. Youcca has been in pictures six years and says he's doing fine, thank you, chiefly in French versions. His role in "She Had to Marry" is that of the true-love husband of Betty Boyd, as distinct from the chap who confuses the situation. Eddie said he'd be delighted to share his interview with Youcca, who is a very decent fellow.

Eddie Featherston became a bridegroom in November, 1927, and still remembers the date with lover-like regularity.

He was seen on the stage here in "The Desert Song," jumping into Johnny Arthur's part. There were also "The Gingham Girl" and "Kosher Kitty Kelly." He has a good voice.

Travel Film of Far East at Filmarte

A travelogue, "Asia," camera story of the Far East, now showing at the Filmarte Theater, carries one through the beauties of India, China, Japan and Java.

The photography of this James A. Fitzpatrick feature is of unusual quality and the subjects shown have been chosen with fine discretion. They represent the significant sights of these countries, bringing the life, customs, and habits of picturesque races vividly to the screen.

India, with its infinite lure, is shown through its architectural triumphs; the Tower of Victory built in 1569, the Pearl Mosque, said to be the most poetic house of worship ever built. Outstanding, however, is the white marble Taj Mahal at Agra.

Hongkong comes next in the Fitzpatrick natural drama. This city is built on an island ten miles long and six miles wide and has a population of 650,000, with about 50,000 living in the sampans, a veritable floating city, clinging to the shores. Hongkong means fragrant waters. A century ago this site was a barren, rocky island. Today it is one of the most up-to-date cities in the world.

HUSTON HAS COSSACK ROLE

Despite the fact that the word "Cossack" means, in Russian, "Free Man," there still rages a controversy over the origin of this wild and courageous tribe. Walter Huston, who plays the role of the general in "The Virtuous Sin," Paramount picture with a Cossack flair, now being featured at the Million Dollar Theater, reports the discovery of a different version of the word's origin.

"In reading material on the part played by the Cossacks in the World War, with which our film deals, I found an account of how the name was derived from a band of Tartars," Huston declares.

"The story relates that in the thirteenth century the Tartar Chief Genghis Khan, with his terrifying hordes of soldiers on horseback, swept from Asia into the country known now as Russia. These horsemen were known as Kazaks. They were fierce riders, mounted on fine, well-trained horses such as had never before been seen in this part of the world.

"It is said that, after the Tarter invasion was checked, the name Kazaks was adopted by the mountain soldiery of the Russian communities which were formed on the upper lands, notably in the Ukraine. The name was afterward corrupted into Cossack."

MYSTERY DRAMA CAUSES THRILLING SENSATION

When people are looking at a scene filled with danger and one which really strikes terror to their hearts, why do they often shriek with laughter? Is there as fine a line between laughter and suspense as there is reputed to be between love and hate? Are all emotions more or less akin to each other? Why do some people feel an almost irresistible impulse to giggle at funerals?

Questions such as these are suggested by "The Cat Creeps," Universal's mystery drama now playing at the R.-K.-O. Theater and known throughout the English-speaking world as a stage play under its original title, "The Cat and the Canary." And in the picture, as on the stage, the hilarity of the audience comes at the points of greatest danger.

ACTORS DREAM OF HOME

The dream of the actor that some day he will have a permanent home, a place in the country if possible, is as prevalent today as it has ever been, despite the oft-asserted opinion that actors have at last reconciled themselves to a nomadic life in trunks and suitcases.

Vera Gordon to Have Role in Pasadena

Vera Gordon, the character actress and star of "Humoresque," will appear in "Spring Song" by Bella Spewack, opening at the Pasadena Community Playhouse next Thursday.

The play is a drama of New York's colorful life on the streets and has as its leading characters a Jewish mother and her two daughters.

Vera Gordon takes the role of the mother. In her career on the screen Miss Gordon has been given many mother parts, but in this particular production she will have a role which she has not yet attempted, a strong-willed woman who would sacrifice her daughter's happiness because of religious law.

Belasco Will Open Christmas With New Play

Holiday amusement seekers are promised one of the merriest and most amusing comedies of the year when the current New York stage success, "Up Pops the Devil," pops into the Belasco Theater on Christmas night.

The story, with its scenes laid in a Greenwich Village studio apartment, deals chiefly with the tribulations of a struggling young couple, Steve and Anne, who keep open house to a group of irresponsible and cocktail-loving friends. Raymond Hackett is cast for Steve and Ann Teaman has been engaged to portray Anne.

Super-Acting Seen in Film

A picture with a cast including Belle Bennett, Jack Mower, LeRoy Mason and Gladys McConnell ought to assure any theatergoer of superacting. The picture is "The Woman Who Was Forgotten," a human interest drama.

BELLE BENNETT

On the stage Jack Russell and his musical comedy company of forty hold forth in their new show entitled "Pinched for Speeding," written and directed by Jack Russell.

MENJOU FIGURES RESULTS

Dilettante of Hearts on Screen, is Calculating Man of Business in Every Day Life

BY ELENA BOLAND

Off the screen Adolphe Menjou, the amiable dilettante of hearts and flowers, is strictly the business man. He sees pictures from a craftsman's angle, keeping one eye on the box-office and the other on critics. The commercial side of his career is as important as the artistic.

Whether or not critics have agreed on "Morocco," which may be seen at the Chinese, they have agreed that in it, Menjou gives one of his smoothest performances. The role which he has in this Von Sternberg bolero of romance is that of a gentleman with tendencies toward philanthrophy and Minervas. It was not altogether believable to Menjou.

"It is hard to imagine that a man with as much to offer as he would think of marriage, or consider it necessary. And it is also difficult to believe that any man would do so much for a woman, then quietly step aside and let her go on her way. But this is the situation of 'Morocco' and it does appear plausible; which is a feat only of Von Sternberg's direction. Undoubtedly, he is one of the five great directors working today; I should like to do another picture with him sometime."

CHAPLIN STANDARDS

The greatest of all, to Menjou, is Charles Chaplin, the man who started him to fame with "A Woman of Paris." Associating with Chaplin, generally referred to as the genius of Hollywood, gave to Adolphe Menjou a valuation of pictures and a criterion of standards. By these he judges all films, wanting only the best. Treatment, he declares, is the most essential requisite for a good picture.

"Most people say story; off-hand I would, myself. But when you think, nothing could have been more slight than the story of 'A Woman of Paris,' yet the treatment was so exquisite that it became important. This same thing is true of 'Morocco:' it is a masterpiece of mood and direction."

Menjou sums up talkies briefly as being interesting and stimulating. Two years ago he left Paramount just on the completion of his first sound picture, "Fashions In Love." This terminated an association of years between the studio and the actor.

"The years are too long to be spent in one place; the same people, the same stories. I went to Paris. I did a picture there; it was well received. But I got homesick; I came back after eight months. America is the only place for a film career.

FOREIGN INTERESTS

"I have been doing foreign versions here; French, Spanish, German, and I think there is an Italian one coming up. I like them very much. They give me a new interest a new eagerness. One can grow stale quickly in pictures, you know."

A five-year contract ties Adolph Menjou to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. For a time on his return from France he tried free-lancing, but found that he kept refusing story after story because he didn't consider any worth-while. He thought he had better find a studio which he respected, then do as it told him. This he did and he is happy. He is working now on "The Easiest Way" with Constance Bennett and looks forward to "The Great Lover," a play which Leo Dietrichstein made famous a number of years ago.

"A great story," says Menjou. "Just as good today as it was then."

The most vital necessity for the success of pictures in Menjou's estimation is a broad outlook and a varied understanding.

"Every actor, every director should spend at least a quarter of his time in travel. There is too much of Hollywood in everything that is done; it has become a stamp. One forgets easily that there is a world outside; a world in which people live different lives, have different stories to tell. It is too bad."

MISS MERCER ENDS ROLE

Beryl Mercer, well-known character actress of the screen, has completed an interesting role in "Inspiration," Greta Garbo's latest picture for M.-G.-M. Within the next few days she will begin work in one of the featured parts in "East Lynne" for Fox.

LAUGHTER COMES TO ZASU

Miss Pitts, One Time Tragic Figure of Films, Turned Into Comedienne by Movie Masters

BY ALMA WHITAKER

After weeping her heart out and dying off in pictures galore in the dear old "silent" days, ZaSu Pitts is being compelled to occasion raucous laughter as a hilarious comedienne in every talking picture she plays in these days.

"And I could weep so beautifully out loud," sighs ZaSu, "and have the loveliest quiver in my voice. But, oh, no, I'm funny now. Why, did you know they even took me out of 'All Quiet on the Western Front' because it was previewed right after 'Honey,' in which I was sumptuously silly—so the audience insisted upon laughing at me as the poor old mother, and Beryl Mercer got the part instead!"

Hence this cherished ZaSu is extremely funny again in "The Lottery Bride" at the United Artists Theater, in which she owns a cafe that Joe E. Brown undertakes to manage for her.

ZaSu get her name from a combination of the last syllable of Eliza and the first of Susan. "Mother thought of that—good idea, wasn't it? That's why the capital S in the middle is perfectly legitimate. Mother got me in pictures as a small girl; I'm the reason every girl migrates to Hollywood with picture ambitions. They think if I could do it anybody can . . . no looks, nothing to recommend me."

Which is where a person would wish to say, "Oh, yeah?" for ZaSu Pitts is a most deceptively attractive person, with a distinctly winning way about her. Lots of critics have marveled that this remarkable young person hasn't been starred long since. Harry Carr, for instance, once raved about her. "Wasn't he a darling, and isn't his judgment poor?" she beams.

ZaSu is Mrs. Tom Gallery in private life. Tom being the manager of the Hollywood Stadium. "And I never go to prize fights," she confessed. They have been married ten years and have a little girl, Ann, age 8, besides Barbara La Marr's little adopted son, Don Mike, also 8, who went to them when Barbara was so ill. "We've adopted him now, too, and he's a darling. Much better behaved than our own," she smiles.

Two roles ZaSu likes to recall are the wife of Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Fathers," and the sorry girl in "Greed"—both reeking with pathos.

Besides "The Lottery Bride," she also appears in "War Nurse" at Loew's State this week—still funny. Her next two pictures will be "This Modern World" for Fox with Warner Baxter and Dorothy Mackaill, and "Half-Gods" for Universal with Genevieve Tobin.

Tom Gallery, the lucky spouse, might have been a Catholic priest had he not met ZaSu before he was ordained. They are both Catholics and the children are being educated by nuns. ZaSu met Tom the very first day he arrived in Hollywood with Herbert Howe.

In spite of the fact that ZaSu likes to weep in pictures, frequently because of the cruelty of men, she insists she loves the species and doubts whether she has ever known a bad one.

Yoy know, like beer, some men are better than other men but there are no bad men.

When I left her there was an excited hunt for a special photograph . . . "Oh, I must find just that one . . . it's the only picture I ever had taken that makes me look pretty. Oh, where can it be?" But a cameraman was earnestly promising to take another just as lovely and vowing that all he had to do was to catch her as she really is . . .

JOAN DOES ABOUT FACE IN NEW FILM

Miss Crawford Appears in First Straight Dramatic Characterization

When a cocoon turns into a butterfly, to paraphrase the famous dictum of the late Carthay Dana, that isn't news. But when a butterfly becomes a cocoon, that's something else again.

Such an adverse metamorphosis is evidenced in the role of Mary Turner, played by Joan Crawford in her new talkie, "Paid."

Regarded as "America's Dancing Daughter," Joan does an abrupt about face in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature, coming Wednesday to the Criterion Theater. The part is her first straight dramatic performance and, according to advance information, reveals characterization different from anything she has previously attempted.

"It's just the kind of a part I have been aching to play," Miss Crawford confides. "It has intriguing realism in every line and a bit of action and, although it touches the depths of misery and tragedy, I enjoyed it. Straight drama has always been denied me and this is my first chance.

"It doesn't mean, however, that I am giving up modern maidens. When I finished 'Our Blushing Brides,' I hoped never to be asked to play another part like that. I had served my apprenticeship as a dancing daughter and did not want to become stamped and catalogued as a type only. Now, though, I realize that these modern girls are pretty swell and I want to play them now and then in between roles like Mary Turner.

"Yes, the modern girl has certainly changed since we filmed 'Our Dancing Daughters.' You se, I date almost everything from that picture, because it was then I started starring. What happened before was like schooling. At that time girls were passing through that extreme of making fools of themselves, misusing their new freedom.

"They had spent a long time in the hoe-do-you-do stage and were revelling in being able to throw their arms about and yell 'Hi-there!' Now they've reached the 'Hello' stage, a nice quiet, good fellowish, hello with a smile far more inviting than their brazen try-and-get-me whoopee shouts.

"One thing the dancing daughter era brought out was honesty and frankness. They haven't lost that and it makes our generation much more interesting. They are honest with themselves and with everyone else. And when you have honest characters in real life you can find honest characters on the stage and screen and in books that are convincing.

"That's one thing that attracted me so to the part of this Mary Turner. She is a thoroughly human being.

Of course, she has been modernized in speech, manner and costume from the old days, but she is still fundamentally the same girl of 'Within the Law,' played by Jane Cowl back in—let me see, wasn't it 1912? No, I never saw the play on the stage, or as a silent picture, either. I made the girl from my own pattern. And I hope she fits."

"Night Life" at Follies

A burlesque show that promises to live up to its name opened at the Follies Theater last night when "Night Life" came for a week's stay.

Opening with the new bill is Eddie Collins, eccentric comedian, who has made two generations laugh at his antics. Mary Sunde and Leona White are both happily cast in the bill and have plenty of opportunity to display their singing and dancing talents. Verne, with her French accent and her flair for putting over songs and dances is said to be a real burlesque find. She is billed as the French Doll.

Supporting members of the company are Bob Stanley, Valda Parsons and Charles Breedlove. George Clark, the director, is sparing no efforts to present the patrons with the finest possible show.

BORN FRIDAY THIRTEENTH BROUGHT DOROTHY LUCK

Dorothy Mathews, pretty and blond, always knew that her "big break" in the movies would come some day.

And it did when Richard Barthelmess gave her an outstanding "bit" in the Vitaphone picture, "Son of the Gods," which placed her in the eyes of the public and motion-picture producers.

She was immediately cast for the leading feminine role with Lewis Ayres in "The Doorway to Hell," dramatic story of gangland's rackets and racketeers now screening at both Warner Brothers Hollywood and Downtown theaters.

Dorothy Mathews was born in New York City on a certain Friday, February 13. But there must have been a lucky star on that day. She received her education at Florence Mills school and later at the Art Student's League where she studied illustration and painting with an eye to becoming a professional illustrator.

But the stage fascinated her and the first opportunity that arose she took a job in a stock company that toured around New York and the New England States.

Coming to California she entered the movies via the extra ranks. After playing extra for only a short time she was given more important roles. One of the feminine leads in "A Girl in Every Port" was given to her.

Then, after doing a number of small bits, she was cast for a part in "Son of the Gods," which led to the feminine lead in "The Doorway to Hell," an original screen story by Rowland Brown, directed by Archie Mayo.

KID BROTHER REAL PROBLEM

Keeping Step Ahead of Young America Proves Interesting to Danseuse

BY MARY MAYER

Joneses may come, and Joneses may go—but "keeping up" with a kid brother lasts forever!

All "big sisters" who nightly part with dimes to keep little America out of the living-room, will probably add loud amens to this statement. One of the loudest, however, will emit from a pulchritudinous young dancer, who is doing her turns for patrons of George Olsen's club in Culver City. She is Edna Torrance—and little brother, "who caught up with her," is dancing as her partner.

Ever since Edna was born in Fostoria, O., and young brother got the jump on her by being born in California, she has been "doing her durndest" to make up for the difference in native States. But brother, who is billed as Johnny, is still keeping a few paces in the lead, even if it is just in the matter of getting dressed first, at least so says Edna.

The stage careers of these two youngsters began some time ago, the girl being trained as a dancer, the profession her mother had always longed to follow. After numerous revue and vaudeville engagements she won the role of the native girl in the New York production of "The Desert Song," which featured Alexander Grey and Bernice Clair.

It was after the show one evening that the "Torrance kids" got their first glimpse of George Olsen. At a party they attended together, he arrived as a guest and was asked to lead the orchestra in a few numbers. As Edna and Johnny danced past he flashed them one of the famous Olsen grins, which they took quite personally and which, incidentally, won him two staunch pals.

During the course of this, and other parties, the two appeared so well upon the floor together, that some suggested they team up, and so it was that Edna and Johnny found themselves once again on a par, and together, one of Broadway's most popular dance teams.

After appearing extensively in night club work they were invited west for an appearance in the new United Artists production, "Reaching for the Moon," in which they danced under the direction of Maurice Kusell, who staged the terpsichorean numbers for the film. At the close of this engagement they signed to appear with George Olsen Revue.

And what next?

"Well," Miss Torrence hesitated. "We've been invited to appear at the 'Little Club' in Shanghai for a period of six months. We've made so many lovely friends here, however, and the climate is so nice that we hate—

"Go on, tell the truth," a masculine voice demanded from across the table.

Edna gazed wide-eyed at Johnny. Silence reigned.

"She's scared," the youngster shame-facedly admitted.

There certainly must be a science in keeping up with these "kid brothers."

Pupil Arrives From Far East

That the fame of Earle Wallace as a dance director is spreading to many remote sections is attested by a recent letter received from Bombay, India, from Pesi Darabshaw Shroff, who is sailing from Bombay, January 2 for Los Angeles to study the modern American technique of dancing under the dance master.

The Indian dance student, who is an attache of Patel Mansion became interested through witnessing a motion-picture newsreel of a group of Earle Wallace adagio dancers made a year ago.

Student From Japan Given Leading Role

Teru Shimada, talented young Japanese and student of Katherine Hamill, will appear in the leading role in "The Flower of Edo." This is a one-act drama featuring Japanese dancing and the customs of ancient Japan which will be presented by the Katherine Hamill junior class on the 29th inst. along with two other one-act comedies, namely "Heoly Three Inn" and "Dress Suit Indispensible."

Teru Shimada came to this country from Meto, Japan, about six years ago and has made rapid advancement in dramatic work under Katherine Hamill's instruction. He speaks English fluently and has an unusually fine diction, according to the instructor.

Shimada has appeared in several recent photoplay successes, among them, "East is West," "The Sea Wolf" and "The Insidious Dr. Fu Manchu." He is now working in a feature soon to be released.

Dance Debut to Be Event of December

One of the most interesting debuts of the Los Angeles dance season will be made the 15th inst., when Harriet E. Huntington presents a series of dance interpretations originated by Michio Ito at the Theater Mart.

Scriabin, Yamato, Sarasate and Albeniz will be among the composers to be interpreted by the youthful danseuse. She is to be accompanied by piano and a string quartet.

Miss Huntington is well known professionally as well as socially in Los Angeles. She has studied under Michio Ito for three years. In addition to her dancing ability, she is a musician of no small note, and has studied both dancing and music technique of many countries during the course of her several world tours.

Dance Pupils Win Acclaim

Two young dancers who have won much acclaim locally are Peggy Walton and Marita Eivet, pupils of Harold T. Zulawinski, head of the interpretive dance department at the Zenda Dancing Academy. Both girls are studying Zulawinski's dancing partners and will appear with him in numbers both on the stage and screen.

Zulawinski, who is well known for his work both here and in the East, is at the present time training a number of other girls for professional engagements. He has spent the greater part of his career preparing girls for the stage and many of his pupils are now seen in the various major shows in New York and throughout the States.

In the Spotlight

New Technique Given Initial Presentation

One of the interesting features of the week along dance lines was presented by Mary Frances Taylor, former premiere danseuse of the "Student Prince," "Gone Hollywood" and many other stage and screen successes. Miss Taylor was seen last Thursday at the Shrine Auditorium in her original conception of "Modernised Ballet," interpreted in a dance number, "Forest Sprite."

This marked the first time that the youthful dancer presented to the public the new ballet technique which she has termed as "modernised ballet." It is decidedly different and created much attention from local followers of dancing.

In addition to her public work Miss Taylor is head of the ballet department at the Bud Murray School for Stage and Screen. Others on the Bud Murray staff include Bud Murray, head of the school and supervisor of all departments; Gladys Murray, former dancer of the New York Winter Garden and George White's "Scandals," and Byron E. Cramer, former assistant dance director of the R.-K.-O. Theater in Los Angeles and the Strang Theater in Long Beach.

Scholarship to Be Given Young Dancer

A free scholarship to a boy or girl between 6 and 12 years of age, who has not had previous dance training, will be given again this year by the Edith Jane School of Dancing. The results obtained from last year's scholarship winners have been so gratifying to Miss Jane that she will offer again the unusual facilities of the school for a season, and longer if progress warrants, without tuition.

Tryouts will be conducted through December, and from these tryouts six of the best will be selected to perform at the Christmas party during the holidays. The winner will be chosen at this time by a committee. Natural grace, poise, creativeness, personality, concentration, rhythm and ability to take instruction will be considered in making the award. Appointments for tryouts may be made now with the school secretary.

DANCE TAPS

So great has been the demand for ballroom dancing at the McAdam Normal and Professional School of Dancing that it has been necessary to open extra classes in this department. High school and military academy students are taking special training for their holiday festivities, while business men and women, writers, lecturers and musicians are numbered among the scores who attend the school each week for private and class instruction.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON PROGRAMS INTEREST

A recital of unusual interest was presented last Sunday by Cora Mel-Patten at her studio on Magnolia avenue. Miss Patten gave an interpretive reading of Mark Connelly's Pulitzer prize play, "Green Pastures," which has been winning much success in the East. A large audience attended and received the work enthusiastically. This is just one of the number of Sunday afternoon programs planned by Miss Patten.

TUITION GIVEN AS CHRISTMAS GIFT

A special Christmas present to a talented youngster is being offered by the May Murray Dance Studio, according to report. Tryouts at the school are now being held, and the winner will receive free tuition from Miss Murray, many of whose students are now appearing on the stage and screen.

DANCERS REACT TO CLIMATE

Surroundings Reflected in Terpsichorean Compositions, States Youthful Dance Star

Southern California climate has been blamed for a number of things—but Marietta, petite danseuse who exercises her charms over audiences at the Chinese Theater, goes on record as being one of the first to accredit the climate with the superiority of California dancers.

"Dancers and dances are just like the conditions which surround them," she said. "In New York all of the dances are cold, cut and dried and artificial, laden with technicalities. Here there is an abundance of interpretative work, lovely and balmy; here the dancers smile as though they were enjoying every minute of their work, not as though the smiles were painted upon their faces."

Marietta, who recently arrived from New York to dance in the current prologue at the Chinese Theater, will be remembered by many for her sensational triumph scored during the run of "Seventh Heaven," when she appeared as a featured artist in the Carthay Circle prologue. Since that time she has been in New York, where she was headlined in the George White "Scandals" of last season.

A desire on the part of Marietta's mother to make her daughter absolutely independent was responsible for her intensive study along terpsichorean lines. At an early age she was placed under the direction of Mme. Scoville, who is now her teacher, trainer, and general guardian, traveling with her and keeping her in condition for the many difficult feats she performs.

"Dancers must be just as careful of themselves as athletes, according to Mme. Scoville. Everything relating to Marietta's diet is very carefully watched—and no tea, coffee or other stimulants allowed, except on very rare occasions.

But although Marietta has concentrated upon the acrobatic in dancing, she is not what is known as an acrobatic dancer. There is a finish and grace to her work rarely seen in artists of this type.

"It is all due to ballet training," Marietta said. "Ballet is and should be the foundation of every type of dancing. It adds grace to anything a dancer may choose to perform. The difficulty with most students is that they will refuse to study anything except that in which they are interested."

Along with her dancing Marietta has made quite an interesting study of "audience psychology," ever since the day she first stepped before the footlights.

"Audiences are just like dances," she said. "They start slowly and work up to a climax. Monday night houses are usually difficult to play to. As the week grows older the spectators grow more enthusiastic, reaching a high point on Friday and Saturday nights. Matinees, with candy papers crackling, and college nights are the young dancer's favorites.

During her stay in New York Marietta found time to do some intensive coaching in drama, and has decided that the speaking stage and talking pictures are having an easy time battling with dancing for first place in her heart. There is more than a slight possibility that she will enter pictures following the close of the current Chinese Theater engagement.

Dancer Opens Drama Series

Iris Kuhnle, advanced student of Norma Gould, opened the second program of the Theater Intime Club given recently.

Miss Kuhnle chose for her numbers an "Arabian Dance of Greeting," and "Sagat," both compositions by Miss Gould, and was enthusiastically received. Gabriel Ravenelle is the founder and director of the club.

Dancer Returns From Theater Tour

Carlotta DelMar

Pupil of Nat King, who recently returned to Los Angeles to continue her study, after an extended tour of the West Coast Vaudeville Circuit. Miss DelMar studied exclusively with the Nat King Professional Dance Studio and presented numbers especially prepared for her by Mr. King.

Persian Music Drama Creates Wide Interest

"In the Garden of the Shah," operetta by Mary Hugh Dodge and John Wilson Dodge, is ready for final rehearsals and will be presented in the near future, Mrs. Riley Harrison, head of the Harrison-Wallack School, reported yesterday.

Charles Arthur Ridgeway, local composer, and head of the music department at the Harrison-Wallack School is directing the musical numbers in the comedy, Edwin N. Wallack is directing the drama.

"In the Garden of the Shah" will celebrate the formal opening of the Harrison-Wallack studios. Although the majority of the forty-odd roles are taken by students, the leads and important parts have been assigned to professional entertainers, Mrs. Harrison declared.

Mlle. Prager, who recently introduced two original dances at the convention of the Dancing Teachers' Association, has been at work for several weeks, training the cast for a number of intricate dances required by the script of the operetta.

Tall Dancers Score Success

Maurice L. Kusell announces the completion of another screen dance ensemble, employing 200 people. The picture just finished, is "Reaching for the Moon," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and Bebe Daniels. Mr. Kusell featured in his dance production very tall young men and women. Several of the young women were six feet in height, while many of the male dancing chorus reached 6ft. 5in.

Kusell also announces the forming of a children's revue for talking pictures. He is now closing negotiations with a Hollywood studio to produce and release his "Kiddies" talking film.

Play Revival Stirs Interest

One of the interesting programs this week promises to be the revival of "Happiness," by the Theater Arts Productions, under the direction of Elias Day at the Theater Mart, beginning tomorrow.

Featured in the drama will be Vivian Knight, who will play the role of Jenny. Miss Knight has been a successful professional entertainer in the East, but migrated to Hollywood, where she is kept busy with her study with Elias Day and with the filling of engagements in this vicinity. She is the niece of Mrs. Albert Wayne of Pasadena.

Theater School Expands Scope

The Major School of Acting is expanding its organization to a school of all the line arts, singing, dancing, painting and all allied subjects.

Six new courses are introduced and combination courses of any two or any three subjects may be had.

NOVEL BALLET IN REHEARSAL

One of the interesting ballets being prepared for presentation in the near future is now in rehearsal at Theodore Kosloff's Hollywood Studio. Kosloff has been busy the past few weeks preparing traditional Russian dances for the celebration of Russian Christmas by the Russian colony here.

The event occurs a week later than our Christmas and a number of the children of members of Los Angeles' Russian group, as well as the other students in the school, are rehearsing for appearances in the production.

VAUDEVILLE REVUE POP

Kirby and De Gage, the directors, staged a regular vaudeville show at their studio Saturday, November 29. The two dancers have been contracted to open in Mounds Club, St. Louis, for five weeks starting the latter part of next month.

During their stay on the Coast, Kirby and De Gage have been featured at the Biltmore, Shrine Auditorium, and Jewel Show in Los Angeles, at the smart Embassy Club, and in various cafes and theaters along the Coast. ANNUAL HOLIDAY BOOK SECTION

BOOKS OF SPECIAL WORTH

Reissues of Axel Munthe and Havelock Ellis Challenge New Volumes for First Place

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

The outstanding success in books this year is Axel Munthe's "The Story of San Michele," which has for a year led all nonfiction best sellers. A new edition was launched this fall by the publishers, E. P. Dutton & Co., with a new foreword by the author. It was reviewed on this page November 2, with many other biographies. It is a book that no one should overlook. We are almost compelled to read it to find out why others do.

Now comes a reissue of "Memories and Vagaries," first published in 1886. It is a book of sketches drawn from the author's life in Paris as a hospital interne, and in Naples, where he practiced medicine. They are in Dr. Munthe's whimsical be-yourself manner, with much atmosphere. More often than not they tell of his contacts with the poor, and do it in a way to pierce your heart. You will lose no money by buying this book. You can read and enjoy it and then pass it on as a present to almost any member of the family.

AXEL MUNTHE

That Havelock Ellis, best known for his "Dance of Life," is a wise observer and commentator was proven in 1924 when his "Impressions and Comments" was published in three volumes by Houghton Mifflin. Now it is reissued in one volume, with a new title and foreword by the author. In it Ellis appears at his wisest and best. For this is no mere miscellany made from leftovers, but a volume made of the distilled essence of its author's genius. For years he wrote down at odd moments thoughts and reflections which he dated, revised and published.

When the book appeared James Gibbons Huneker said: "'Impressions and Comments' is charged with the author's kindly wisdom, a series of notes garnered from a rich, full life, not more than a page or two in length, on a thousand and one themes, the whole saturated with the tolerant Ellis philosophy which has once defined as the difficult art of 'letting go.'"

Whistler as He Was

One of the newest biographies and a good one is James Laver's "Whistler," just published by the Cosmopolitan Book Corporation. Whistler was always a rebel in love with

Riley Letters

From the many letters of James Whitcomb Riley Dr. William Lyon Phelps has selected enough to make a good volume. He has arranged them chronologically, so that in them we follow Riley's life from his early days of uncertainty through the successful middle years and so on to the last decade of pleasant retrospect. The letters are written to relatives and friends, to publishers, editors, to young writers and to those at the zenith of fame. They include Bill Nye, long his partner on lecture tours; Rudyard Kipling, Meredith Nicholson, Dr. Phelps, Joel Chandler Harris, Mark Twain, John Burroughs, W. D. Howells.

One is to his publisher, John Jay Curtis, president of the Indianapolis firm now known as the Bobbs-Merrill Company. It protests over Mr. Curtis's unholy suggestion that

FICTION OF THE FLAMING VARIETY

THE MEN IN HER LIFE. By Warner Fabian. Sears Publishing Company, New York.

That versatile author who under the pseudonym of Warner Fabian writes so gayly of flaming youth, while putting out popular biographies and what not under his own well-established name, here gives us a new type of the girl of today in his Mary Tighe. Mary is innocent of all the implications of sex, while she is ravishingly attractive.

That the author passes her through enough cocktail parties and other places glutted with temptations to destroy ten ordinary girls and brings her out at the end as pure in heart as a lily, is merely to say that he knows how to tell a siren story in a new way.

FASHIONS IN MARRIAGE. By

MUSICALLY INTONED BY POETS

BY M. F. CUMMINGS

FORTY SINGING SEAMEN. By Alfred Noyes. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

A book of resounding rhymes which will assuredly be the delight of adventurous and imaginative youth. While Noyes is not and can never be the poet of poets who has been described as "a man divine who tells us something new," yet he has the gift of lilting the old things in musical and stirring numbers.

"Bacchus and the Pirates" is an especially merry tale, the experiences of those who detained the rosy god too long being metaphorically described in doleful, but beautifully chiming numbers.

The illustrations and decorations by Elisabeth McKinstry are the most charming things of their kind that the mind of maid could possibly conceive; their cunning blend of realism and imagination being beyond prosaic description.

THE WANDERER OF LIVERPOOL. By John Masefield. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Like Kipling, John Masefield assumes that a ship has personality and perhaps an immortality of its own. In "The Wanderer of Liverpool" he writes the life story of the most staunchly built ship the poet has ever known. Yet the life of this strong and lovely bird of passage was filled with mishaps and dangers of one and another sort which the skill and care of her able officers could not avert. But she outlived all her trials and went on her triumphant way until "murdered" by a huge German steamer which struck her on the port bow and so ended her career. Her biographer avers that of all the sailing ships he ever saw she was at once the staunchest and most beautiful.

The inclusion of tame descriptions in prose, wedged in between two or three pages of the finest poetry Masefield has ever written, has a truly bizarre effect.

THE CARPENTER LAD AND OTHER POEMS. By Richard Burton. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

This little book of poems proves in every line that the thoughts and emotions of an ardent and sensitive soul can be fully and impressively expressed without violation of the classic discipline. Its author recognizes that "'tis meet that Beauty should go beautifully" and that incoherence and anarchy of expression are far from aiding the poet in his efforts to reveal the truth and beauty under the sadness and falsity of communal life.

For wide appeal "Moments" will be most successful. But the longer poem "Conflict before Victory" with its dream of a confederated brotherhood of work and peace "and kindness in the stead of cruelty" will find its home in the minds of thoughtful readers who welcome every voice which pleads for better ways of living together, whether the words that enshrine this thought are gravely uttered by philosophers or musically intoned by poets.

ADVENTURE LEADS FAR AFIELD

DOUBLOONS: The Story of Buried Treasure. By Charles B. Driscoll. Farrar & Rinehart, New York.

The search for buried treasure, for hidden pirate gold, for the doubloons and jewels and plate that lie deep in earth or in the rotting hulks of sunken galleons in the sea's depths, has long engaged the energies and the imagination of mankind.

In this fat volume are told many tales of men who have in the past and who are today giving their time and effort to the discovery and recovery of the vast horde of lost loot that lies in the secret places of the earth and the sea. Stories of pirates give dramatic background to the legends that still cling to their hidden treasure chests.

There is the story of the "Treasure of Oak Island" on the Nova Scotia coast, of the sunken galleon that lies in Tobermory Bay in Scotland, of Blackbeard and his treasure, of the loot of Lima, of the golden cargo of the Lutine off the Spanish Main, of Capt. Kidd's treasure and of the supposedly hidden horde of Jean Lafitte. It is all here and from the pen of a man who has himself sought treasure in the deep caverns in mountain fastnesses, at the bottom of some tropic cover, deep in the jungle, and beneath ancient ruins.

If treasure trove fires your imagination without giving wings to your feet, let a copy of "Doubloons" transport you to lands where adventurers dig and delve for the lost hoards of untold wealth we all know exist.

FULL FATHOMS FIVE: A Book of Famous Shipwrecks. By Frank H. Shaw. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Capt. Shaw tells of the loss of gallant ships and of the heroism of men who stuck to their posts and met death grimly. Beginning with the loss of the Virtois, one of Britain's wonder fighting ships, wrecked long ago in a collision because the admiral gave a fatal order, he recounts the loss of the Titanic, the Birkenhead, the Eurydice, the Kent, the Duncan Dunbar and of other ships.

These wrecks, by fire, by storm, by collision, are here turned into drama. The author has caught the glory of man's heroism, as well as that mysterious something that is the personality of a ship.

His chapters dealing with heroic

AS LEE SHIPPEY SEES OUR LIONS

FOLKS USHUD KNOW. Interspersed with Songs of Courage. By Lee Shippey. Drawings by A. L. Ewing. Sierra Madre Press.

Lee Shippey is a columnist who puts himself in everything he writes. Readers who have never met him need not be told that he is a friendly, big-hearted family man, with a flair for optimism and a gift for poetry. This is to be read between his own self-revealing lines. It is these special qualities that so supremely fit him for writing the brief sketches of celebrities which we all read in our morning paper and which from time to time he issues in book form.

In the present volume Mr. Shippey makes us acquainted with a score or more of famous folk who live in Southern California. If each appears with his best foot foremost and with a look-pleasant-please smile, that's all the better. For it

Born in Boston in 1835 of a good... family, his course seemed all mapped out for him. It included Harvard, a profession, membership in the Unitarian Church, marriage and an establishment where ease without ostentation should reign. He inherited a small fortune from his grandfather; his own father was wealthy. The way seemed clear. All was changed when his father lost his fortune in 1857, with even the Beacon-street home turned over to creditors. Charles built a double house from his own funds and his parents and sisters moved into one side. Rather than see the other half stand idle the young man fell in love with and married Ellen Peabody and the two set up housekeeping in that hitherto vacant half. Mrs. Eliot was merry and wise and the very wife needed by the young teacher in Harvard, who was already improving on traditional methods in chemistry and mathematics. When he was not given the Rumford professorship in 1863, he wisely decided to go abroad for study. When he returned in two years it was to a professorship at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Six years later he was elected president of Harvard.

His work there is well known, but not so well known is the fact that during twenty-five years he met opposition from all sides. He was popular neither with the faculty nor the student body. Resistance challenged and stimulated him. When in the '90's he suddenly found the majority with him he was disconcerted. Later he expanded under approval and became the acknowledged leader in higher education, who took an active part in every important movement of his era.

Dr. James makes free use of letters, which help to reveal the quality of the writer; he presents clearly all the difficulties that Eliot met and, without adulation, makes the reader feel that here was our foremost citizen, who best expressed his age.

WORLD'S CROSS-ROADS CALL

Richly Illustrated Volumes Reveal the Charm and Changing Conditions in Far Countries

HULA MOONS. By Don Blanding. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Don Blanding in "Hula Moons" has written a poem. Its theme is the flower of Hawaii, a glamour that captured Don Blanding and held him enthralled. It makes him ecstatic. He bursts out: "It's such a care-free, joyous place that it has rainbows hanging in the clouds all hours of the day, and then, in an extra fillip of happiness, lunar rainbows at night."

The first time he saw the island from the steamer at dawn he was overcome by the beauty of it all. "A riot of vivid colors came at him almost physical force. A world, fresh and young, lay before us." He knew that the paint was on too thick, a "place of unbelievable enchantment, where nights are heavy with heavy perfume, and the air is full of shark-skin drums sounds and strange voices beneath the sentimental singing of the beach-boys at Waikiki."

But Hawaii he hurls at us is no ordinary tourist resort, but a land of throbbing life and beauty where the past lives on under the thin veneer of modernity. He makes us see it, feel it, long for it. Therefore, "Hula Moons" is not only an impassioned paean to Hawaii but is also the best literature possible for the person who thinks he may go to the islands some day. If he reads this book, his some day will be tomorrow.

CROSS ROADS IN IRELAND. By Padriac Colum. The Macmillan Company, New York.

Padriac Colum combines whimsey, folklore, gossip and history in these observations on Ireland. Pleasant glimpses are given of the places connected with Dean Swift, with Goldsmith and other writers. He considers the Tinkers and the threatened invasion of Ireland by the Gypsies, and stops long enough to chat about these independent people.

He dwells a bit ironically on the ancient glory of the ancient kings of Ireland and pulls from the scrap-bag of history revealing stories of the past. It is all done in poetic prose, freighted with the love of country and pride that always lives in the hearts of the sons of Ireland.

ROMANTIC CZECHO-SLOVAKIA. By Robert Medill McBride. Robert M. McBride & Co., New York.

Robert McBride describes Czecho-Slovakia as "a panorama of animated city and silent country of smiling farmlands and rugged mountains, of ancient castles and costumed peasants."

Mr. McBride is a trained observer and his pen has been quick to transfer to paper what his eyes have seen. Mr. Caswell's drawings enrich the volume and effectively supplement Mr. McBride's word pictures.

Readers who respond to the romance of alien lands and those who like to keep abreast of the changing conditions abroad will find this volume a delight. It is packed with specific information presented against a historical background that is pulsing with life.

One gets a thrill from the pages devoted to Prague, that fine old city so long obscured by the blight of an alien overlordship, but now come to life to flaunt the banners of her ancient glory. The author's account of his informal meeting with President Masaryk conveys a just impression of that remarkable man—a professor turned president, deeply immersed in world politics, but keeping himself simple, democratic, unspoiled by power, true to his own nation and to his own ideals.

THE FRENCH AT HOME: In the Country and Town. By Philip Carr. Lincoln MacVeagh, New York.

Philip Carr, Paris correspondent for the Manchester Guardian and the New York Times, knows France intimately enough to point out all its odd customs. He does not look at it romantically, but as a trained observer who has lived in and out of Paris and has put up with many an inconvenience.

Mr. Carr covers the ground thoroughly, telling us how the aristocrats and peasants still try to maintain their old customs, how life is and is not centered in the family, what quirks of character and opinion make the French the most difficult people to understand, and what charm awaits the leisured visitor in the village byways.

BOOKSELLERS CATER TO GIFT SEEKERS' DEMANDS

"Give English first editions for Christmas!" This is the slogan adopted by Miss Cleveland, manager of Bullock's Book Shop. If you talk to her she may flip the question at you, "In the years to come will your library be appraised at 10 cents a volume or will it be worth good money?" The answer depends on whether or not you know what to buy. By selecting first editions of authors whose reputation will withstand the years, you will create a library that will prove you bookwise in a double sense—as to literary merit and future market value.

Bullock's frequently order as many as 100 copies of an English first edition. Those banked on include Galsworthy, Arnold Bennett, Swinnerton, Francis Brett-Young, Aldous Huxley, A. A. Milne. These are all favorites of Los Angeles book buyers. As to their enhancement in value, an example is Galsworthy's "Forsyte Saga," which sold at $3 for the first English edition in 1922 and was quoted not long ago at an even $100. Even this year, not the best known in the book trade, the sales of such books have increased. Those who buy books either for their content or as collectors' items have gone right on building up their libraries, well knowing that in doing so they are increasing the inheritance tax the government will some day collect from their estate.

A sound reason for favoring first editions is that here the text appears as the author wrote it; changes are frequently made later, due to the censor's suggestions or to the publisher's notion. Those who believe that the author knows best what he wants to say, buy and read first editions.

Aristocrats in Morocco

Mr. Kubel at Robinson's book department takes pride in imported de luxe editions which he personally selects in England. These are the aristocrats of books, in hand-tooled morocco or in calf. The bindings instead of being in the staid colors we used to associate with books show the newer influences, with opalescent shades of jade and amethyst and ruby in contrast to those in black and ivory. Gold inlay embellishes many of these hand-tooled works of art. Some

GANDHI TELLS HIS OWN STORY

GANDHI OF INDIA: His Own Story. Edited by C. F. Andrews. The Macmillan Company, New York.

C. F. Andrews, who wrote "Mahatma Gandhi's Ideas," has edited and abridged Gandhi's own story, first dictated by him while in prison in 1922-24, and added to at various times. It supplements "Mahatma Gandhi's Ideas," and has the special value of revealing the development of Gandhi's character, his beliefs and his policies in regard to his people's relation to Britón.

"Ahimsa," with its basic tenet of nonviolence, is at the soul of the difficulty in India, as it is the keyword for the person interested in the psychology, the philosophy and the achievement of Gandhi. With it is "brahmacharya," meaning self-restraint, particularly, continence. Even before these became a part of Gandhi's being, he was a sensitive soul, always being tortured by some sin he had committed. Typical were his feelings when he was persuaded by an older brother to eat meat, so as to develop brain and brawn to cope with the British. He had not a moment's peace until he turned back again to the "truth" as it appeared to him.

How he developed his belief in celibacy, in mortification of the flesh, in technical non-resistance while opposing with all his strength what he believed to be wrong and unjust; how he became interested in the lot of the downtrodden and developed his social and political beliefs, until he has become the most disrupting force in British policy, is here unfolded in his own words.

Some of Gandhi's offenses in the eyes of British imperialism are his early efforts in behalf of the Indian laborers indentured in South Africa; his opposition in Champaran to the requirement that three-twentieths of the cultivated acreage should be in indigo, a most unprofitable crop; his fight for the suspension of taxes when crops partly failed; and above all else, his campaign for the use of cloth woven in India instead of in Lancashire. His opposition to the salt tax is the last, following his nonco-operative campaign.

He is certain now that India must be freed of British control. But even more important to him is that he himself and each of his followers may become "absolutely passion-free in thought, speech and action."

AFTER CHRISTIANITY—WHAT? By Theodore W. Darnell. Brewer & Warren, New York.

After subjecting Christianity to all sorts of tests, the author of this volume concludes that a new religion free from dogmatism has become necessary, one aiming to educate man to friendly, co-operative living.

SCIENCE IN PLEASANT GUISE

PARADE OF THE LIVING. By John Hodgdon Bradley, Jr. Coward-McCann, New York.

"The history of life on earth is more than a collection of shells and bones in a cabinet . . . It is a dramatic spectacle. One of the quaintest among human irrationalities is the belief that lower animals are blind and helpless, but that man is master of his fate. As a matter of strict truth, however, man has arrived at his position in the world quite as unconsciously as the oyster at his . . . In writing this story of the lower creatures the author has used the vocabulary of man simply because that of the oysters is unknown to him."

So says the author of "Parade of the Living," a geological history of life on earth in which the parade of life is viewed from the earliest thing which had its being in Archaean muck to a speculation as to the future of man. This book by John Hodgdon Bradley, Jr., professor of geology at the University of Southern California, might best be described as a fireside discourse on science.

We are given glimpses of the first living thing that ventured from the depths to the shore, watch the parade of the dinosaurs across 50,000,000 years of history, see early ventures into the air, the development of hoofed animals, and are given a suggestion as to the precursors of man.

Picking up the trail with the Trinil Java man, who may have been either ape or man, Prof. Bradley tells about the Cro-Magnons and the men of Piltdown and Heidelberg, and then brings the reader to the present age.

In the field of evolution treated in a popular way, there is no volume more worth while than this. It is one of those books for reading aloud to the delight and instruction of the whole family.

THE LIFE OF THE ANT. By Maurice Maeterlinck. Translated by Bernard Miall. John Day Company, New York.

Maurice Maeterlinck follows his "Life of the White Ant" with this study of the ordinary ant. He opens up the hill and shows the queens, the hundreds of winged males whose span of life is five or six weeks, and the thousands of neuters. That each of the latter is an embodiment of the maternal instinct is made plain. That is why ant government "is superior to any that man will ever be able to realize." For "in this heroic matriarchate each member obstinately does her duty to the profit of all."

What it is that unifies the activities of the ant-hill, so that all live according to law and all come to precisely the same decisions in time of crises, is one of the mysteries M. Maeterlinck speculates over. The psychic life of these strangely altruistic sparks of life, their social order, their care of the mother, the eggs, the larvae and the nymphs and all their busy life receive due attention.

SONS OF THE EARTH. By Kirtley F. Mather. W. W. Norton & Co., New York.

Dedicating "Sons of the Earth" to "that unknown ancestor who first considered the moral consequences of his own conduct . . . and thus was promoted from a paradise of contentment into a world of problems," Prof. Mather of Harvard University lays before us an illuminating account of the formation of the earth and of the slow evolution of man on its surface.

Our cave-dwelling ancestors, who showed wonderful advance over the spectral tarsier and its ape kinsman, are given due attention, as are the first families of America, as they flourished when the continent was half covered with ice. A look into the future may give us pause, though Prof. Mather finds some encouraging facts and tendencies.

THE ROMANTIC EAST. By Sydney Greenbie. Robert M. McBride & Co., New York.

India, Indo-China, China and Japan are presented here in a way to enable the reader to see the wonders of each country and to make at least an intelligent approach to a contemplation of the civilization of each.

THEY SAY IT WITH PICTURES

PETER ARNO'S HULLABALOO: Another Parade. By Peter Arno. Horace Liveright, New York.

Peter Arno has done it again. His new "parade" is as rapid as last year's—and even more so. It has all his verve, his ability to pounce on a revealing remark and picture it in action and his ironic interest in every modern type, from the night club belle to the self-satisfied dowager and her paunchy mate.

Chuckling through the volume one agrees with the publisher that Arno "presents audacities in such a way that the wit exceeds the audacity." Robert Benchley in his introduction says that with the appearance of Peter Arno "the entire technique of picturized jokes underwent a sudden and complete change." Arno vitalized the illustrated single remark and extended the range of subjects. And he developed an individuality of line that places him at the head of America's comic artists.

THE THIRD NEW YORKER ALBUM. With a Foreword by the New Yorker. Doubleday Doran & Co., New York.

Bound in a terrifying red that isn't cerise but is something worse the "Third New Yorker Album" makes its bow. It offers entertainment second only to Peter Arno's own volume. Some of his drawings are included in this collection of "the hundred or so brightest and most malicious drawings that the New Yorker has printed during the past year." The purchaser is warned that New Yorker artists, disguised as gentlemen, creep down from their garrets, up from their cellars; go everywhere, see everything. The result of this going and seeing is a hilarious collection of wise cracks suitably illustrated by as mean a bunch of artists as have ever been gotten together in one volume.

VENUS AND ADONIS. By William Shakespeare. Illustrated by Ben Kutcher. Lincoln MacVeagh, New York.

Ben Kutcher's twelve illustrations for this handsome edition of "Venus and Adonis" are airy, graceful and striking. The paper, type and general format of the volume are all that they should be.

PARIS. By Raymond Escholier. Lincoln MacVeagh, New York.

Raymond Escholier writes competently on the historic buildings and art treasures of Paris. Six color plates by Nicolas Markovitch and 185 illustrations in photogravure combine to make the book indispensable to one who would know Paris.

GREAT PICTURES OF EUROPE. By Thomas Munro. Brentano's, New York.

The pictures critically presented in this compact volume are arranged according to countries, with those of each gallery or church grouped together. An even hundred are illustrated and analyzed. Thus the volume becomes an introduction to the appreciation of painting as well as the tourists' friend. The enlightening introduction is helpful.

To the Man Who Knows Its Origin Every Word Presents a Picture

How Did Christmas Come to Be Called Yuletide?

The history of the word is dimmed a little by the mists of time. But we know that its Medieval English form was yol, from still older Anglo-Saxon géol, and that it is akin to Icelandic jol, the midwinter feast (going back to heathen times). This word jol may also be the ancestor of jolly. So "Yuletide" from the beginning, perhaps, meant "a jolly time", as it still does, although now in its special Christmas significance.

This is but one example of the many thousands of fascinating stories about the origin of English words which you will find in

LAST YEAR'S JAZZ SEEMS QUAINT TODAY

SINS OF NEW YORK: As Exposed by the Police Gazette. By Edward Van Every. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

Time was when all right-minded people blushed at the mention of the Police Gazette. Now its files are merely quaint or amusing. For, as P. P. A. points out in his introduction, "The years have corroded the prejudice away, and the scream of yesterday that frose the blood is the absurd squeak of today that arouses—if it can be heard at all—laughter." The tabloids have made common what was once uniquely to be found in the P. G."

Ransacking the files Mr. Van Every has assembled the most absurd of the woodcuts of gay ladies and dour pugilists and frightful criminals, with generous excerpts in the highfalutin language used by this journal in its reports of untoward doings.

It is all as out of date as bustles. The criminal type has changed as much as criminal methods; the beautiful stage girl of the gas-lit era in no way resembles our svelte beauties of today; the pugilist is too brawny-chested for our age; the scandalous parties too athletic. But it is entertaining, just as it is enlightening as to changes in tastes and customs since the '90's.

I'M SORRY IF I HAVE OFFENDED. By Clarence H. Knapp. Adorned with cuts by Donald Streeter. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

It is not yet clear who writes the preface to this choice collection of thirty-two sob ballads, some of which first appeared in the New Yorker. Frank Sullivan has his say about them, with fond reminiscences of his age-old friendship for the author; then Corey Ford elbows him out and talks about himself. In the meantime the reader is absorbed in the mock-pathos of such gems of poetry as "I'm Sorry I'm Not Like the Hero," "I'm Proud to Admit that I'm Blushing" and "No One but Grandma Will Do." The grandma in this case is the night club hostess called from her official duties by the wails of a grandchild.

Donald Streeter's illustrations are as hilarious as the so-called poems.

TIN PAN ALLEY. By Isaac Goldberg. The John Day Company, New York.

This "chronicle of the American popular music racket" considers the songs of yesterday as well as those of today, follows the evolution of ragtime and jazz, shows how popular hits are built up and recalls some of the leaders in popular music, such as Sousa, De Koven, Victor Herbert. It is entertaining history. It is dedicated to George Gershwin.

ALAY-OOP. By William Gropper. Coward-McCann, New York.

As an offset to the novels in woodcuts that are attracting so much attention, William Gropper, cartoonist, issues "Alay-Oop" with its subtitle, "Life and Love Among the Acrobats." It is beyond description.

ALL ABOUT FURNISHING

THE CREATION OF A HOME. By Emily Newell Blair. Farrar & Rinehart, New York.

Emily Newell Blair is competent to talk on any phase of domestic life, from what books to choose to what husband and furniture. She lays down three desiderata, beauty, comfort, peace, and writes her book with these in mind. It is supposedly for her daughter she is writing, but many another woman will derive joy from the book.

Furniture should satisfy and reflect something in yourself, even if it is your love of ostentation. Preferably, of course, it reveals your good taste, your feeling for color and line, your wish to create an atmosphere in which you and your family and friends will find peace. How this may be done by the intelligent woman is well and entertainingly set forth in a volume that is the one best gift for the woman struggling with a new house.

ADVENTURE IN FAR LANDS

deeds of the life-saving crews along the English Channel's most dangerous spots are thrilling narratives.

As a record of heroic conduct under circumstances calculated to try the courage and the strength of men of iron, "Full Fathoms Five" has few equals. It is a book for men and boys. It is full of action, of thrill, of the noblest impulses that stir in the hearts of men. It is from the pen of a man who has sailed the seas for years, who as an apprentice helped rescue a ship's crew off Cape Horn in a screaming gale; a man who has circled the globe four times, and who, after serving in the Royal Flying Corps, commanded a Q-boat during the great war. He has seen all sorts of wrecks, torpedoed ships, burned ships, those lost by piling up on reefs and rocks along a lee shore, and he has seen that most mysterious thing of all, the ship that has gone down at sea when all about was calm.

JUNGLE ISLANDS: The Illyria in the South Seas. By Sidney Nichols Shurcliff. With a Scientific Appendix by Karl Patterson Schmidt. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

The discovery in the heart of unexplored New Guinea of a tribe of Stone Age head-hunters, who gladly traded weapons, bone necklaces, amulets and dried heads for knives, mirrors, matches and fishhooks, was the dramatic climax of the Crane Pacific expedition so exuberantly chronicled by Sidney Shurcliff. Priceless anthropological data and photographs, with collections of birds, mammals, reptiles and fish for the Field Museum, made up the scientific plunder.

In a magnificent volume with ninety illustrations, including color plates, drawings and photographs, the story of the expedition is told. Cornelius Crane and three Harvard friends, Murry N. Fairbank, Charles R. Peary and the author, with four members of the Field Museum and other scientists, made the 12,000-mile trip in the brigantine yacht Illyria, with a crew of eighteen men. They were gone a year.

They put in at Bermuda, Haiti, Santa Domingo, Panama, Cocos, Galapagos, Marquesas, Tahiti, Fiji, the New Hebrides and the Solomon Islands. Everywhere they obtained specimens and photographs. The author gives excerpts from his diary, which he enlivens with accounts of the practical jokes and minor adventures of the trip.

On the Mai River were the most primitive tribes. Strangely, they resembled extreme moderns. For, we are told, "Inhibitions were entirely absent and every thought was instantly translated into action." They pranced about, laughed, growled, flourished weapons, snatched coveted articles, fled in fright at the striking of a match, returned to dance in glee over their own reflection in a mirror. The photographs, which are truly remarkable, show these jolly apes adorned with nose plugs and bone necklaces, with their hides covered with dirt and scales, their hair in repulsive coils and their misshapen bodies uncovered.

THE ADVENTURES OF A DEEP-SEA ANGLER. By R. C. Grey. Harper & Bros., New York.

Zane Grey supplies the introduction for this imposing volume written by his brother, who has made world records in deep-sea fishing. It appears that Zane was a born angler, while Rome had to be almost driven to it. The two brothers have spent winters fishing in the Gulf Stream off the Florida Keys and summers at Catalina and San Clemente islands. It was off Clemente that R. C. made his reputation by catching seven Marlin swordfish in one day, a world record never equaled. After that a 400-pound broadbill in New Zealand waters was easy.

It is told in a chatty way by a man who has a zest for life and who knows what other fishermen with similar experiences like to read. It is profusely illustrated with photographs take by the author.

WOLSEY, ARCHITECT OF RUIN

WOLSEY. By Hilaire Belloc. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia.

Hilaire Belloc's method in his interpretation of Wolsey is not to present the facts, and then draw his conclusions, but just the contrary. He tells us in the very beginning that Wolsey's failure meant Christendom made shipwreck. With full power both in civil and ecclesiastical affairs Wolsey might have thrown the weight of the English crown and wealth "into the scale of tradition." If he had, "Christendom would be Christendom today." By Christendom Mr. Belloc means that "universal state superior to all particular states within it," headed by the papacy.

Masterly is his laying out of the ground, with the new and exuberant spirit of the Renaissance ready to break through tradition. He thinks that this might have been directed so as to change existing forms without breaking them. It was Wolsey's fate to be the one man according to his interpreter, who had the power to do this, but who lacked the vision as he lacked the will to jeopardize his career. After telling us in lines that are Miltonic in their power and conviction what was wrong with Wolsey, the architect of ruin, and what we are to think about him and his age, he proceeds to give us a few facts about his life, covering the whole range from the cradle to the grave. Then he turns to the Tudors, whom he calls base-born usurpers, and makes their caliber clear.

In an amazingly brilliant chapter he presents what he calls the cast of his drama. Wolsey, Henry VIII, Catherine of Aragon, Anne Boleyn and all the rest are made to appear as they must have been to act as Mr. Belloc says they acted. That their own fathers would not know them makes no difference; it takes perspective to discover people as they are. Anne Boleyn, who charmed so many men, is "a wretched lanky pin;" Henry is "absurdly amative as he was defective" and so a butt for women's jokes; Catherine of Aragon was a virgin when she married Henry, for her marriage with Henry's brother Arthur "was not consummated." He was but a child of just 15 years of age, and he died a few weeks after the marriage. History says he married Catherine in April and died in November, after the two had lived together five months. As to how they lived, all historians agree that this is to be handled with a scholarly balancing of evidence, permitting of no snap judgments.

And so all the impartial reviewer can say of this magnificent effort to make Wolsey's tragic career prove what Hilaire Belloc wishes it to prove, is that it is grand writing but poor history.

ANTIQUES FROM ANDIRONS TO HOTELS

COLLECTOR'S LUCK IN SPAIN. By Alice Van Leer Carrick. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Alice Van Leer Carrick is not only a collector of note; she is a tourist who knows how to jot down entertaining accounts of her various journeys. She has told in previous volumes of her luck as a collector in France and in England. Now she turns to Spain and throws into the letter-form her chatty notes on her experiences in various places, with her impressions of each. And she makes them so vivid that each reader resolves at once to follow in Mrs. Carrick's footsteps.

At Barcelona her party lodged over a restaurant in an ancient building at the edge of the old town with its narrow streets and its tall church towers. In the shadow of the cathedral she found antique shops with tempting papier-mache chairs, enameled glass, stenciled trays, quaint incense burners and much lovely wrought iron. Mallorca yielded up a lyre-backed settee of mulberry wood, vivid tiles for a pesata each, and wrought-iron knockers.

Andalusia and old Castile as pictured by Mrs. Carrick offer irresistible charm to the mere tourist as well as the collector.

The book has special interest for California who have adopted the Spanish style in house and furnishings. The illustrations are all they should be.

HOMES OF THE CAVALIERS. By Katherine Scarborough. The Macmillan Company, New York.

This profusely illustrated volume is devoted primarily to a presentation of the lordly manor houses on the shores of Chesapeake Bay and the banks of the Potomac. Mrs. Scarborough manages to bring back the manorial period in Maryland, when great aristocrats owned and ruled over estates as large as a principality.

Lived, written, illustrated and made into a book by ROCKWELL KENT

"This story of a voyage to Greenland, of adventures and misadventures, has the splendor of the sun and wind, the dark power of the sea. It is a triumph of lucidity told in the two languages of writing and drawing in which Mr. Kent is almost equally expert."

...books are segregated according to type, neatly arranged on tables marked, "Biography," "Important Books of the Day," etc. Price ranges, too, are given. Even juveniles show this intelligent segregation, so that it is easy to find a certain type of book, for a certain age, or at a certain price. A great time and temper saver!

A very lovely gift book for children was found to be exclusive with The Broadway, "My Song Garden," by a local author. It is a collection of gay little poems, with exquisite illustrations and nine tunes to which the poems may be sung! And the price is low. Another unique feature of The Broadway Book Shop is the large and beautiful display of Catholic religious articles: rosaries, prayer books, vigil lights, fonts.

The Best in Books

Little's Book Shop specializes in gift books, along with the better class of new books. The best in biography, travel, fiction and poetry is on display, as are superbly bound books from the best makers. Among these is that series by George Wharton Edwards on various cities, including Rome and Paris. Notable also are such beautifully bound classics as these in the Ebony Library issued by Dodd, Mead & Co. Here also are to be found the art books issued by William Edwin Rudge, such as masters of etching, masters of the color print, and larger tomes devoted to the work of Whistler, of Devon West and others.

Mr. Parker, dean of our bookmen, has always stood for the best in books, new and old. The most noteworthy books this season he finds in biography and travel. With some pride he speaks of the two-volume biographies of Charles W. Eliot and of Voltaire, of Van Doren's "Swift" and Drinkwater's "Pepys." He reports Winkler's "Morgan the Magnificent" as a splendid example of the new type of biography, which tells the truth without laudation and without muck-raking, and has a good word to say of Belloc's "Wolsey." He is selling many copies of the new edition of Harris Newmark's "Sixty Years in Southern California" as he is of Wister's "Roosevelt."

Business is Good

Walker's has a busy book department, with business better than ever. Children's books are well to the fore, with remarkable values in such books as "Little Chums," pleasingly bound and illustrated at an attractive price, and in a special series of popular favorites, nicely jacketed and pictured, and including such treasures as "Hans Brinker", "Pinocchio" and other books dear to boys and girls.

Fowler's Book Shop is up to the minute with all the new books of merit. Just now Mr. Hickson reports the books most in demand are Belloc's "Wolsey," "Letters of Henry Adams," Laver's "Whistler," and the new Boccaccio. In fiction "Years of Grace," "The Mother," "Cinderella's Daughter," "Phillipa," "The Story of Julia" and "Success" are in the lead.

The Jones Book Store is known for its great stock of books for girls and boys and for the many jolly games always to be found there. Long specialising in educational books and catering to school libraries, it has become the mart for teachers and parents and children looking for juveniles. Not that adult reading is neglected; merely that youth has the right of way at this long-established book shop.

Collectors are fortunate in having Dawson's Book Store, where the seeker for "items" can brouse to his heart's content. All sorts of old and rare books are here, along with the best in costume books and many standard sets. With a new catalogue just out, those interested in the quaint and the rare book can do their selecting by merely checking this. Thus is shopping made easy.

MAUROIS INDULGES IN FLIGHT OF FANCY

Specimen Illustration
From "The Country of 36,000 Wishes" by Andre Maurois (D. Appleton & Co.)

FICTION OF THE BURNING KIND

Claude Farrere. Alfred H. King. New York.

The innocent Isabelle, her beautiful young mother, the charming Paul de La Bohalle. This is the trio that makes a triangle. Married to Paul, Isabelle discovers at once that it is not she whom he loves. She tries suicide, fails in this, and then sweeps her husband away with her, leaving mother to go to confession.

For the rest, we have love in every clime, with the once wronged young wife proving able to charm in at least four languages. It is all very French and is by the author of "Thomas the Lambkin."

LOVE AT FORTY. By Pierre Frondaie. Sears Publishing Company, New York.

That a French woman of forty, long chastely widowed, can fall in love with a man ten years her junior and elope with him is not surprising. That there enters into her choice the noble purpose of saving a younger woman from disgrace gives variety to Emma Baita's story, which has a turn at the end that's certain to surprise the reader.

It is told with due emphasis on the charms of the mature woman, in a manner to delight others than French readers. The translation is by Madeleine Boyd.

REPENTANCE AT LEISURE. By Olive Moore. Harper & Bros., New York.

James Joyce's influence is writ large over this first novel, with everything shown through the mind of an unhappy English woman who had fled to Italy with her child and remained there twenty years ruminating over her life.

While some of the sentences are long and rambling, as befits the method, others become crisp and arresting. The Italian scenes and the people are sharply revealed. But the novel will appeal only to those who choose it for its method.

JOYOUS BETRAYAL. By Charles Pelton. The John Day Company, New York.

This is called "a novel of modern manners." Judge for yourself. It shows David who really loved Minta, but who was captured by the bewitching Dot. The two were married the night before he sailed for France and the war. "Gorgeous, courageous" Minta made the best of it and in the end staged a big scene in which she did the noble thing. Good scenes and pleasant minor characters fill out the story.

This is an open meeting.

Repeaters

That the deep, human hankering for stories about cowboys and tributes to dogs is still very much alive is evidenced by the news that Lee Sage's autobiography, "The Last Rustler," has gone into another printing, while Mazo de la Roche's "Portrait of a Dog" is in its third. But A. Edward Newton's "A Tourist in Spite of Himself" is in its fourth printing and there is neither dog nor cowboy in it. These are all books published in Boston, by Little, Brown.

How to Tell a Goose

Some of the best things, from the literary viewpoint, in the new and up-to-date edition of "The Boston Cooking-School Cook Book," by Fannie Merritt Farmer, containing 3089 recipes, are the definitions and descriptions of various kinds of animals. The passages, "young rabbits have soft ears and paws, short necks and smooth, sharp claws," and "goose: should have a pliable, yellow bill, and soft, fat yellow feet," are verified by the experienced cook, while they fortify the young housekeeper who goes a marketing.

VAN LOON TELLS REMBRANDT LIFE

R. v. R.: The Life and Times of Rembrandt Van Rijn. By Hendrick Willem Van Loon. Horace Liveright, New York.

Taking all knowledge of the period to be his province, Hendrick Van Loon writes in his "R. v. R." not only a sympathetic life of Rembrandt but a penetrating study of seventeenth-century civilization as it flourished in Holland. The book poses as the diary of a far-back ancestor of the author of "The Story of Mankind." This Joannis Van Loon is supposed to be a doctor, who "during a most busy life yet found time to write down these personal recollections of the greatest of his fellow-citizens."

The list of chapters is no less formidable than the title page. And it must be understood in the beginning that here is no popular book, easily skimmed in an evening or two, but one that demands leisurely reading, followed by wonder and reflection. That there is a parallel between Rembrandt's age and our own is made apparent. His was an age of active trade, with material advance, when the people were "contented to be rich and smug and not too finicky" in their pleasures. Baldly the author shows us the other side: "We drag the greatest painter of our time through every court in the bailiwick and allow a couple of rice peddlers to swindle him out of his last pennies. We quietly let our great men go to the poorhouse as if they were so many tramps."

Rembrandt is the case in point. He is shown first as a robust man in the '30's, spasmodically devoted to a dying wife, absorbed as much in etching as in painting, and craving human companionship and merry hours of relaxation.

A trip to New Amsterdam taken by the doctor-author sends him back to Amsterdam, aware of the fact that "religious bigotry and political short-sightedness prove not to be confined to the eastern shores of the Atlantic," and gives him doubts about the superior virtue of the white men as compared to the Indians. These are mere digressions, but to the reader willing to savor his books as well as to read them, they are welcome.

Back in Holland things had been going badly for Rembrandt. The older generation had liked his work. But, he explained, "The younger generation is afraid of me. I think they realize that I am a fairly good artisan. I can paint, if I saw so myself, and they know it. But I can't paint the way they want me to paint and they know that too. Of course, you will say that I ought to be practical and ought to try and paint the way they want me to paint. Well, I will tell you a secret. I have tried . . . but, I can't do it. And that is why I am just a little crazy."

At the last "a forgotten man in a lonely house goes on painting pictures that nobody wants." Here, there, is Rembrandt; and here too is the artist in a commercial age. Hendrik Willem Van Loon has imaginatively recreated both his hero and the people who rejected him, and in doing so has given us a book that is rich and many-sided, critical as well as interpretive, and that conceals under its suavity the acrid tang of aloes.

ILLUSTRATION FROM BOOK FOR CHILDREN

"Mother Goose"
By Berta and Elmer Hader published by Coward-McCann.

FOR QUITE YOUNG LOVERS OF VERSE

SONGS FOR JOHNNY JUMP-UP. By John Farrar. Illustrations by Rita Leach. Richard R. Smith, New York.

John Farrar, amid his activities as a publisher, finds time to write verses that find their way in print. Whether these are for and about children or are of the more ambitious type, they are always individual and distinctive. This year he has been moved to delight his readers by revealing how his own particular "Johnny Jump-Up" elects to make little journeys into the world of fancy.

With its graceful and appealing rhymes and its pleasing illustrations this little book is treasure trove for readers of every age, who count a pixie in their ancestral line. In fact, any such parent who looks into it is almost certain to add it to that lengthening shelf of books the children simply must have.

POEMS FOR CHILDREN. By Walter De La Mare. Henry Holt & Co., New York.

Verses new and old jostle one another in this volume, which the author confidingly tells us he hopes won't do anybody, however, young or old, any harm. There is something in the lilt and swing of Walter De La Mare's verse that makes his serious drollery and his quaint matter-of-factness equally satisfying.

For reading aloud it is hard to find anything better. Try, if you like, this one:

OLD SHELLOVER

"Come!" said Old Shellover.
"What?" says Creep.
"The horny old Gardener's fast asleep;
The fat cook Thrush
To his nest has gone,
And the dew shines bright
In the rising Moon;
Old Sallie Worm from her hole doth peep;
"Come!" said Old Shellover.
"Ay!" said Creep.

is a relief to have a book where everybody is good as well as successful. This might easily be overdone. But Lee Shippey is too experienced a newspaper man to be caught in that trap. He knows how to pepper his sketches with lively anecdotes and to salt them with humor. And that is why they are the best thing of the kind being done in America today.

And now a word for Lee's poems. They are, as he says, "songs of courage," the kind that help men and women to face the day's burdens cheerfully and to carry on however jinxed, Jonahed and hoodooed one seems to be. For here are verses such as this to fortify us:

Life's tragedies but raindrops are
In Time's vast seas of woe and is.
And who can say such grief is his
As merits to be cried afar?

Mr. Ewing's drawings of "the folks ushud know" are worthy of their subjects.

NEW BOOKS OF SPECIAL WORTH

a change be made in one of the poems. Mr. Curtis survived and now lives in Los Angeles, though he still retains that presidency.

Rockwell Kent's "N by E"

Usually I am more interested in man's struggle with himself and his neighbors than with the elements. But Rockwell Kent as an adventurer is in a class by himself. His "N by E," published by Brewer & Warren, is the lively account of his voyage to Greenland in a small boat with two companions. The skipper was Arthur Samuel Allen; the mate was Cupid, who came from Paris for the adventure. "He had curly golden hair, a face like his name, and the expression of a petulant potato." Kent hated him and found it impossible to remain in the cabin with him, and he gives full expression to his feelings.

All went reasonably well until they anchored in a little cove on the Greenland coast, where the ship was wrecked in a storm. They salvaged what they could and then Kent set out overland to find help. After incredible hardships he met an Eskimo, who led him to a settlement where a Danish trader got help from the Governor. Kent did not return home with the others, but stayed on until late fall, supping and dancing with the natives and painting pictures. The result is this unique volume with its many typically Rockwell Kent illustrations.

There's space merely to mention two recent books that are going to figure extensively in Christmas buying. The first is Mark Sullivan's "Pre-War America," which shows us in a superb way how quaint our lives were in the first two decades of the century. The other is Charles A. Beard's "The American Leviathan," treating of the republic in the machine age and emphasizing the relation between the new economics and the old politics.

This story of a trick bear captured in the Berkshires while still a cub and taken to a great circus by the small Tim is full of adventures, as well as of the lore of woods and circus.

SILVER WINKS. By Raoul Whitfield. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

From his own knowledge of aviation Mr. Whitfield has written these air stories for boys, which cover the war period and come down to a transport field with the new air tactics.

WHEN I WAS A GIRL IN HUNGARY. By Elizabeth Pongracs Jacobi. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard, Boston.

As do all the books of this well-known series, the latest volume gives a vivid and true account of life, as seen from the angle of childhood, in the country depicted. Hungary lends itself especially well to such treatment, with its folk customs, its sacred traditions and its simple peasant life.

The Cat Who Went to Heaven
by Elizabeth Coatsworth
Illustrated by Lynd Ward

"In The Cat Who Went to Heaven Miss Coatsworth has done something far more complete and satisfying as literature than in her earlier books. She has drawn from the oldest and richest of all stores of legends of animals and from her own meditation on impressions received while staying in the Orient. It is a book that will give perennial joy to girls and boys on the road to the teens, to artists, poets and housekeepers."—Anne Carroll Moore in The New York Herald-Tribune.

"To the discriminating the name of Elizabeth Coatsworth signed to a piece of writing brings always a premonitory thrill of pure delight. They know that they may confidently expect from her delicacy and sureness of touch combined with deep feeling, and an originality and freshness all too seldom found."—Marcia Dolphin in The Saturday Review of Literature.

"Into this lovely and imaginative story the author has put something of the serenity and beauty of the East and of the gentleness of a religion that has a place even for the humblest of living creatures.—For children of 10 to 12 and older readers as well."—Anne T. "CONTRACT BRIDGE Simplified" by Spencer S. Kapp

BY SPENCER S. KAPP

In the foregoing articles the advice given, with an exception to be now explained, have been, I believe, comparable to any that you may find emanating from the older authorities. The method of evaluation is similiar to that advocated by Wilbur C. Whitehead. The requirements for a bid of "one" or "two" meet, sufficiently close as to avoid argument, with those laid down by the great majority of recognized authorities. That this is true is being demonstrated daily by my studio pupils in their play with partners who use other systems. If their partner uses another system of evaluation, and has a "different" requirement for each bid, there should still be no reason that the partnership would clash; for although they think that they are different, their bids and ours are really made with the same cards in the same way. In reality, systems differ so slightly that a few well-chosen questions, asked at the beginning of play, should suffice to permit of perfect understanding thereafter. Our fundamental differences are two in number, hence the questions: (1.) "Do you 'force' the bid within your own partner's suit?" and (2.) "do you understand and use Ace and King bidding?" If the answers are in the negative, you may either proceed, leaving out these special (and excellent) features of our system, or explain what you mean and request that your partner play your way if he can understand the explanation. It is to follow.

You no doubt have noticed that the instruction herein has cautioned you against raising your partner's suit bid from "one" to "three" (when there is no intervening bid) if you have simply a sufficient number of tricks (5 P. T.) to give two raises. This was advised so that we might reserve the single-jump ("one" to "three,"—or "two" to "four" raise to denote the holding of a powerful hand. Therefore, when we have as many as 7 P. T. in the assisting position (our partner having already bid "one" in suit) and also hold more than normal number of trumps (i.e. or Ax or KXx) we can readily see that a "game" bid is a certainty and that if the necessary high cards are held by the partnership, a "slam" bid can be made without a gamble. Then, why should we search for another suit to play even though our partner's suit may be a minor and ours may be a major? Why leave a safe situation for an untried one? Make then a "forcing" bid (which the partner cannot pass) by raising the partner's bid just once more (immediately) than necessary. A perfect picture of your hand is presented by so doing. Said partner, because of such a "force bid," is told, under our system, to bid at once his lowest ranking outside Ace. If that Ace fills in the force-bidder's hand sufficiently, he will then bid a "slam" in the original suit bid by his partner. Perhaps the force-bidder will in turn bid his lowest ranking outside-the-suit-Ace in an effort to locate (in his partner's hand if possible) some still unlocated Ace or King.

Certain other systems do not approve of this type of demand bidding. Some of the best-known writers advocate it highly. To fail to use this "demand-in-the-same-suit" bid sacrifices a very effective means of safely bidding up to your slams. By all means use it if you have a partner who understands it. Hand XIX in our problem booklet will bid with this or any other distribution of the cards held by the 2nd and 4th hand, to "six" diamonds only by means of this system. The bidding follows:

	2nd Hand	3rd Hand	4th Hand
First Round—
1 Dia. (Immaterial)	3 Dia. (demand)	Pass
Second Round—
4 Dias.	6 Dia.	Pass
Third Round—
Pass	Pass

To bid "six" diamonds without definitely locating the Ace of Clubs in your partner's hand would be extremely foolhardy. This contract can be made against any defense.

'The Messiah' Will Be Sung at University

Particularly appropriate for the Christmas season and always beloved for its melodic beauty and inspiration, Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," will be presented by the Semicentennial Chorus of the University of Southern California the evening of the 16th inst. in Bovard Auditorium, 3551 University avenue.

Alexander Stewart of the college of music faculty, who directed the same chorus last June in "Elijah" at the Shrine Auditorium as part of the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the Trojan university, will be director and Arthur M. Perry, assistant dean of the S.C. college of music, is manager.

Accompanied by the University of Southern California student orchestra of 100 pieces, the Semicentennial Chorus is made up of students and alumni of the university. Lisa Roma, head of the opera department in the college of music, whose career in opera, concerts and oratorio has made her known in Europe as well as in this country, is to sing the soprano role. The baritone part will be sung by Clifford Lott, a leading oratorio singer on the Pacific Coast, and Fred Scott, well-known tenor and motion-picture star, will interpret the tenor part. Mrs. Margaret Monser Biehl is to sing the contralto role.

Rev. Neal Dodd Will Perform Bow Ceremony

Rev. Neal Dodd, Hollywood divine, has been obtained by Paramount to read the marriage service that will unite Clara Bow and Norman Foster, her leading man, in her new starring picture, "No Limit."

Mr. Dodd, through his work in and for the motion-picture colony, is a pastor well-known throughout the world. He has consented to play the part in the new Clara Bow picture because of his friendship with Frank Tuttle, director of the production.

What Leaders of Southland Society are Doing in Never-Ending Round of Gayety and Mrs. J. W. Schulze of Altadena—formerly of Virginia, Minn.

Rev. B. H. Lingenfelter of Torrance officiated.

About eighty relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony. The bride was lovely in ivory faille, her veil was of an old Spanish lace, an heirloom, and she carried gardenias and lillies of the valley. Miss Margery Hull assisted as maid of honor and Miss Billie Hull and Miss Sally Schulze were bridesmaids, all gowned in pastel shades of faille.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Amber Fay, accompanied by Mrs. Paul Taylor of Beverly Hills, sang two or three numbers, which led directly into the wedding march.

John Polkinghorn served as best man, while the ushers were Scott Crawley and Agustus Link of Billings, Mont.

The bride, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hull, was graduated from St. Helen's Hall, Portland, Or., and later was a student at the University of Oregon. She is a member of Pi Beta Phi Sorority. Mr. Schulze attended the University of Minnesota.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Schulze started on a three weeks' motor trip through the Northwest. Upon their return, they will make their home in Altadena.

Mrs. Edwin Force Thayer

The marriage of Miss Catherine Helen Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stone of 5307 Rimpau Boulevard, to J. Miss Marjorie Crandall, in deep coral satin, carrying deep pink roses, was maid of honor, while Sterling Richardson served as best man and John N. Stone and Bert L. Stone ushered.

Miss Gladys Scott presided at the organ and Miss Inez Allen gave several violin numbers.

A reception for sixty relatives and close friends followed at the home of the bride's parents, which was decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. Mrs. Stone received her guests in lace and black chiffon.

Miss Alma Maulhardt is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

As a climax to its week of rushing affairs, Phi chapter at U.C.L.A. of Pi Kappa Sigma, national education sorority, formally pledged fourteen co-eds last Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Katherine Baker, president of the organization.

The new pledges are the Misses Edith Durbin, Helen Carnahan, Emily Cocks, Helen McCormick, Margaret Tappe, Devida Henneberry, Antoinette Weber, Yvonne Withers, Elizabeth McCulloh, Melba Hendricks, Vernette Trosper, Virginia Flint and Katheryn Drake.

An informal tea which stressed the fall motif in autumnal colors, and a dinner and bridge luncheon at the Hollywood Athletic Club, both emphasizing the Thanksgiving theme, were the affairs which composed the rushing season of the sorority.

Mrs. C. P. Neidig of Cincinnati, grand national president of Pi Kappa Sigma, was guest of honor at the pledging and at rush functions. Mrs. Neidig is on her annual tour of inspecting chapters and is making arrangements for the national sorority convention to be held here next year at the Huntington Hotel. Pi Kappa Sigma is the oldest national educational sorority, having been founded in 1896.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Bergvelt celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary Saturday, November 29, at a dinner-dance, with which Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Haggott entertained at the Deauville Beach Club, Santa Monica.

The table decorations carried out the wedding motif with centerpieces of a large wedding cake iced in silver surrounded by autumn flowers. Those included were Mr. and Mrs. Luzon, Mr. and Mrs. Bras, Mr. and Mrs. Mueller, Mr. and Mrs. Hinds, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. M. B. Haggott, F. P. Benefit Party

Members of the active chapter of Phi Kappa Gamma and their friends gathered at the Hotel Huntington recently for a benefit annual party, more than 100 guests enjoying the tea and fashion show which took place in the attractively decorated ballroom.

Miss Ruth Gerry, assisted by Miss Barbara Riley, president of the chapter, and Miss Irene Strutt arranged the affair, which proved to be a brilliant success socially as well as financially. Members of this organization every year take care of several needy families at Christmas time and this year chose as means of raising funds for their work the fashion show and tea at the Huntington.

Campus Notes

One of the most recent of bridge benefits was that sponsored by the Mothers' Club of Sigma Alpha Kappa at U.C.L.A., which was to aid in furnishing the new Mediterranean residence of the sorority, to be completed by the beginning of the spring rushing season for Westwood's sorority row. The function was held at the home of Mrs. Herman Graf, president of the Mothers' Club, 1533 Martel avenue, Hollywood. Chrysanthemums and asters carried out the sorority colors of yellow and white.

Honoring mothers of its alumnae, members, and pledges, Eta Delta chapter of Phi Mu gave an informal tea last Sunday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at the chapter house of the sorority on the University of Southern California campus. Mrs. Margaret [illegible], house mother, presided at the tea table, where pink roses predominated and were carried out the sorority colors of pink and white. The tea was arranged by Miss Beth [illegible] assisted by the Misses Virginia Mitchell and Muriel Rebok.

Bridge-Tea

One of the smart affairs of recent date was the beautifully arranged bridge-tea given in the Little Lido Salon of the Hotel Knickerbocker, Saturday afternoon, November 29, when Mmes. Harry Bickel and Thelma Boone, Phi Psi Sorority, Delta chapter, entertained fourteen sorority members and those included were Mmes. Rose Fredericks, Helen [illegible], Van Noy and Miss Miss Evelyn Edlund, Miss

Sunday School Lesson

[illegible] and Sunday School Lesson [illegible] ember 14, in "Saul of Tarsus a Pharisee Becomes a Christ[illegible] Acts xxii, 3-15.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

[illegible] a strong man, going the [illegible] way, was violently stopped [illegible] to moving in the opposite [illegible], is the Lesson of today. [illegible] was known by the city of [illegible]; now that city is known [illegible] man; for where the records [illegible] books of Saul of Tarsus they [illegible] speak of the Tarsus of Saul. [illegible] the man himself, he belongs [illegible] select little company who [illegible] ity described by the mention [illegible] name. There have been [illegible] millions of Pauls in the world, [illegible] by one of them is meant when [illegible] ply say "Paul."

[illegible] complete is history's reversal [illegible] estimate of men is shown by [illegible] imple fact that today men [illegible] their dogs Nero and their [illegible] tual.

[illegible] than any news that gets [illegible] newspapers are the deci[illegible] made by great men. The real [illegible] points of history are the [illegible] ions formulated in the el[illegible] ty men of strength. It may be [illegible] before the events that sprang [illegible] the decisions are known; but [illegible] al crisis was when the choice [illegible] made. Before the public sees [illegible] gagement ring on a girl's finger, [illegible] herself has known the revela[illegible] of the love that it represents. [illegible], on Mars Hill, or before [illegible], when all the community [illegible] by the cars, was merely re[illegible] the consequences of that [illegible] day on the road outside of [illegible], when he ceased being [illegible] persecuter of Christians, [illegible] Paul, Christ's apostle to [illegible].

BY GOING SOMEWHERE

[illegible] observe that Saul was go[illegible] somewhere; he was not sitting [illegible] fence finding fault with the [illegible] and walk and equipment of [illegible] travelers. The men and [illegible] who have not even gumption [illegible] to be had are the real [illegible] of society. The virile [illegible]—the "bad boy"—who is [illegible] getting into scrapes, is real[illegible] to be worried about than [illegible] lad whose goodness is [illegible] lack of force and courage. [illegible] is more hope of an out-and-[illegible] sinner and blasphemer than [illegible] spineless feckless, fearful fel[illegible] who is best represented by a [illegible] or a zero sign. It is often [illegible] sinners who make the great [illegible].

[illegible] of little people want a spe[illegible] miracle to persuade them to do [illegible] but God does not drive tacks [illegible] sledge hammer. Paul was [illegible] a miracle. Looking back over [illegible] he has meant to the world, [illegible] see how God could have af[illegible] to empty heaven of angels [illegible], in order to cause that bril[illegible] young man to "right about [illegible]. There was no bigger business [illegible] in all the universe than [illegible] version of Saul.

[illegible]thy, aristocratic, self-assured, [illegible]de on toward the oldest city [illegible] world, musing, perhaps upon [illegible]red associations of this beau[illegible]ace, with its memories of Ab[illegible] and Naaman and the proud [illegible] kings whom the armies of [illegible] had put to naught. And he [illegible]self to be on the same serv[illegible]ile retinue rode respectfully [illegible] rear. If there was any one [illegible] farther from the young zeal[illegible]ot than another, it was un[illegible]ly about his course. He was [illegible]absolutely right, and all who [illegible] with him should suffer even [illegible] mad blasphemer Stephen [illegible]ffered. His every breath was [illegible] against these Christian dis[illegible].

[illegible] as he journeyed, he came [illegible]amascus; and suddenly there [illegible] round about him a light [illegible]aven; and he fell to the [illegible] and he heard a voice saying [illegible]to him, Saul, Saul, why perse[illegible]thou me? And he said, Who [illegible], Lord? and the Lord said, [illegible]am whom thou persecutest: [illegible]rd for thee to kick against [illegible]cks. And he trembling and [illegible]shed said, Lord, what wilt [illegible] have me to do? And the Lord [illegible]to him, Arise and go into [illegible], and it shall be told thee [illegible] thou must do. And the men [illegible] journeyed with him stood [illegible]ss, hearing a voice, but see[illegible]ing man. And Saul arose from [illegible]; and when his eyes were [illegible] he saw no man; but they [illegible] by the hand, and brought [illegible] Damascus. And he was [illegible] days without sight, and [illegible]did eat nor drink."

[illegible] Saul needed was light, and [illegible], with an intensity and an [illegible]ose that felled him. As a [illegible] philosopher, the young [illegible] would have reasoned that [illegible] could not be any greater than [illegible] the sun at noon. But the [illegible] the face of the glorified [illegible] made the Syrian sun seem as [illegible] a great many persons are [illegible] by what they call "natural [illegible]" the phenomena of re[illegible]yet the experience of count[illegible]ons, and thank God, often [illegible] skeptics themselves, confute [illegible] abstract philosophising of the [illegible]. Paul learned that day. [illegible] visions of saints in glory al[illegible]ow, that the Lamb who is [illegible] of the City Celestial is the [illegible] Lamb of God, before whose [illegible] sun is dimmed.

[illegible] If to reveal the foolishness [illegible] of wisdom, this young scholar [illegible] Tarsan, this philosopher, [illegible] needed by an experience, [illegible] by an intellectual process. [illegible] his wonderful ministry [illegible] the great apostle appealing [illegible] experience. What he per[illegible] power of Christ meant more [illegible] than all the operations of [illegible] human brain that ever has [illegible] within a human head. That [illegible] on the Damascus road [illegible] a Christo-centric Chris[illegible] gave the church a Christ[illegible] theology.

THE HEAVEN OPENED

[illegible] the infinity implications of [illegible] the greatest is the phrase [illegible]. It means that the [illegible] Jesus is in heaven who [illegible]. All the solicitude that [illegible] when He walked the [illegible] Galilee with His father [illegible] communed with Him to His [illegible] throne. He could not re[illegible] when Stephen was be[illegible] and He could not keep [illegible] such a possible disciple [illegible] to be converted. Our [illegible] limited time is prone to [illegible] Redeemer of this His [illegible]—His concern for His [illegible] earth and all that [illegible]. The enthroned Christ [illegible] great to give heed to the [illegible] little children or to be [illegible] the cries of tempted and [illegible] saints. His eye is on the [illegible] our city even as it was on [illegible] Damascus.

PLANS LAID FOR OPERA

Hollywood Association Will Try Experiment of Giving Permanent Weekly Performances

One of the most ambitious civic developments ever attempted in California is the program being undertaken by Edwin Bower Hesser and Allan Cahill as co-directors of the Civic Grand Opera Association of Hollywood, whose first presentation, "Rigoletto," is scheduled for January 14, at the Wilshire-Ebell Theater, formerly the Windsor Square picture houses, is all that is left for a career.

Theater.

An operatic program to extend through the year is the plan of the organization.

Mr. Hesser outlined the conditions leading to the founding of the Hollywood Civic movement recently as follows:

"Though the richest country in the world, the United States has no outstanding musical center to rival the long-standing prestige of Paris in voice training. Neither has it enough musical opportunity to encourage the young man or woman possessing beautiful natural voices to follow music as a career. In this respect America is far behind Europe, where the possessor of a fine voice finds not only ample opportunity for training, but immediate, paying use for the voice when training is completed.

THOUSANDS IN TRAINING

"In America, thousands upon thousands of vocal teachers are training more thousands of pupils. They learn arias from operas, they study the foreign languages—and many of them would really amount to something in the musical world provided they were living and working in a part of the world where voices had a value.

"Let us take Los Angeles, as an example. Artistically, it is one of the five most cultured and advanced cities on the American continent. Let us suppose that a singing teacher here has discovered a marvelous voice, that the girl with the voice, has worked diligently under her teacher for several years, until she is really ready to sing. What future is in store for her on the Pacific Coast? There is no grand opera company into which she can go—and unless she has money, and a great deal of money, her career ends before it has a chance to begin. If she has several thousand dollars to cover expenses, she can go to Europe and get into opera. There again she is hampered by the fact that she is an American girl. The European impresarios have discovered a source of "easy money" in charging American singers for their debut performances.

SMALL OPPORTUNITIES

"Concert work offers little chance to a singer unless heavily backed financially. Church singing—or going into revues playing in motion-

"Californians have proved themselves music lovers. Hollywood Bowl performances have established the fact that our public has a musical appreciation and desire for worthwhile presentations. To balance this, from a vocal standpoint, we have just a few days of grand opera each year, presented almost entirely by singers brought from New York, who, in turn, had their training and initial performances in Europe. Thus our grand opera life in California is absolutely limited to what is brought to us from other lands—we have no share in it ourselves, no possible California pride in its accomplishments. We pay our money to see and hear these artists—and they take that money away with them.

"The young men and young girls of Los Angeles who are studying and making sacrifices to train their voices go and hear these operatic performances—and hear them with a heartbreak.

WHERE REMEDY LIES

"For such a condition there is certainly a remedy. That remedy is the establishment of a grand opera organization, giving an opportunity to California young men and young women.

The city is large enough to support grand opera every Wednesday night in the entire year—making this "grand opera night" a feature of our musical life. Winter performances in the theater, summer performances in the open air and at such a moderate price that every citizen can afford to enjoy the glories of grand operatic performances.

"Nearly every European center of culture has its own permanent grand opera company, embellished from time to time with the voices of guest singers. Each of these foreign companies has its own highly trained and regularly rehearsed chorus, from which singers for minor roles are selected. Those who succeed in minor roles are generally the singers who are already completing their repertoire of leading parts, and with the greater development of stage experience they naturally get a chance to sing leading roles. Thus their career proceeds in logical, balanced sequence, giving the singer confidence and authority in portrayal of their parts.

de luxe film emporium since the talkies came in, while the Radio Pictures Theaters and others are showing "Her Man" and "Sin Takes a Holiday" with plenty of emphasis on their quality. Of course, Radio and Pathe have always seemed rather closely aligned in the marketing channels.

SALIENT HONORS CAPTURED

Universal captures salient honors with "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The King of Jazz" in the awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Universal has been booming in general financial returns, according to all reports, and the same is true of Columbia, which is going ahead of any preceding year in its net return from present estimates.

There is one significant advantage that these companies have, which is receiving attention from all leaders in the industry. They don't have to overstrain to build up an output. Because they make a comparatively few pictures, each receives the closest attention. The production head in charge can keep close tab on what is going on, and relieve himself of the devastating stress of trying to supervise more pictures than is feasible.

If the production were similarly concentrated at all studios the job of management would be easier, and the output would undoubtedly be of consistently higher excellence.

There is, of course, another side in that the big company's pictures of fine quality attract perhaps less attention than those of the smaller organizations, simply because more is expected of the big company. But then any organization in the business would have been proud to have produced a "Holiday" or an "All Quiet." These films would be regarded as banner attractions at any time, and no matter who made them.

In general, there is a tendency toward a "new freedom" in pictures. The effort is being made to get away from the factory idea. Probably in the case of the larger organizations this will be accomplished by avoiding high-pressure activities—the endeavor so to distribute picture-making through the year that schedules will not be crowded.

There are frequent reports of the merging of interests in the picture business, but most of them come to naught. The most significant of the deals, which brought Fox and Metro-Goldwyn - Mayer together, has made comparatively little change in the status of these two organizations, and if anything they are to operate more independently than heretofore, according to current gossip.

REPORTED MERGERS

Reported mergers of Paramount with various organizations have come to naught. Warner-First National has been most frequently mentioned in this connection, but a get-together seems far very unlikely now. Radio Pictures and Pathe appears to the only consolidation threatened at the moment, it was formally announced yesterday.

All this may be the dark before the dawn of unexpected transactions bringing certain organizations together, but on the surface there is every indication that it is to be a highly competitive period in the history of pictures—a drifting apart rather than a coming together.

The recent antitrust decision does not portend anything to the contrary either. Naturally the decision does not exert the drastic effect that it might have brought about some years ago, when chains of theaters were not so largely controlled by producing organizations, but it is bound, none the less, to be a psychological influence.

Guest Book of City C Remarks of Organiz

BY JAMES

"We all like to see our names A book's a book, though it has "Which (as Alfred Henry Lewis all what we're thinking when v esting Guest Book."

Although the City Club was or anized in 1907, and although every president and secretary of the club, including Jess E. Stephens and L. E. Moselle, present president and secretary, have obtained for the club's speaking programs hundreds of the best-known spellbinders of America and other parts of the world, it was not until September of 1927 that the idea of a guest book," in which the signatures of the great and near-great might be written, occurred to any one. The idea was suggested by C. F. Chilson and J. R. Henderson, who, after hearing an address by Dr. Frederick Warde, purchased a guest book and presented it to the club. Since that date scores of famous men and women have inscribed their "John Henreys" in the book, together with sentences of more than usual interest.

LIFE IN A LINE

The majority of inscriptions in the City Club guest book deal with fundamental principles in various phases of life. Most of the writings begin with a compliment to the club as a great civic and social institution and end with either a tribute to liberty (including "free thinking" and free discussion of vital topics) or with a declaration of the spirit of altruism and idealism which animated the speaker and which the speaker wished to impress upon his audience.

While life may not be condensed into a epigram, often the philosophy and ideals of a person may be epitomized into a sentence, and nearly all the City Club speakers, for the last three years, have been clever enough to pen just such interesting sentences. Evidences of this ability may be found in the following sentences, taken at random from the club's guest book:

"Enthusiasm alone matches immortality" wrote Dr. C. F. Aked, pastor of All Souls' Church.

"The young life of America is on the march" wrote Dr. Lincoln Wirt, western representative of the National Council for Prevention of War.

"The stage is set for progress toward permanent world peace, and the City Club can help with enlightened public opinion on which all progress depends," F. J. Libbey, secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, wrote.

And who would imagine that the following was written by a "cold-blooded mathematician" E. F. Scattergood, chief engineer of the Water and Power Department: "To contribute a bit toward the uplift of our fellows is the highest service to which man is capable."

Here are a few more sentiments expressed in the guest book by men whose expressions betray their positions and outlook on life:

"Fundamental to everything else is good health."—Dr. Royal S. Copeland.

"The City Club is an organization whose purposes have won my admiration."—Chester H. Rowell.

"Man's first duty is to be true to himself."—Syud Hossain, journalist.

"A horse cannot kick when he is riding nor pull when he is kicking."—Jess E. Stephens, City Attorney (November, 1925.)

"A great city brings great opportunities and great responsibilities."—Austin Miller, formerly dean of the school of law, U.S.C.

SO LINDSEY THINKS

"I believe all children are good—if they are understood."—Judge Ben B. Lindsey.

"A man should vote as he prays."—W. J. Phillips, late editor of the California Voice.

"Loyalty to the Constitution, including the Eighteenth Amendment, is a good platform."—Coulson Randall.

"There is no room in America for religious intolerance."—Rabbi Ernest Trattner.

"A good teacher sees his students as they are, but with reference to what they may become."—Dr. F. P. Boelliner, faculty of University of California at Los Angeles.

"Don't forget that Los Angeles will be host to the world at the Olympic Games in 1932."—Charley Paddock.

"A tribute to that great progressive leader, Alfred E. Smith."—Patrick Cooney, vice-chairman Democratic Speakers' Bureau, 1928.

"A tribute to Herbert Hoover, a great big-hearted American—the boy in the north, south, east and west."—Marshall Stimson, attorney.

"California, my feet have wandered far afield but my heart never has left your blessed shores."—Lucia Del Valle Grady, formerly leading lady in "The Mission Play."

William Allen White adorned the book with this sentence: "When I get tired of weather in Emporia, I come to Los Angeles for climate."

C. A. Pugsley, president of the Elementary Teachers' Association, in 1928, urged: "Let us not educate on the basis that the future will repeat the past."

SO SAY WE ALL

"Los Angeles will be a better place in which to live when there is more business and less politics in city affairs."—P. H. Greer, Los Angeles business man.

"Life is a mirror—try smiling at it."—Prof. R. Holmes, noted educator.

"Obedience to law is the citizen's first duty."—James E. Davis, former Chief of Police.

"One never can know a good thing too well."—Margaret Sanger, advocate of birth control.

"Justice delayed is apt to be justice denied."—Superior Judge Bishop.

"After traveling four times around the world, I am more than ever convinced that no place is more likely to offers more advantages than Los Angeles."—Aimee Semple McPherson.

And last (and most pathetic or pitiful, according to the reader's viewpoint) comes this from Bruce Bairnsfather, veteran actor:

SAGE REMARKS FILL VOLUME

Guest Book of City Club Replete With Pithy Remarks of Organization's Many Visitors

BY JAMES WARNACK

"We all like to see our names in print—
A book's a book, though it has nothingin't."

"Which (as Alfred Henry Lewis's old cattleman would put it) is not at all what we're thinking when we're thinking of the City Club's interesting Guest Book."

Although the City Club was organized in 1907, and although every president and secretary of the club, including Jess E. Stephens and L. E. Moselle, present president and secretary, have obtained for the club's speaking programs hundreds of the best-known spellbinders of America and other parts of the world, it was not until September of 1927 that the idea of a "guest book," in which the signatures of the great and near-great might be written, occurred to anyone. The idea was suggested by C. J. Cullom and J. H. Henderson, who, after hearing an address by Dr. Frederick Warde, purchased a guest book and presented it to the club. Since that date scores of famous men and women have inscribed their "John Henreys" in the book, together with sentences of more than usual interest.

strapnanger laughed the opening night and I never had a show with more laughs. But perhaps I am wrong again because they are clean laughs, not laughs that would bring a blush to your face if you happen to be with your daughter or mother. I am one who still believes that New York will accept a clean show. All audiences do not demand filth and audiences still love graceful dancing, and in 'Smiles' they get it from the three greatest dancing personalities the world has ever seen. I also believe that theatergoers still love to listen to lilting music instead of screeching jazz and that they love youthful beauty glorified and not debased. I still claim that outside of 'Once in a Lifetime' McGuire has written again as many laughs as there are in any other musical show in New York. Anyway, Percy, my daughter, liked the show and she is my severest critic and I didn't have to blush to have her see it. Why do you expect me to change the character of the show that Marilyn Miller has always appeared in and played to over $15,000,000 since she has been under my management? It might interest you to know that the public spent $54,000 for tickets, bought at the box-office at box-office prices, to see 'Smiles' and last night's receipts were $7918 while today's matinee drew $4982? So, you see, some people don't agree with you and some people still accept a show without naked women, filth and slime. Your readers have had your side of it, now please give them mine.

"FLORENZ ZIEGFELD."

HONEST WARNING

Mr. Ziegfeld is right. Why should he present me, the Herald-Tribune critic, with $88 in seats and not be confident of a lucrative return from his investment? But above the portals of his theater there has been inscribed the honest warning:

"Nothing for nothing is given here," so that all reviewers who enter may know what is demanded of them. I must ask Ziegfeld, however, to read my reports more closely before he gets me out of bed and scolds me on a cold night in my pajamas.

The only objection I made to "Smiles" was that its libretto was club-footed and not the gay thing deserved by his talented company of dancers, comedians and well-dressed beauties.

I wonder if he aroused Mr. Atkinson, the New York Times critic, from his sleep and bawled him out for writing that "Smiles" is "heavy-handed, humorless and laborious." Or that he ravished the repose of Mr. Benchley in order to reprimand him for saying in the New Yorker that "Smiles" is "dull." What measures did he take to penalize Mr. Lockridge for the Sun's impressions that the play "is not very funny?" Or Mr. Garland of the Telegram, who described it as "mechanical?"

Did he rap the knuckle of John Mason Brown for announcing in the Evening Post that Mr. McGuire's libretto is a "cumbersome bore?"

No, I venture to say Mr. Ziegfeld picks on me and subjects me to influenza because I have been his faithful friend and admirer for generations.

Thus endeth one of show business's most sentimental attachments.

CHILDREN PLAYS

This is the time of year when parents, wishing to entertain their children home from school for the Christmas holidays, ask the dramatic reviewers to commend plays suitable to inflammable youth. Usually I depend upon Prof. William Lyon Phelps of Yale for counsel in the crisis, since his taste in the theater is mellow, naive, human and tolerant. His lists of shows, dramas, grand operas and amusements have been among the sanest things that have been printed in this column, and much of its occasional dependability is due to Dr. Phelps's advice.

Since it is now December and I have not heard from him, I fear that I have offended him in an antic moment and that he has walked out on me in a season where I need him most. Dr. Phelps's inexplicable desertion leaves me alone. All that I can do is to publish the titles of some recent Broadway exhibitions as are now upheaving the public's attention. Thus: "Grand Hotel," "Once in a Lifetime," "Girl Crazy," "Three's a Crowd," "The Greeks Had a Word for It," "Pagan Lady," "Fine and Dandy," "Nina Rosa," "The Vinegar Tree," "On the Spot," "Up Pops the Devil" and "Oh, Promise Me." Young persons may visit any of these with comparative safety, considering the hazards of drama-loving, and there are several others that I know of only by hearsay, but of which it is said that they are very good, indeed. Any drama, however candid, will cause few undergraduates to blush.

Evans Offered Role in Opera

Mark Markoff, teacher of singing, has just received a letter from his pupil, Wilbur Evans, baritone, telling of his successes in the concert field in New York and other cities. Evans, who has been awarded a prize of $5000 in an Atwater Kent radio contest, has been offered a role in opera, but feels that he wants to do further study with Markoff before entering upon operatic work.

STIMSON BEGINS TOUR

George Stimson, dramatic tenor, known as the "Singing Cop," and protege of Schumann-Heink, who is now a student at the Guido Caselotti studio, began a series of concert engagements last Monday at the Ebell Theater in Long Beach. This series is to consist of a tour covering the entire west coast, going eastward to New York City, under the management of Dr. Otto Peters.

Her bridal bouquet was a shower of Cecile Brunner roses and white sweet peas. Mrs. W. J. Hinshaw was matron of honor and wore a green chiffon gown, with a satin and metal hat. Thomas Mills, brother of the bride, served the bridegroom as best man. The ushers were W. J. Hinshaw and Melville McConnell.

Delightful Affair

One of the delightful affairs of last Saturday was the dinner party given by the Consul of Peru and Mrs. Manuel Ayulo at their attractive home in North Orange Drive, Hollywood.

The younger set of the Peruvian colony enjoyed bridge and dancing until the wee small hours, and the decorations were especially effective in the yellow tones. The silver and lace appointments of the table were most charming. A delightful feature of the dinner was the fruit cake which was made by the mother of the hostess, Mrs. Fort of South Carolina, and shipped here for this occasion.

Wedding Anniversary

Judge and Mrs. Guy Bush celebrated their wedding anniversary recently with a dinner at El Mirador Hotel, Palm Springs. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Cameron, Mr. and Mrs. Ell Bush, Miss Melita Krieg and Miss Josephine Gerin.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served to the guests, after which Mr. and Mrs. Julian left for a short trip to San Diego, and will be at home to their friends, 1065½ West Thirty-ninth Place.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS of THE ARMY AND NAVY

La Venta Inn with its picturesque setting high among the Palos Verdes Hills was the setting chosen by Capt. Harry L. Brinser, commanding officer of the U.S.S. Mississippi, and Mrs. Brinser, and Capt. Henry L. Wyman, commanding the U.S.S. Idaho, and Mrs. Wyman, when they were hosts at a smart luncheon party last Sunday afternoon. The private banquet hall, which commands a gorgeous view of the ocean, was the background for the affair and trays filled with bright-colored harvest fruits and vegetables hinted of the Thanksgiving season. Among the guests who motored over for luncheon were Admiral Frank H. Schofield, commander-in-chief, and Mrs. Schofield; Vice-Admiral Richard H. Leigh, commander of battleship divisions, and Mrs. Leigh; Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Joel R. P. Pringle, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Luke McNamee, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. William D. MacDougall, Capt. Edward E. Jackson, commanding the U.S.S. New York, and Mrs. Jackson; Capt. Cecil Sherman Baker (supply corps) and Mrs. Baker; Capt. John D. Wainwright, commanding the U.S.S. Oklahoma; Capt. John Joseph Hyland, commanding officer of the U.S.S. Nevada; Commander and Mrs. Raymond Spruance and Commander and Mrs. Archibald McGlasson.

Bridge clubs are popular in the naval colony this winter and many informal gatherings planned by wives of officers attached to the battle fleet have taken place during the past week. With Mrs. Charles Wellborn, Jr., wife of Lieut. Wellborn, and Mrs. Jesse Hicks Carter, wife of Lieut. Carter, as hostesses, more than a score of New Mexico wives met at Pacific Coast Club Tuesday afternoon for their second luncheon and bridge. The club was the scene of another delightful luncheon and bridge party the same afternoon, sponsored by the New York officers' wives, with Mrs. Leon De Bréhun, wife of Lieut. De Bréhun, and Mrs. Henry R. Dozier, wife of Lieut. Dozier. Those who enjoyed the party were Mmes. Joel R. P. Pringle, J. R. Palmer, Alfred J. Toulon, Marion B. Murphy, F. Taylor, W. G. Conrad, L. T. Young, Raymond M. Bright, W. H. Orzan, John William Lewis, R. D. Sutton, J. J. Nix, L. F. Fairlamb, F. Gills and Beverly Hartt. On Wednesday afternoon wives of officers attached to the U.S.S. Maryland met at the club for luncheon and bridge. Covers were marked for thirty-four service matrons, with Mrs. Harry Hill, Mrs. John Crowe, Jr., and Mrs. Harold Tallman as hostesses.

An attractive week-end event took place at Point Fermin last Friday night, when Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. John T. Bennett, U.S.S. Relief, were hosts at an informal supper party. Marigolds and orange candles were gay decorations and those bidden were Commander and Mrs. Ross McIntire, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. W. H. Whitmore, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. Carleton Andrus, Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. J. W. Allen and Lieut. and Mrs. Paul Dickens. Feminine members of the Relief contingent enjoyed a delightful luncheon and bridge on Tuesday when Mrs. Carleton Andrus was hostess at La Venta Inn. T. Bennett and Paul Dickens.

A snow scene done in miniature, tiny trees glistening with icicles and small figures in ice-skating togs centered a table covered with crimson tarleton when Lieutenant-Commander Wilbur J. Ruble of Admiral Schofield's staff and Mrs. Ruble were dinner hosts at Pacific Coast Club Wednesday night. Lighted candles of scarlet and wreaths of holly added to the festive holiday setting. Bidden for the merry dinner and dancing party were Admiral and Mrs. Frank H. Schofield, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. William T. Tarrant, Capt. Henry E. Lackey, Capt. Robert L. Ghormley, Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. William P. Upshur, Marine Corps; Commander and Mrs. Emanuel A. Lofquist, Commander and Mrs. B. V. McCandlish, Maj. and Mrs. Turnage, Marine Corps; Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. Gary Jones and Mrs. H. L. Burmann.

Operatic Tenor Begins Teaching Students Here

Arriving here a few weeks ago from St. Louis, where he has been teaching for several years, Hippolyte T. De Bernard, French operatic tenor, has established a studio at the residence he has taken over on North Hobart Boulevard and is engaged in instructing a class of vocal pupils.

Mr. De Bernard was an assistant teacher of Mr. De Reszke for three years in Paris, it is said.

Although a native of France, he received his early training in singing in Italy. He entered the Conservatory of Venice at the age of 17 and after two years attended the Conservatory of Milan. Later he studied in Naples with Prof. Carelle, the only teacher of the old Italian school living at that time. After appearing in grand opera for a time in different cities, he went to Caruso for professional advice, and through the influence of the great tenor and Dr. Holbrook Curtis, throat specialist of New York City, gained a hearing with Mr. De Reszke, with whom he studied for five years.

Before coming to America, he sang leading tenor parts with operatic companies in Berlin and Vienna and at Covent Garden, London, where he enacted the role of Cavaradossi in "La Tosca." Later he was for several seasons tenor with the Boston Opera Company. Due to a heart ailment, he was forced to give up his operatic career and has since devoted his attention to teaching, conducting classes in New York City before coming west.

"EVEN IF PROFESSOR ARTHUR CABLE SAYS WE MAY!"

"THAT DEBATE ON DEMOCRACY—PROVED AN HILARIOUS EVENING."

I AM awed with the superiority of my dear Ebell Club. You should read the December issue of its magazine.

We read "The Ebell of Los Angeles does not solicit new members. Members so obtained might not be such as the club would desire. Women belong to Ebell because of the cultural advantages. There are many women worthy of membership in Los Angeles.

"Generally speaking, this large influx (of new population) is composed of men and women who, in their respective communities throughout the nation, were leading citizens. Many of these women are worthy to become members of Ebell" and so on.

Can you marvel that I get swelled headed occasionaly when I recall that this most superior Ebell was the very first woman's club to give me an honorary membership back in the war days when maybe they were not so exclusive?

But let us read on: "It might be worth while to explain to them (these female leading citizens from other States) that Ebell does not solicit members, but that she is not exclusive. Otherwise, these fine women might not understand. And to explain this fine old tradition will protect our club from a reputation of snobbery."

Nothing could induce me to say "Oh, yeah," even if Prof. Arthur Cable of Arizona University says we may.

All the same, just to get down to business, Ebell wants new members. I mean, the rest of this article above quoted, urges members to use their guest tickets, lots and lots, because then outsiders can see what a nice club Ebell is and beg to be allowed to join. It's more ladylike to beat about the bush.

On Page 10 of the same interesting document, we find Mrs. O. C. Vogel giving Ida Tarbell a snip for not including any club women in her list of the fifty most distinguished women in the nation.

"In failing to put one on her list," writes Mrs. Vogel, "it would seem that Miss Tarbell has paid the club woman a subtle compliment, implying that she shines like the diamond because she is so many-sided, each facet some quality that lends brilliance to the stone that is the typical club woman."

Ummm, Ida was sort of subtle about it.

Oh, I cannot get away from this subject. Here's another paragraph. "To be called an average American woman is to measure up to a standard that is recognised throughout the world as the highest; a standard set and maintained to a very great extent by the women's clubs of this country."

JUNGLE SUITS CAMERAMAN

The civilized world is too dangerous to live in, it was declared by Ernest B. Schoedsack, who has just returned to Hollywood from a year in the jungles of Sumatra where he filmed "Jungle War," an adventure drama for Paramount.

Schoedsack, whose daring camera ventures have brought to the screen such epics as "Grass," "Chang" and "The Four Feathers," finds it increasingly difficult to adjust himself to the hazards of civilization after each trek into strange corners of the globe.

"Although I am always eager to get back to New York or Hollywood, I am ready to move on to the next place after a few months of city life," admits the intrepid adventurer. "Metropolitan traffic leaves me in a state of terror, and I find that civilized comforts are far from healthful. There is too much to eat, too much indoor work, too much noise and too little exercise."

Having lived by the hard, demanding rule of the tropics for many years, Schoedsack sleeps but five hours a night, usually arriving at the studio ready for the day's work at the time the night watchmen are going home.

Only one month has passed since he returned from Sumatra, but already he is making plans for another project that will take him many miles from a drawing-room existence.

I'm so proud of our scenario girls. Did they fade away and depart when talkies came in? They did not. Why Frances Marion even took the academy prize for the best original scenario of the year with "The Big House." A very masculine story at that. Then there's Eve Unsell, converting John Vandruten's new play "Reputation," for Ruth Chatterton at Paramount. Florence Ryerson, Dorothy Yost, Leonore Coffee, Gladys Unger, Maude Fulton, Dorothy Farnum, this new sweet Astriol Lee from England, are all going strong. Little Virginia Kellogg, a former Los Angeles High School babe, has just been elevated from publicity to scenarios at Paramount.

That debate on democracy between Elliston of Oxford and Grehan of Liverpool, against Bautger and Crawford of U.S.C. proved an hilarious evening, with the English team winning by a popular vote.

Laurence Grant, president of the evening, chosen in his capacity of chairman of college contacts and public relations of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, drove from the Hollywood Athletic Club right into the mud (Sunset is being paved) and so was half an hour late. Laurence, we may add, is also vice-president of the Masquers and chairman of the house committee of that club, a director of the academy and all sorts of stylish things in picture circles.

So, of course, he began by getting in some nice remarks about the academy. Then he explained the trouble the gift of speech had caused in the world—languages having come out of Bedlam. In fact, Laurence was most witty anent speech in general.

Elliston of Oxford made a quiet telling speech. Bautger of U.S.C. used muscular emphasis. Grehan of Liverpool took his energy out in walking back and forth. Crawford of U.S.C. was blithely gymnastic and positively harangued.

Every quip against each other's country brought generous laughter, as, for instance, when Bautger inadvertently declared America's form of democracy is "the best that money can buy!" The English whooped it on this one.

Bautger quoted Leacock to the effect that the American politician accepted graft for doing something for you, whereas the English one took the money, but did nothing for it.

Back came Elliston with the retort that, while the American politician was false to the state, the Englishman was only false to the grafter.

The American argument was on "ideals" to a large extent, whereas the British harped on present practical results. But as the latter won the debate by two to one, we are to understand democracy is a failure.

An earnest little lady came to see me. It was a shame, she felt, that the city did not make more use of the brains and wisdom of grandmothers; that if we would mobilize a council of grandmothers most of our troubles could be solved forthwith.

(Lots of people thought we had one already.)

She said her own mother was past 80 and still dominating the family—essentially for its good. She wanted to arouse my enthusiasm for the scheme. The grandmothers are to be paid by the county and be a sort of supercouncil. She felt the money would be well invested.

Further news from Dr. Cecil Reynolds, who deserted surgery temporarily for the New York stage—very temporarily as it transpires. The charms of acting have been greatly exaggerated, dirty theaters and dirtier plays in New York.

So he has packed up his grips and sailed for Europe, where he will confer on the latest developments in surgery. He will return via Panama in January, all set to slice into more brains when he gets back.

Mrs. Ben Lindsey, wife of the birth-control and companionate marriage judge, is expecting an interesting event, about next March. They adopted a little girl a few years ago, despairing of ever having any of their own.

Mrs. Lindsey is said to be sensitive about the peculiar social position the judge's advanced views have occasioned them. This doesn't sound reasonable, for everyone I know is showing an affectionate interest in the forthcoming event. Don't know how it was in Denver, but Los Angeles can stand any number of advanced notions with complete equanimity.

Young Radio Artist Will Give Concert

Next Thursday evening in the music room of the Biltmore Estaleah, 19-year-old prima donna, known as an occasional radio artist and comic opera star, will make her debut on the concert stage in a selected program of popular and operatic songs assisted by Lilian Howard, young English pianist.

At the age of 15, while attending the Phoenix High School, she won first prize in a State-wide competition.

She will be assisted in her program by the young English pianist, Lilian Howard, who started her training in Belgium, where she won a scholarship at the Hove School of Music in London.

TOUCH OF FEMININE ACHIEVED

Christmas Atmosphere of Store Inescapable for Woman Buyer

BY OLIVE GRAY

The New York Store (J. J. Haggarty's) always beautiful, has taken on new loveliness with the holiday season.

Directly you enter from Seventh street or from Grand avenue, you are greeted with an atmosphere of Christmas cheerie, unexcelled in any shop about town.

More like an elegant salon in a handsome home than like a place of commercialism, this store exhales an air of femininity—for stores have character, just as persons have. Upon every side are seen treasures for the feminine wardrobe and boudoir. Fine perfumes, prizes for the bridge game or for other functions social; costume jewelry of the higher type, articles so different and so dainty that they might be museum pieces—and you are surprised when you examine the price marks! Lovely lingerie is there, scarfs and gloves, lacey neckwear and pajamas for every hour in the day or night; toiletries of rare excellence; lamps of many kinds; handkerchiefs for all occasions, for tailored garb, for the more formal afternoon, for dinner and the dance. All of this, sounding a note of gayety quite its own, is supplemented by seasonal decorations as elegant and as conservative as would be selected for a fine boulevard habitation. The crystal chandeliers, always forming a brilliant part of the pageant in the New York Store, are now touched with Christmas green and red; wreaths of living foliage and vines serve to emphasize the Christmas spirit and, in fact, the visitor to this store cannot but assimilate joy from the generously lavished effects evinced here. On floors above that welcoming reception salon, with its array of gift objects feminine, are those more substantial articles sought this season—frocks and gowns, coats and evening wraps, furs and, in short, all habiliments which would find a welcome on Christmas morning from the woman of discriminating taste.

The very exterior arcades of this inviting store seem to beckon one to enter, and many are the women who pass along that bright expanse, enumerating to themselves the articles they would choose there for their Christmas gifts.

'Irish Rhapsody' to Be Given by Glendale Unit

In the comparatively limited field of symphony music not fathered by composers of continental Europe, Victor Herbert's "Irish Rhapsody," is generally admitted to shine with brilliance. Because it is heard all too infrequently, thanks should be accorded Modest Altschuler for putting it on the Christmas concert program of the Glendale Symphony Orchestra, Monday night, the 15th inst., at the Hoover Auditorium, Glendale. "Irish as Paddy's Pig," the lovely melodies of the Emerald Isle are woven in the rhapsody in a manner that gives the symphony a universal appeal.

With this charming composition together with a Scriabin opus and Olga Steeb appearing as featured artist, the Glendale concert should attract a large audience. Miss Steeb is to play the Saint-Saens Concerto No. 2 in G minor, with which she won enthusiastic encomiums at the Hollywood Bowl last summer. It will be her adieu to America for many months.

Mr. Altschuler has kindly authorized the publication of the following letters from Skryabin, which have never been printed before.

(Edit. Note: December, 1907.)
Square de la Harpe,
C Lausanne,
Suisse.

Dear Modeste.

You certainly deserve to be executed. All these days I tried to think of the most terrible execution I could choose for you. Tania says that the best punishment would be for us both to come to New York (Edit. Note: That was before a second concert tour in the United States was planned,) and give you for the second time all the trouble that fell to your lot during our first visit! Well, may God pardon you. If you will write, everything will be forgiven on our part also.

After all, I will let you know that most important news. Maybe I shall go to Russia, where they are arranging big concerts for me in Moscow and Petersburg, including the third symphony and the "Poem de L'Extase." It probably will happen in March, so that if you will arrange a trip for us to New York in February (of course, on good terms) the season will not be lost in vain. Yes, by the way, I want to ask you . . . How did Hofman play my compositions? La Liberte wrote to me that he was performing the third sonata. You, of course, attended the concert. Be so good as to write me your impressions of his interpretations.

Do not be surprised, please, at my handwriting being so poorly. I am utterly fatigued. I have been working the whole day on the fifth sonata, which I almost finished, and you will not recognize the "Poem de L'Extase." (Edit. Note: Skryabin had discarded the original orchestration and was working at the new version he and Modeste Altschuler had conceived.) So many new things! Both as to detail in music and orchestration! Only lately I began to feel satisfied with it. I think it will not be so bad! During the last few days I was quite unable to stop. Always new and new horizons in orchestration opened themselves. You will see what I shall do in my next composition. I wish I could have some contact with an orchestra and orchestra musicians. I possess enough imagination, but that alone is not always sufficient. Sometimes you have to play on the instrument for which you are writing.

Well, I meant to send you a few lines, and began to chatter. Goodnight. I kiss you heartily, and yet once more I must scold you. And I demand ! ! ! ! . LETTERS. (Edit. Note: Exclamation marks and capital letters are Skryabin's.)

To all of you my warmest greetings. Tania sends her love to all and best wishes for the New Year.

Affairs of the Week

By Juana Neal Levy

Christmas and Yuletide awaken festive activities, and seem to be ... for fantasies, pantomimes and fairy plays predominating, many ... for the kiddies, although the grown-ups are not far behind in ... Among the charming pantomimes ... more than usual inter- ... Golden Youth, which is be- ... for the 12th and 12th ... by the art depart- ... University of California at ... and staged in Royce ... the Westwood campus. It ... and is to be directed by ... Louise P. Sooy, chairman of the art department. It was produced in Honolulu two years ago, critics being very favorably impressed, and stressed its art and dramatic interest.

The story is based on the poem by Witter Bynner, "The Canticle of Pan," with a prologue, epilogue and four acts, the two former being spoken, while the acts are given in pantomime, with music and dancing.

It is not an amateur production, the speaking parts being given to professionals, but this particular vehicle was chosen as it offers opportunity for exaggerated effects, each act being like a beautiful painting and great stress has been placed on the use of color, line and pattern to create definite emotional effect, the story being that of Pan seeking happiness in the realm of man, meeting material gods, Fun, Romance, Power and Greed, finding only disillusionment, until at the end he finds true happiness.

Friday night, the 12th inst., is campus night, when the university will turn out en masse, while the Saturday matinee will be principally for children. Saturday night, the 13th inst., is the night when patrons and patronesses are expected.

Mrs. Sooy's Honolulu production was under the distinguished patronage of former Gov. and Mrs. Wallace Farrington, former Gov. and Mrs. Frear, Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Marvel, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, and Mrs. Clarence M. Cooke, while patrons here include Gurney E. Newlin, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Fredericks, Mr. and Mrs. George I. Cochran, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Francis Sartori, Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland, Miss May Gearhart, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Behymer, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Crutcher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lawler, Mr. and Mrs. Orra E. Monnette and Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Dickson.

Many members of prominent sororities are listed in the personnel of the cast, among them being Miss Gertrude Wickes, a member of Alpha Phi Sorority, Miss Mary Ann McConnell, affiliated with Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, Miss Ruth Nagle, president of Theta Phi Alpha Sorority, Miss Helen Waggoner, member of Alpha Delta Pi; Miss Sue McCullogh, member of Delta Epsilon; Miss Cornelia Maule, also a Delta Epsilon, as is Miss Dorothy Sharpe, while Miss Verna Bates is a member of the University Dramatics Society.

Reservations may be made with the art department of the university.

Christmas Play

The Junior League of Los Angeles Christmas Play, "Aladdin," promises to be one of the greatest successes this talented organization has yet given. The morning performance yesterday was crowded with children, who gathered in little groups and were most enthusiastic in their applause and ovations, much to the amusement of near-by older relatives, parents and friends.

Louisville Man Claims Bride

Mrs. Rudolfo Monaco

ONE of the interesting weddings of the week was that of Wednesday morning when at 10 o'clock in Santa Teresa Church, Miss Helen Tepe Shepherd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Casper Shepherd of Louisville, Ky., became the bride of Dr. Rudolfo Monaco, with Mons. Tonnello officiating in the presence of immediate relatives only.

The dainty bride wore her going-away gown and was assisted by Miss Esther Monaco as maid of honor, while Armand Monaco served his brother as best man.

The bride received her schooling in Louisville, while Dr. Monaco, who is the son of Mrs. Emma Monaco of this city, was graduated from Stanford University School of Arts and received his degree in medicine at University of Louisville. He is affiliated with Phi Chi Fraternity. After a honeymoon in the Yosemite, Dr. and Mrs. Monaco will return to make their future home at 3021 Waverly Drive.

Diversions of Society

gala evening performance tonight, and also for next Saturday morning's performance, include Mrs. Eugene A. Hawkins, Jr., (Margaret May Johnston,) who is in charge of the gala performance; Mrs. Charles O. Matcham, Mrs. Joseph Peeler, Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. Ezra Fish, Mrs. Frederick Williamson, Mrs. Norman Chandler, Mrs. Lionel Ogden, Miss Louise Janss, Miss Elizabeth Masson, Miss Flora Hollingsworth, Miss Margaret Eichelberger, Miss Katherine Thomas and Miss Ruth Moulton. Coffee and cigarettes will be served in the foyer between acts. The affair, which is patterned after the gala performance given by the Junior League of New York a year or so ago, promises to rival the eastern effort.

Reservations are being made rapidly and from all indications it is beginning to look like a real Hollywood premiere. The cast includes Aladdin, Mrs. John Lind Carson Rollins; Mrs. Watson La Force, Princess Badroulvadour; Mrs. Dorothy Reid, Zobeide, Sultan; Mrs. John Wreford Chapple, Grand Vizier; Mrs. James Neville, Julinar; Miss Helen Winnett, Abdalla; Mrs. Van Buren Jarvis, Tunka; Mrs. Keiling Pulliam, and many slaves, dancing girls and members of the Sultan's court.

Interesting Recital

Society of the Southland is eagerly anticipating the dance recital to be given Monday evening, the 15th inst., at the Theater Mart, Juanita avenue, by Miss Harriette Huntington, talented young debutante daughter of the late Rev. Harwood Huntington and Mrs. Huntington of Lorraine Boulevard, the affair to be under the personal direction of Michio Ito, and Raymond H. Sasche accompanying at the piano.

Miss Huntington, who is one of the most popular members of the younger set, came to the Southland from Springfield, Mass., with her parents, and since her father's death some years ago, the family has made Los Angeles one of its homes, passing a portion of every year here.

Miss Huntington attended Marlborough School for three years and later was graduated from Briarcliffe School at Briarcliffe-on-Hudson, N. Y. The Huntingtons for many years passed their summers abroad, having a villa at Dinare, France, where they entertained extensively. She is a talented musician, being most proficient on the harp and piano as well as being extremely clever with the violin. She is an enthusiastic sportswoman, having exhibited several horses at the Flintridge Riding Club and has won blue ribbons for her mounts in amateur and school exhibits.

The Huntington home in Lorraine Boulevard is the rendezvous of the younger set, summer evening parties taking place on the tennis courts in the gardens, while in the winter and fall the guest house is used in the gardens for bridge and dancing parties.

Miss Huntington comes of a most distinguished Revolutionary ancestry, both her father and grandfather, Rev. John Taylor Huntington, having been graduated with honor from Trinity in 1884 and 1853, respectively, while her great-grandfather, Rev. Enoch Huntington, was graduated from Yale in 1821, her great-great-grandfather, Attorney Enoch Huntington, was Berkeley premium scholar and was graduated with high honors from Yale in 1785, while her great-great-great-grandfather, also Rev. Enoch Huntington, who was graduated from Yale in 1759, was a brother of Samuel Huntington, a Governor of Connecticut, President of Congress, judge of the Supreme Court and signer of the Declaration of Independence, while another great-great-great-great-grandfather, Gen. Jabez Huntington, was a major-general of Connecticut Militia from December, 1776, to May, 1779.

Smart Affair

One of the smart affairs of recent date was the farewell tea with which Mrs. John W. A. Off entertained November 29 at her home, 634 South St. Andrews Place, honoring Mrs. Robert P. Vuilleumier, several dozen friends being bidden, the tea table having as a centerpiece a mass of early winter flowers and foliage.

At Hotel Del Coronado

Many Angelenos journeyed to Hotel del Coronado to pass the Thanksgiving holiday week-end, and the homelike atmosphere for which the hostelry is noted was particularly apparent. The lobby was fittingly decorated for the occasion, shocks of corn flanked the entrances to both the main dining-room and the Crown Room, as well as the big fireplace which was banked with autumn leaves. A live sycamore tree stood in the center of the lobby, and baskets of autumn leaves and jardinieres of yellow crysanthemums and holly berries were placed here and there. Between the entrances to the two dining-rooms was a harvest home corner with a great horn of plenty spilling its luscious fruit over the big table and onto the floor, where pumpkins and squashes peeked from behind the shocks of corn that surrounded the table and adorned the side walls.

There were many dinner parties, including one large Hotel del Coronado family party, at which Mrs. Helen Baird, hostess for the hotel, presided. A spirit of camaraderie prevailed as old friends of years were getting together for the first time after traveling throughout the summer to distant parts of the world.

The J. Warde Hutton concert quartet gave a special program during the dinner hour, assisted by Wilda Bernard, soprano, and Evelyn Stone, contralto, who were brought from Los Angeles for the occasion.

All tables were decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and lighted by yellow tapers, and the special decorations for the "family" dinner party were two horns of plenty, one of which was fashioned of bronze chrysanthemums, overflowing with blossoms which were strewn to one end of the table, while at the other end was fruit falling from a golden wicker horn of plenty. Huge candelabra marked either end of the table at each of which was a flock of miniature turkeys eating grains of golden corn.

Guests at the dinner included Baron and Baroness de Ropp, Mrs. William B. Mershon, Mr. J. A. Harsfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Maslin, Mrs. J. Bertz, Col. and Mrs. R. M. Schofield, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. George Prescott Wells, Mrs. H. H. Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Rollin H. Scribner, Miss Charlotte Anderson, Miss Cora E. Morlan, Miss Donna Perkes, Capt. William Pitt Scott, Col. J. B. Lankersheim, Dr. F. M. Foster, Dr. G. Wylie Broom, and Mr. and Mrs. S. Konigstein.

Capt. Arthur C. Stott, U.S.N. chief of staff to the commander of the destroyer squadron, and Mrs. Stott gave a dinner for Admiral William H. Standley, U.S.N., commander of the destroyer squadron, and Mrs. Standley, Capt. John Downes, Capt. and Mrs. Fred W. Holt, Capt. and Mrs. Adolphus Staton, Capt. and Mrs. Herbert L. Kelley, Commander and Mrs. William C. Owen, Commander and Mrs. J. C. Van de Carr, Commander and Mrs. C. E. Battle, Mrs. Thalbert Alford, and Commander and Mrs. Aylmer Morgan.

Rear Admiral Julian Lane Latimer, U.S.N., and Mrs. Latimer gave a family dinner party entertaining their sons-in-law and daughters, Capt. R. C. Thaxton, U.S.M.C. and Mrs. Thaxton, Lieut. R. R. Deese, U.S.M.C. and Mrs. Deese, Miss Laura Latimer and Mrs. Latimer's mother, Mrs. C. A. Richardson.

PASADENA OPENS FIRE

Variety and Quality Noted in Crown City's December Art Exhibitions

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

Before passing to the lively series of art exhibitions just now in Pasadena we would call attention to the presentation, in Ebell Club's Salon of Art, of a memorial exhibition of paintings by Theodore B. Modra, whose recent death bereaved the art world of Southern California. How better could we do this than by reprinting from the Ebell magazine Anne Hunter Temple's touching poetic tribute to the artist?

The valley, the far hills, the sky,
All lie inert and stilled
Because God willed that you should go away;
Today our hands are tightly clasped,
For you have passed beyond our earthly view
And we who knew your dignity and grace,
Your glowing, handsome face, your sweet inspiring smile,
The while you spoke of worthy, lasting things
That ever bring the great reward of Peace,
We shall not cease to hear your gentle voice;
Your choice would be to live eternally
Within our hearts, as you now live above,
A Spirit in the boundless realm of Love.

But we shall miss you, oh, so poignantly
And pray, that trust, may ease death's cruelty.

GEORGE BRANDRIFF gives fresh evidence of his growth in the exhibition just opened at the Pasadena Art Institute. To the European subjects, the type of which was made familiar in his last exhibit at the Biltmore Salon, he has added a group of recent paintings of Arizona which show an increasing grasp of natural and pictorial structure and further pursuit of those good color values with which this artist works.

Well designed, airy, yet strong in color, they are among the best pictures any of our regional painters have brought back from the land of red buttes. Brandriff, whose style embraces color and form in one stroke of his brush, has given us, in these new desert pictures, his best work; more authentic than the European subjects, these have the feeling of painting thoroughly studied out in the face of a nature the artist knows and loves.

ANTHONY THIEME, born in Holland, in which land he gained the basis of a thorough academic training, has now painted for many years the harbors and back waters of New England's coast. The brilliant results are seen for the first time in the West in a one-man show at the Pasadena Art Institute. Thieme has an eye for strong tonal contrasts that lends to his pictorial transcriptions of fishing boats, old wharves, ancient Yankee mills moldering beside quiet waters, a brilliance of light that delights and satisfies the eye. He picks out unerringly the tone of a large mass of boats with their reflections, keeping all his jolly details well subordinated to this dominant tone, and putting into it the maximum of color possible without upsetting its rule.

He sees nature, rejoices in its vivacity and beauty, and paints it with a knowledge and gusto we do not always associate with such a purely representational method. Many prizes have fallen to him. Many museums have shown his work. All who love boats and harbors or good painting should enjoy this showing.

PUCK, you may recall, disappeared into the forest that moonlight night when Barrie's "Dear Brutus" closed its doors. But lo, he has popped up again in Pasadena. True, the artist, whose water colors of fairies, flowers and bubbles are now on view at the Pasadena Art Institute, signs himself Harold Glase. But we know his true name is Puck.

Who else could conceive such delightful things? The doubtful fish about to have his lips painted by a little merman, furnishing comic relief to the lovely mermaid who wields mirror and lipstick for her own beauty. Who else could imagine a tiny imp of a sentry, marching his beat, gun on shoulder, over the giant's bald head while that monster sleeps? Who else paints such entrancing fairies touching their lovely flesh with innocent affection?

Flowers, toadstools, mountains rising above fairy-haunted pools into pearly mists—it is a land of perpetual childhood-dreaming made real by an exacting artist whose every pen stroke, every wash of color, is motivated by love. Gossamer, whimsical illustrations are these, yet real as one's own little sons and daughters. Two examples, indeed, show portraits of children done in the fairyland we know they inhabit. Could one have a more appropriate kind of child-portrait?

NURA paints children—her own children—in quite another way.

This well-known Parisienne is seen in an exhibition of fifty paintings of children at the Grace Nicholson Galleries this month, a showing as delightful as it is original. At first glance you say: "Gracious Powers, what have we?" Our advice is, plant yourself firmly before the little milkmaid with the green cow and let the years slowly trickle off. After that you begin to catch on.

Now, round you go—the parade of childhood! Remember how you used to feel on rainy days when all the toys and games were exhausted? Nura is clever enough to make you feel that without showing one drop of rain.

She has simply painted her own children—giving parties, gazing fixedly in toyshop windows with a quarter to spend, discussing important matters with child seriousness—and she has exaggerated in characteristic modern way, using good design and unusual color, making this a record of childhood such as we cannot recall since the good Kate Greenaway.

Now don't forget—if you are at first taken aback, gaze fixedly at the green cow. When that has established the proper liason make the round. And, oh, yes, do take the children!

MILDRED RACKLEY, we are told, is 23, and grew up in New Mexico without art schooling. Now, at the Grace Nicholson Galleries, we see her striking series of heads done in black and white—heads of Indians and old-timers drawn with remarkable power and character, and feeling for the structure and design of a head. Exceptional are the lithographs of Jose Jesus and Geronimo. No wonder they made an immediate hit when shown at the Anderson Galleries, New York.

Another Parisienne, Nina Alexandrowicz, a Polish woman, made dolls in Paris during the war, which became a collector's fad. Now the Grace Nicholson Galleries have a group of her paintings of dogs and cats, done with the dashing invention of her race. In her flower pieces she touches those unusual harmonies of color, fragile, yet lively, which the modern movement, with its fertile experimentation, has opened to our view. Her animals are real people, too.

By a young Mexican who signs himself Jorge M. are a series of lively and very clearly designed pictures of Mexican life, done with the muralist's eye for pattern. The markets, the outdoor restaurants, the fair, are all presented in strong popular colors, and with a pictorial quality which, while purely Mexican, recalls the direct popular artistry of the Japanese print.

By J. H. Sharp is a good group of typical Indian pictures, most of them executed some years ago. They show the Indian of New Mexico inside his adobe dwelling or among the aspens along the stream. The Pomo Indians of California are portrayed in a group of paintings by Grace Hudson.

A REAL TREATISE ON PRINTING ETCHINGS

THE PRINTING OF ETCHINGS, by David Strang, Dodd Mead & Co., $4.

Here is a book that should go at once into the library of every etcher unless he is quite certain that no one can pull a better proof than he can. It is the first exhaustive treatise on that most exacting and exasperating operation in the etcher's art—the production from the plate of an edition of proofs which shall best bring out the possibilities of the plate.

Drawing on the plate is a matter of art and the work with acid cannot be reduced to cold science. It must be guided largely by feeling. Feeling, too, must discover the best style of print to deliver the message of the plate—but feeling here is quite helpless without exact method.

Strang—son of William Strang, famous etcher—is a master of printing method. He has experimented quietly and thoroughly with paper, inks, presses, blankets, methods of wiping, etc., and, what is more important, has noted each experiment so that he can repeat a desired effect by knowing just what caused it. So he offers over 200 beautifully printed pages, including an invaluable series of case studies illustrating the printing of almost all conceivable types of plates. In his methodical English way he proves that there is no accident about good or bad effects and shows how to track them to their sources and repeat or avoid them.

A few terms might well have been translated into American language. For "printing muslin" we take it he means tarleton. For the information of etchers the "swanskin" and "fronting" blankets best suited for eching printing are manufactured in England by Kimber and Sons. Others may make them but these we know to be good.

News of the Art World

Opening Tomorrow

"California Art in Retrospect" is the title of an exhibition which opens tomorrow at the Biltmore Salon in conjunction with the annual exhibition by the "Painters of the West," an organization of living artists. The retrospective show intrigues the imagination. Just what lies back of today's painting in California? A few among us have seen the thread unfold. Most of us have little idea. An exhibition which portrays this development is a valuable and educational departure.

Arthur B. Davies

Open to art ideas of the moderns, steeped in the art of past centuries, Arthur B. Davies was nevertheless an original and romantic American painter. A fine group of his oil paintings was seen a few months ago at the Dalzell Hatfield Galleries. Now an exhibition of his water colors together with a full group of etchings from all his available plates, some of them in color, opens tomorrow at the same place.

Dutch Painters

Holland, in the seventeenth century, produced a group of landscape and genre painters matched in no other land. They painted with charm and humor the simple or elegant life of the day and studied trees and sky as no others before them and few after. An exhibition of Dutch landscape and genre painting, most of it from the fine period, is now at the Beskow Galleries.

Well in Hollywood

The Adolph Weil Galleries, formerly located at 2507 West Seventh street, are now associated with the Hollywood Art Gallery in Barker Brothers' Hollywood store, where an exhibition of paintings by European artists is now on view.

To Show Chagall

On the 15th inst. the Stendahl Galleries will open an exhibition of paintings by Marc Chagall, noted Russian modernist of the Paris group. This is to be the first of a series of exhibitions of French modernists and following it will be showings of Chirico, Raoul Dufy, Georges Roualt and others equally well known. At the same time the exhibitions of American artists' works will not be interrupted.

May Company Exhibit

The art department of the May Company is showing twenty-seven canvases by Chester A. Connell, including landscapes, portraits, marines and some pictures of the California missions.

Valentiner to be in North

Dr. William L. Valentiner, director of the Detroit Museum of Fine Arts and one of the world's leading authorities on certain schools of painting, will lecture on "Raphael" at the Palace of the Legion of Honor, San Francisco, January 6, according to that museum's bulletin.

"GRANDMA"

From the wood sculpture by Emil Janel.

LOCAL ART SEEN IN SEASONAL SALE

About 500 paintings, many pieces of sculpture and a number of prints invite the public's attention in the first annual exhibit and sale presented by the Artists' Council of Los Angeles and sponsored by the Civic Bureau of Music and Art. A well-lighted gallery at 837 South Flower street is the place and the showing is open every day until the 24th inst. Prices of works run from $5 to $100, every piece is plainly priced and the undertaking is nonprofit.

The Council has assembled a jolly showing. Here is something to fit almost any taste. Landscapes, marines, figure pieces, a whole wall of charming flower canvases, trees, mountains, romantic castles, Indians, depictions of California or Europe, and sculptured figures in many sizes and materials, abound. Naturally, at such low figures, not all can be christened fine works of art, but there is a surprisingly high proportion of those spirited, direct, small works that do not always appeal to the art dealer, yet would prove admirable on so many of our empty walls.

The showing offers everybody a chance to pick a work by a local artist, either for himself or as a gift, at a figure well within the reach of all but the starving. It offers, too, a chance to encourage our art production. Among the exhibitors are many noted artists.

Assistance has been rendered the artists by the Bank of America, Vogue Lighting Company, Warner & Hill, rug and furniture dealers; Duncan Vail Company, Foster & Kleiser and the Civic Bureau of Music and Art.

SCULPTOR FROM THE W

Logging Norseman From Northwest Carves Wood With Native Genius

Every so often a "natural" appears in the arts. high, low, Jack and every other sort of brow applaud disarmed—as it should be by real talent.

Emil Janel is a "natural." Being a Norwegian he is a wood carver. Loving wood he continued his career as a logger when he came to America a few years ago. Janel takes a poplar block about 6 by 10 inches and without sketches carves swiftly and deftly from it a figure, so filled with life and character, and withal so sculptural, that everyone is fascinated.

A patron in San Francisco saw his work and grub-staked him for the last year and a half. During that time he has turned out a prodigious amount of work, thirty-eight pieces of which are receiving their first Los Angeles showing this month at the Stendahl Galleries.

In the July issue of California Arts and Architecture Harry W. Wyckoff wrote an article about Janel, from which we quote here in part:

PUCKISH HUMOR

". . . He calls his figures 'wood sculptures' and the term is appropriate in every way. They are full-figure portraits of men, such men as his imagination has caught up out of the stream of life; by polite standards, human riff-raff such as may be found dozing in the sun on park benches or haranguing hard-working people with threats of hell-fire in far-off country pulpits; men from whose bodies and faces the eternal interplay between passion and necessity has hacked and worn all that is superficial and ephemeral and left only man, eloquent and naked.

"The result is not often pretty. And yet it is saved from the tragic by a puckish and even grotesque humor that pervades all of Janel's work, whether his subject depicts a group of loggers gathered around a poker game, where one of the lookers-on, with a knowledge of at least two of the hands, is trying to communicate that knowledge to one of the players, or whether it shows a red-nosed itinerant evangelist, exhorting his audience to the virtue of abstemiousness while a playful breeze tugs gently at his coat-tails. It is a humor resulting not from distortion of posture or expression but from Janel's way of seeing life.

"None of his figures are posed in the ordinary acceptance of the word. They are taken 'in transit' so to speak, intent upon the business of living their various lives, unaware of the observer's eyes. Janel possesses a Gorgon's head of his own which, instead of turning living men into stone, turns them into wood. A Chinaman grins. Another is craftily rubbing his hands together. A newsboy is transfixed in the very act of darting after a prospective buyer. In all he displays a knowledge of anatomy that might well inspire the envy of a surgeon, and his treatment of hands alone (forever the despair of artists) would be sufficient to command our attention. How often one sees hands among a group of pieces otherwise admir-

The table was adorned with three large centerpieces of American beauty roses and green fern, interspersed with tall lighted tapers. Varicolored nut cups at each plate completed the decorations.

Bidden were Miss Ella May MacLennon, Mmes. R. L. Lail, Jay Welton, Peter Matthews, Raymond Dilfur, Thomas Oughton, John Tapley, Reginald Caughey, George Powell and F. C. Plate.

One of the charming affairs recently at the club was the dinner-dance given by Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Alexander in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Collins of Chicago.

The guests, seated around a large U-shaped table profusely decorated with varicolored sweet peas, included Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Leonard, Mrs. Avis Burg, Dr. Fred H. Hart, Messrs. and Mmes. Joseph Zoellner, Jr., W. D. Gastick, R. I. Williams and Charles A. White.

Miss Ruth Morrison entertained a group of friends with a dinner-dance at the California Country Club recently. Rose corsages were presented to the feminine guests and boutonnieres to their escorts.

Included were Mr. and Mrs. Herndon Hughes, Misses Winifred Huntington, Marian Gaffney, Beatrice Ade, Pauline Hoffman, Sallie Meerson, Messrs. Everett Manfen, Barry Morgan, Bert Shapiro, Frank Anderson, Lou Shapiro and Allan Lutz.

Mrs. Alfred Black, Jr., and Mrs. W. L. Heinickle were joint hostesses at a bridge-luncheon given Tuesday. Tables were placed on the lawn of the clubhouse decorated with rose buds and fern. The guests were Mmes. R. L. Lail, F. R. Brownell, C. W. Jorgensen, J. O. Crawford, Ida Carnes, E. B. McKnight, J. J. De Jarnette and H. W. Atterbury.

Wedding Data

Busy with trips north and south and accepting prewedding courtesies, Miss Margaret Stella Oliver is busy now with wedding plans which are not yet fully completed, the ceremony to take place the 20th inst. Miss Oliver, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Allen Oliver of 1748 North Bronson avenue, is the fiancee of Ben M. Leister of San Francisco.

The foreign guests made a week-end trip to Mexico last week and Miss Oliver was one of the party.

Mrs. Ganst is to be a member of Miss Oliver's wedding entourage.

Returning Home

Mrs. William Morris Jones and her attractive daughter, Miss Ruth Jones, who with Miss Mildred Demarest, have been traveling in Europe for six months, sailed for home today on the Europea. After visits in New York and Boston they will arrive here several days before Christmas.

AUXILIARY GIVES AFFAIR

Preholiday Luncheon to Goodwill Industries Tendered Last Friday Afternoon

Outstanding in the series of preholiday affairs, with Ebell Clubhouse as the setting, was the luncheon Friday, sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary to Goodwill Industries.

The Pi Beta Phi Sorority girls received the guests, some 350 women representing social, cultural and civic Southern California.

Following the invocation by Rev. Wilsie Martin, Mrs. Allan spoke briefly on the pioneer days of the auxiliary and presented the first president of this organization, Mrs. Rufus B. Von KleinSmid, who very charmingly expressed her continued interest in the splendid work resulting from this first organization.

Mrs. Charles Crail, president of Ebell, was introduced and greeted the guests on behalf of Ebell Club, adding, "If Goodwill Industries does not receive the support from Southern California that it should, it is only because it is not sufficiently well known. It is indeed one of the most worthy and worthwhile institutions we have."

Mrs. A. Bennet Cooke, junior past president of Ebell, was introduced and voiced her own appreciation of Goodwill Industries, and the splendid work they are doing in Southern California.

Mr. Frederic H. Blair, superintendent of Goodwill Industries, and Mrs. Elaine Anderson Dudley executive secretary, each gave talks on the institution's constructive program.

MRS. WINTER WILL SPEAK BEFORE CLUB

Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, national past president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, now associate director of public relations in the Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of Hollywood, will speak on "Motion Pictures Create Standards" for the program on motion pictures given by the Women's Twentieth Century Club of Eagle Rock next Thursday at 11:45 a.m. Mrs. Will Lee Austin, district chairman of motion pictures, will be another guest of honor and speaker. Mrs. W. W. Green, past State president, C.F.W.C., will be the breakfast speaker.

SCOTTISH PIANIST'S WORK TO BE HEARD

"Tiefland," by Eugene D'Albert, Scottish pianist, will be the offering at the next meeting of the Opera Reading Club of Hollywood, according to Leon Rains, musical director and lecturer of the club.

Artists to Appear at Benefit Tea

Senorita Goni and Miss Pauline Becker are among the artists who will appear at the annual benefit for disabled veterans given by the Los Angeles District Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. A. Sidney Brown, chairman of the division of co-operation with war veterans in charge. The affair is to be a bridge-tea in the Sala de Oro of the Biltmore Friday, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

AMERICAN ART PRAISED

Lorado Taft in Friday Morning Club Lecture Finds Much Fineness in National Lookout

BY MYRA NYE

Lorado Taft, foremost American sculptor, has lectured on art 4000 times, according to his brother-in-law, Hamlin Garland, who imparted this information after Mr. Taft's lecture on "Beauty in American Life" before the Friday Morning Club. Most often the lectures were delivered before women's clubs. Some of them were given in France for the doughboys during the World War.

With that elusive attribute, called charm, Mr. Taft delighted his audience with his composed, informal and genial manner. His running fire of comment sparkled with wit. Without pedantry, he inspired his appreciative hearers with a greater love of all the fine arts which the speaker said is essential to maintain the idealism of any nation.

"No cat or dog is interested in its grandchildren. But we are different. We look out not only for their welfare but we desire to leave them beauty. America's greatest expression of art is its public school buildings which approach the expression in the great cathedrals of other lands. Any figure I may make in the future to express American art will have its arms widespread, one hand welcoming the future and the other grasping with gratitude the hand of the fine arts of the past.

"The chief occupation of life for many is its continuance. That is only making a living to exist but to make a life we must have beauty," continued Mr. Taft.

Mr. Taft said he had discovered in California much to his joy and somewhat to his surprise that Californians are what he termed addicted to beauty and conscious of both the addiction and the beauty.

"America in the last twenty years has erected more beautiful churches than all of Europe in the last 400 years. As for the development of architecture here in California and other beauty of art which I found coming down the coast from San Francisco to this climax of beauty, I find that the development of architecture is not an affectation but a real inheritance of love of beauty pre-eminently well expressed," said Mr. Taft.

"This gesture of simplicity is deplorable in modern art. It is merely baby talk and not simplicity at all. In your beautiful California you have not gone to the extreme neither of this baby talk nor the explosiveness or restlessness which is found in modern Paris art. Here in California I find a hint of eternity."

It was one of the shining days for the club. There were present many celebrities to hear the eminent sculptor, author and lecturer whose first great work was the decoration of the Hall of Agriculture at the World Fair in Chicago in 1893 when he directed the work of forty artists.

Among other distinguished artists present were: Dr. William A. Bryan, one of the luncheon speakers; Mrs. Randall Hutchinson, "Mother of Art" for the club as introduced by Mrs. John C. Urquhart, presiding; Roscoe Shraeder, Dean of the Otis Art Institute; Mrs. Fred V. Watson, president of the Woman's Club of Hollywood; Mrs. John Kyle, president of Long Beach Ebell; Mrs. Kathryn Leighton, artist, and Nellie M. Horne, chairman of exhibits for the club, and William Paxton, curator of art.

NOTES OF DISTRICT FEDERATION

Mrs. Elsbery Reynolds, chairman of the division of American citizenship, Los Angeles district, California Federation of Women's Clubs, will present W. Bellentine Henley, assistant co-ordination officer of the University of Southern California, at the conference tomorrow at 10:30 a.m., in district federation headquarters. Mr. Henley will speak on the problems which modern complexity has heaped on our governmental structure; and the individual's responsibility in facing the program of citizenship building.

A joint conference of the divisions of federation news and emblems will be conducted tomorrow from 8 to 10:30 a.m. with Mrs. R. L. Wood and Mrs. George Winsworth presiding. Mrs. W. W. Green, junior past president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, will be the principal speaker.

Continuing the work started early in the fall of finding work for the unemployed, the division of industrial and social problems will meet Thursday at 10 a.m. to report progress. This division, of which Izora Scott is chairman, is affiliated with President Hoover's emergency committee on employment.

Under the leadership of Mrs. V. R. Day, chairman, the next class in parliamentary law will meet Thursday at 10:30 a.m.

"Roses" will be the subject of a talk by Fred McNabb of the Ageler & Musser Seed Company at the next conference of the home gardens division Friday at 1 o'clock.

Mrs. John Thille, chairman, reports that plans are being completed for the float which is to represent this division in the New Year's parade in Pasadena.

Dangers and influences that overtake the child as it passes from infancy to early childhood; accidents in the home, streets and playgrounds and how to avoid them, will be thoroughly discussed by Dr. Alice Barker Ellsworth at the next conference of the child-welfare division on Friday, at 10 a.m.

For the past several years club women in Los Angeles district have provided each resident of the County Farm with a new $1 bill as well as other small gifts on Christmas morning. These aged people who possess no money of their own are made happy by having a little spending money to use as they see fit.

Mrs. Charles Holland, chairman of institutional relations and philanthropy, urges all club women to remember these elderly people again this year, as in the past. This division will hold its next conference at the County Farm Friday at 10:30 a.m.

Lieut.-Gov.-elect Frank F. Merriam will be a speaker and honor guest at the next conference of the American Home division Friday at 10 a.m. in Exposition Park Community House, 3990 Menlo avenue. Lieut.-Gov.-elect Merriam will talk on "Matters of Interest in the Home" and Paul Webb will speak on "White Collar Jobs for All." Choruses from the women's clubs of South Gate and Lynwood will sing.

CLUB NOTES

At the Philanthropy and Civics Club the California State Society, United States Daughters of 1812 conducted their monthly meeting last Tuesday with their president, Mrs. Frank Barnes Duncan, presiding.

Mrs. E. W. W. Hayward proved an interesting speaker with extracts from the diary of her son while at the front in the World War.

During the social hour, guests from out-of-town chapters were introduced, including daughters from San Diego and Joplin, Mo.

Mrs. Dwight Reay, president of the Ebell Juniors, announces the annual benefit supper-dance the night of the 9th inst., at the Ebell clubhouse. "A night in Old Mexico" indicates that fun, foolishness, frivolity and frijoles will reign supreme for the evening. Mrs. Gaines Hon, who is chairman of benefits, and her assistant, Miss Charlotte McGrath, have charge of the party, Mrs. Robert Redington the decorations, and Mrs. Catherine Teasdel the tickets.

Children's day at the Catholic Women's Club will be observed Saturday the 13th inst. at 2 p.m. at the clubhouse, 927 Menlo avenue. Children are invited. Donations of nonperishable food will be welcome. This is to be used in filling Christmas baskets for the poor.

"The Hurdy-Gurdy Marionettes" will be the entertainers and the hostesses will be the advanced juniors.

The music group of the Music and Art Foundation of Los Angeles presented a Spanish musicale at their studio, 642 South Berendo street, under the leadership of Mrs. Vera Goodman, recently.

The guest of honor was Mme. Cara Roma. Others appearing on the program were Hilda Goldman in a vocal solo, Ruth Yanover in piano selections, and Mary Farber in recitations. The choral group have been in practice for several months giving their first series of songs. They chose for their selections "Nightfall in Granada" and "La Golondrina." Mrs. Cerita Montes sang several Spanish selections accompanying herself on the guitar.

Tomorrow the literary group of the foundation meets at the home of Mrs. Max Stern, 157 North Catalina street, under the leadership of Mrs. James Madison. The program consists of book reviews, current magazines and events, and cinema activities.

Besides the many musical and art functions among themselves, the members of the foundation provide for the musical education of more than 200 young people with the assistance of some of the best music and dramatic teachers who co-operate by giving their services gratis or at a very nominal sum which is paid for by the foundation and given without charge to talented and conscientious children, who, because of limited means, would not otherwise be able to procure such instruction.

Chi Lambda Rho Sorority of Cumnock Schools last week became a chapter in the national sorority of Sigma Iota Chi during a special session at Cumnock Schools. Mrs. Ethlyn W. Hopkins of Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and national president of Sigma Iota Chi, conducted the ceremonies of the affiliation. Maryanna Cooper is president of the local group, and Elizabeth Cowell, vice-president. A number of social functions are planned for the immediate future in celebration of the sorority's affiliation with the national body.

The regular meeting of the Los Angeles Kindergarten Club was conducted Monday afternoon, November 17, at Crane Auditorium, Venice Boulevard, to hear Dr. Paul B. Popenoe, sociologist and founder of the Institute of Domestic Relations. His subject was "This Forward Movement in the Field of Social Programs."

This institute is the only one of its kind in the United States and is giving the results of much research in the line of social adjustments.

Master Sheldon Wix sang a group of new kindergarten songs. A linen shower was conducted for the benefit of the Teachers' Welfare Home in Inglewood, and tea was served by the social committee the latter part of the afternoon. Miss Ione Kirk is president of the organization.

MISS PARKS TO SPEAK

Miss Marian Parks will be the speaker at the next meeting of the California History and Landmarks Club, to be held at the C.F.W.C. district headquarters, 2103 South Hobart Boulevard, Thursday at 2 p.m.

Restful Sleep Tonight

HERE'S a simple way to get to sleep almost instantly you go to bed. A drugless way that brings restful nights and wide-awake days.

You wake up fresh, clear-eyed, buoyant—with energy to carry you through all the day. Because you've had 8 hours' natural sleep—sleep without drugs!

A new-type food-drink from Switzerland does this for you. You simply take it with warm milk at night, before you go to bed. You drop off to sleep almost immediately.

It is called Ovaltine. It contains no drugs, no sedatives. It is a concentrated, easily digested food—that works at once to quiet digestive unrest and to feed overstrained nerves.

Thus it brings sound, natural sleep that rests and invigorates. It is the recognized best "night cap" all over the world. 20,000 doctors advise Ovaltine. Your druggist or grocer has it, or mail coupon for test supply.

Johnson, baritone, will sing.

Following the program, the club members and guests will proceed to the Y.M.C.A. Hut on University avenue for an informal reception.

Miller-Hartwell

Beautiful in all its appointments was the wedding, Thanksgiving eve, of Miss Margaret Miller and Harry Gleaves Hartwell, Jr., in Arlington Christian Church, Rev. E. P. Ryland officiating. Effective decorations were of chrysanthemums and tall candelabra. The bride's gown was of white satin, with which she wore a long veil, and she carried a bouquet of calla buds. Miss Helen Jane Frederickson, maid of honor, was gowned in green and carried red roses. Other attendants, Mrs. D. Eugene Kennett, Miss Dorothy Everett, Miss Rowena Deats and Mrs. Louis N. Bell, wore dainty gowns in orchid shades and carried yellow roses. June Davina Miller, little sister of the bride, was the flower girl, charming in yellow georgette and carrying pink flowers. Louis N. Bell was best man, and the ushers were Clyde W. Green, Curtis G. Bird, Walter Hartwell and D. Eugene Kennett. Vocal solos preceding the ceremony were sung by Miss Carman Lillywhite.

Following the ceremony a buffet supper and reception were enjoyed in the Rainbow Aisle of the Mayfair Hotel. The bride was graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles, and affiliated with Sigma Alpha Kappa Sorority, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Donald Miller of 1116 Magnolia avenue. Mr. Hartwell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gleaves Hartwell. After a short trip they will be at home at 5735 South Wilton avenue, Los Angeles.

Returned to Southland

Friends of Mrs. Charlotte Cameron, O.B.E., of London, will be glad to know of her return to the Chapman Park Hotel after two years of travel abroad. Mrs. Cameron is now spending a few weeks at Arrowhead Hot Springs, where she has been visiting with Mrs. Adolph B. Spreckels and her son Adolph, Jr., but expects to return to Los Angeles shortly.

For Bride-Elect

The Chapman Park Hotel was chosen by Mrs. Chester A. Ashley of 1142 West Adams street for several delightful events recently given in honor of Miss Pearl Nancy Ware, bride-elect.

Miss Ware gave up her studies at Berkeley to become the bride of Russel Bosley Ashley, now in the government aeronautical service at Dayton, O. The wedding took place there Friday, the 5th inst.

Autumn colors of yellow and brown were used in the attractive color scheme for the first event, to which were bidden:

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Burrall, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hamilton, Dr. and Mrs. Edwin G. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Carlysle, Mr. M. T. Whitaker, Miss Patsy Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. W. Kinsey.

Those attending the other honorary dinner included Mr. and Mrs. R. Lewis Ashley, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Ashley, Mrs. Patty D. Bosley, Mr. Elmore Bosley, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Oakley, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Kuykendall and Mrs. Marian D. Inman.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashley will make their residence at Dayton, O.

Hull-Schulze

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hull, 167 South Highland avenue, was the scene of a lovely wedding recently when their daughter, Miss Virginia Hull, became the bride of Fay William Schulze, son of Mr.

DR. HARKINS DISCOVERER OF LOST CITY.

INDIANS GONE FROM CITY THOUSANDS OF YEARS

Peculiar Customs Apparent In Broken Bones of Skeletons Found in Graves Found Under Floors

BY AL PARMENTER

A city, home of several thousand persons, has stood unnoticed behind its curtain of time extending back some 2000 to 5000 years during which it has been buried from the view of immigrants and settlers during the civilization of the Southwest by sand-scattering winds of the desert surrounding Las Vegas. It lies in lowered ruins atop a low plateau three miles from St. Thomas and but a short drive from Las Vegas, Nev., a vestige of probably the earliest civilization on the North American continent and Mecca for perhaps the most interesting and historically significant motor-car trip that can be made. It is Lost City, the recently excavated remains of an early Indian pueblo.

"Interesting motor trip" is more than a repetition of the trite phrase that is always used to describe such a jaunt. Driving but one day from Los Angeles over the National Old Trails through San Bernardino, Victorville and Daggett then over the Arrowhead Trail, the route to Salt Lake, as far as Las Vegas and St. Thomas (367 miles from Los Angeles,) the motorist is in the geographic center of an early advanced civilization that offers close to home as much age and mystery of an unknown civilization as do the excavations of ancient civilizations in Egypt.

DIET OF CORN

Driving to the very edge of the newly discovered lost city it is but a few steps from the door of the car until the visitors' feet are treading on virtual millions of chips of stone scattered by arrow makers of this ancient people, on broken pieces of pottery, on small corn cobs, quite apparently a chief item of diet, for they are uncovered everywhere in the excavations.

But the most conspicuous evidence of the lost people is the remains of Winter Sports in Yosemite Due Saturday

FRESNO, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Plans for the first annual San Joaquin-Sierra Winter Sports Carnival to be held this year in Yosemite National Park, the 13th and 14th inst., were shown to be well advanced at a meeting of the executive committee at Hotel Californian yesterday.

Louis Lundborg, chairman of the competitions committee, reported that among the clubs and organizations of the valley, the Exchange Club and Lions Club of Fresno and the Rotary Club of Dinuba had made definite arrangements to compete in winter sports events and that others were formulating their plans, which would no doubt be announced at the next committee meeting. Many individual entries have also been made at this early hour.

NORMAL YEAR IN RUN FOR AUTOS

Output for Twelve Months to Be 4,500,000

Number to Be Lowest of Present Season

Suspension of New Lines Busies Factories

By P. W. WILLIAMS

DETROIT, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Shut-down or output continues low the automobile industry enters the last month of the year. It is now probable that December will establish a new low production and demand, because of the fact that most of the plants are contemplating or in fact have decided on a shut-down period for inventory adjustments," and to provide for rearrangement of manufacturing facilities prior to entering the new model production. No real improvement is in demand for automobiles can be looked for, or, in fact, is expected during the immediate future, with the first sign of any real trend anticipated about the time of the New York show in January.

It is decided that a volume of approximately 4,500,000 units will be necessary to satisfy the demand in 1931, which means a normal output. The industry is marshaling its dealers throughout the country for a decisive effort, starting in January show period, to break the depression which gripped the country during the last year or more. Such a trend would mean an increase of 1,000,000 cars and trucks over the 3,500,000 total, and a feeling exists among leading producers that there is a market somewhere near that figure, if they expect, they must somewhat by an upward business. Manufacturers are not restricting their visions to the next twelve months, but look ahead for five years, during which such high figures as 6,000,000 cars that will be produced and marketed each year, including the

QUAIL GUN LUCK VARIES

Duck Hunting Shows Best Returns of Present Season; Izaak Waltons Schedule Meet Next Sunday

The first week of the quail season, which opened Monday throughout the State, proved a success to many hunters and just another week to others. Weather conditions for the hunting was ideal in Southern California, and the old stamping grounds for quail hunters produced limit bags as usual.

Billy Wilshire, local sportsman, who hasn't missed an open day quail shoot in twenty-five years, bagged his limit in a couple of hours' time near Palmdale. He said the game was plentiful around that location but mighty fast and that to bag his fifteen birds, he used up nearly three boxes of ammunition.

Many reports reached Pete Peterson at the B. H. Dyas Company stores, telling of excellent hunting, the principle locations being in the Palo Verde Valley, Mint and San Francisquito canyons, up the Santa Clara River to Soledad Canyon.

Reports that came in from the duck-hunting locations indicated that the last two weeks proved the best hunting since the season opened on October 1. Ed Finney at Calipatria sent word that excellent shooting has been had and that there is every reason for the shooting to continue good until the end of the season. He was sold out yesterday and is again sold out for today.

Good goose hunting and fair duck shooting is the report from John Cavier at Willows in Northern California. C. Geyer at Arbuckle in the same locality reported that both ducks and geese are plentiful there.

Hunters who like to get out for rabbits once in awhile are advised that the open season on brush and cottontail rabbits is now on in California with the exception of District No. 4 3-4, which takes in San Diego and Imperial counties.

The San Fernando Valley Gun Club will hold a turkey shoot every Sunday during this month. The competition will be at clay targets.

JUDGE WARNS OF RAIN

Traffic Arbiter Voices Opinions as to Precautions Needed for Operation of Car in Wet Weather

BY JUDGE DUDLEY S. VALENTINE

Municipal Judge Presiding Over Traffic Court and Superior Court Judge-elect

We have had two rains already and perhaps it might be well that some thought be given as to the manner and method of operating cars during the rainy season. Usually the first heavy rain we get makes the people very cautious and as a result everyone drives carefully and very few people are killed or injured at that time. For instance, in 1929 the first rain happened on a Sunday and everyone was careful because the streets were slippery and vision obscured and as a result, that was almost the only Sunday in the entire year of 1929 that went by without anyone being killed, so you see it can be done by the exercise of caution on the part of the motoring public.

Now, with the rain coming, it seems to me to be extremely essential that you check the tires that are on your car to see if they have sufficient tread to prevent skidding in wet weather. I am not advocating the sale of new tires or anything of that kind, but where the tread is worn on a tire, it will not hold the road and you are very likely to skid every time that you apply the brakes on a wet street. It is hard enough to keep a car from skidding with new tires and having a good tread upon them. If you are planning on going to the mountains where there is snow or sleet or even when driving on a dirt road, it is advisable that you should equip your car with at least one pair of skid chains on the rear wheels, not only for the protection and safety

OLYMPIC BOULEVARD PARTLY OPEN

Over four miles of seven-inch pressed concrete street seventy-four feet wide will be added to the city's boulevards when the Olympic Boulevard gap between Robertson and Rimpau is completed, rapid progress on which is being made at the present time.

Up to last night the two miles of storm drain were half finished, the mile of sanitary sewer was three-fourths complete and the heavy cut and fill near La Brea over half-ready for the pavement. The grade on the rest is almost ready, and most of the public-utility connections are installed.

Whereas this highway will eventually lead to the ocean, carrying Tenth-street traffic westward, and serve as a great east-and-west artery between Pico and Wilshire, it now begins, starting on the western end, at the Westwood golf course. It starts as dead-end street, 100 feet wide and with ornamental lights, and with seventy-four feet of compressed concrete between curbs. However, this street at present is little known and little used in spite of the fact that it continues from the golf course to Robertson Boulevard as a full 100-foot highway. Here it ends as a pavement, but continues on as a 100-foot street with some pavement in places until it intersects San Vicente and the Pacific Electric tracks in Carthay Center.

Over this part the contractors are laying some sewer, but will have the minimum of grading. At the Pacific Electric crossing, however, quite a lot of work will be necessary to make a grade crossing. This is under way. From San Vicente to Hauser the street continues at the full width, but with little pavement. From Hauser eastward to La Brea it is fully paved with compressed concrete and was formerly known as Country Club Boulevard. Just a short ways from La Brea a fill is now being made and a cut, and the street had to be widened to the full width.

The fill is being done in a manner that will permit immediate grading following the last load of dirt that is dumped on to the grade. All the dirt is being cleaned of any form of rubbish or foreign material and then spread over the grade in eight-inch "takes" and rolled in with a twelve-ton gasoline roller This part of the job is being handled by Marrter & Bock, subcontractors.

Nearer the downtown district this boulevard feeds into both Tenth and Eleventh streets, and will provide immediate and rapid access to the Wilshire district from the south metropolitan district.

George H. Oswald is handling the contract, which was let in September for $458,137.71, and is scheduled to be finished about March 1.

DECEMBER JINX FOR JAYWALKER

Most Pedestrians Suffer Mishaps During Period Before Christmas

More jaywalkers are killed during December than in any other month of the year, according to the safety conference of the California State Chamber of Commerce.

During the first twenty-five days of December, statistics show that more than 100 citizens of California will be killed as a result of traffic accidents, and of this number thirty-five will be pedestrians. This high fatality percentage during December is attributed by the safety conference to the crowded streets during the Christmas season, the inattention of pedestrians at intersections, and carelessness in crossing streets in rainy weather, when umbrellas increase the hazard.

An average month's statistics, relative to accidents to pedestrians in California, compiled by the State Motor Vehicle Department, are as follows:

Pedestrian—	Total	Fatal
Waiting for or getting on or off street car	32	4
Getting on or off other vehicle	6	..
Crossing intersection with signal	10	..
Crossing intersection against signal	31	2
Crossing intersection diagonally	4	..
Crossing intersection no signal	170	4
Standing in safety zone	2	..
In street not at intersection	152	16
Children playing in street	43	..
At work on car or in roadway	14	4
Riding or hitching on vehicle	2	..
Not on roadway	7	..
Coming from behind parked car	75	4
Walking on rural highway	12	9
Not stated	21	9
Total	609	52

The safety conference of the State Chamber of Commerce is asking the co-operation of all pedestrains in reducing the holiday death toll, it is stated.

First Section of Road Ready

The first section of the Arroyo Seco-Mt. Wilson State Highway is now completed to a point 3.5 miles beyond the intersection of Michigan and Haskell avenues, La Canada. It is paved for one mile, oiled for two-tenths of a mile, then excellent decomposed granite for the next 2.3 miles at which point the road is closed.

LOST CITY IN NEVADA LURES

Unearthed Remains of Indian Life Interesting

Shallow Graves, Arrow Scraps Reveal Evidence

Houses Very Small and Varying in Their Shapes

their houses that have been uncovered. They were apartment dwellers, the houses being built in nearly continuous chains about the highest elevation of the surrounding ground, probably so arranged for defense primarily.

The house remains are of flat pieces of rock, cemented by mud plaster to form the walls and extending in their present condition about a foot above the ground level. Enough remains to clearly show the size and shape of these houses and the layout of the city. Rooms were small, could in many cases no more than accommodate one sleeping Indian.

FOLDED SKELETONS

Skeletons are numerous, many being found in shallow graves beneath the earth flood of the rooms in which the deceased probably lived. Burial was peculiar. Besides being shallow, the grave was small in every other direction, necessitating the placing of the body in a very cramped attitude—legs folded and drawn up about the body, and with the lower joints broken midway between the ankle and knee, probably to permit the use of a smaller grave. It would have been slow and difficult work digging a grave in the hard earth and rock with the crude implements these unknown Indians had available.

Some of these skeletons are exhibited now, lying as found in the excavated grave, the bones retaining the shape in which the body was placed in the grave and revealing the manner in which some of the bones were broken for burial. They are protected by wooden box covers with hinged cover for the convenience of visitors in examining the finds. Pottery and implements were buried with the dead.

AS 2000 YEARS AGO

At the fore edge of the city has been reconstructed a group of houses after the style of the remains in the village, making plain how the structures must have appeared. Some are square, some oblong and others circular.

No one lives there now. The Indians have been gone for days beyond record or evidence of definite time of departure. The reason for abandonment of the city, the destination of the tribe or, in fact, identification of the tribe has been impossible.

Nearby are picture writings on the rocks. These have not been deciphered and their meanings can never be more than approximated, although some studies have resulted in conjectures as to their meanings that may lead to their solution, and that probably place them as the work of ancient tribes.

This Lost City is but a short distance from the site of Boulder Dam in Black Canyon, and from the Valley of Fire, another scenic and very much of a freak attraction of this district. Either of these spots furnishes an added day's attraction to the Lost City trip, which alone requires three days, leisurely ones, with a day for driving in each direction between the city and Los Angeles, and the third day set aside for visiting the ruins.

New Plymouth Models in Show

Plymouth Motors Corporation, a division of Chrysler Motors, will exhibit the present Plymouth models at the national automobile shows in New York and Chicago and will carry the same line over in 1931, according to a statement released through the local Plymouth dealers by the factory.

The only exception, it was said, will be that refinements and improvements may be added from time to time in keeping with the company's policy of adopting such improvements as soon as they have been proven practical.

Kennelly Back Among Motor Dealers Here

Spencer Kennelly, re-entering the local sales field where he was prominent for many years as a Chevrolet dealer, is again located in Los Angeles, having established a city Chevrolet dealership under his own name at 3764 Beverly Boulevard, just east of Vermont avenue. First establishing a dealership at Twelfth and Main streets here ten years ago, Kennelly later opened another in Long Beach, and one at Tenth and Western in Los Angeles. Later he sold his Los Angeles stores and devoted his entire time to his Long Beach interests.

SPENCER KENNELLY

R. M. Bradshaw, who has been with Kennelly for more than seven years, is associated with him now as equal partner and vice-president of the Beverly dealership. An outstanding salesman, Bradshaw one year ranked as the leading Chevrolet salesman in the United States, and several times figured among the leaders on the Pacific Coast.

The Beverly Boulevard establishment of Spencer Kennelly is unusually attractive. In the service department are found the very latest machinery and labor-saving devices recommended by the Chevrolet factory.

Replacements of Tires Due, Officials Say

With the addition of several new men to the pay roll of the Goodrich factory in Los Angeles during the past few weeks, the production of new tires has been materially increased, Goodrich officials report. They aver that 48 per cent of all the tires on automotive equipment today are worn through the treads and that of necessity there must be a great amount of replacement business during the coming year, whether new car sales reach normalcy again or not.

This information is based on a world survey which shows that in the first eight months of 1930 factory shipments of tires were 25 per cent less than in 1929 and that the 50,000,000 tires set as the output of the combined factories of the country fell down to 45,000,000 as the year draws to an end. The expected replacements that the tire people thought would follow when old cars were held over for use did not follow because, it is stated, the motorist fell into habits of not spending, which affected his purchase of new tires, as well as of new cars.

Production of motor cars this year, the survey states, will reach 3,500,000, as compared to 5,358,000 for 1929. In the world it is estimated there are 23,400,000 old cars in use and these will be unable to function unless there is an average replacement of one and one-half tires per car.

So the tire factories are preparing for a production of 46,000,000 tires this year and they think that motorists will have to buy them whether they run the "old bus" for another year or get a new car.

Tire Company Installing New Sales Station

The Tires Sales Company, Ltd., has opened a new sales and service station at 1500 Hope street, and are serving customers while equipping their place as an up-to-date plant for tires, brakes and batteries.

In the tire department they are stocking Kelly tires and equipping to retread. In batteries they will service and sell Exides and Kellys and in the brake testing they have installed the latest in electrically driven testers and will be prepared to test, reline and repair brakes and true drums.

The personnel in this company is headed by B. Wynns, Jr., president; A. Wynns, a brother, secretary; E. S. Edgecomb, vice-president; A. Thomas, treasurer. B. Wynns has been in the tire business in Los Angeles for twelve years and is well known in this line.

CONSTRUCTION ON CAHUENGA

Extensive construction on Cahuenga Boulevard in Hollywood between Santa Monica Boulevard and Highland avenue makes that route inadvisable for travel.

DETOUR TO BE PAVED

Preparations are now being made for paving the one-half-mile detour around the collapsed bridge over the Santa Maria River, but traffic will not be subject to delays.

Packard Shows Custom-Built Line of Cars

A new custom line of cars, built entirely in the new custom body division of the Packard Motor Car Company, has just been placed on display in the showrooms of Earle C. Anthony, Inc., Southern California distributors.

Almost a year has been spent by the factory in creating the designs which are featured in this chassis. They include all-weather town cars, landaulets, cabriolets and sedan limousines, and the most striking innovation is in the latter model, which has a glass partition separating the front seat from the rest of the car, but which can be completely turned out of sight when the owner wishes to drive the car.

JUDGE ISSUES RAIN WARNING

of your own life and the lives of those who are in your car, but the lives of the other people who are using the highway. It seems that when our first snow comes, that everyone wants to go to the mountains and many, many persons have gone up into the mountains without skid chains thinking that the ordinary tread on an automobile tire is sufficient and when they get there, find the road frozen over and covered with ice and snow and then will slip and skid. Many may turn over.

I also would like to suggest that brakes be checked and put in perfect condition. Of course, good brakes on a car are essential at all times. They make for safe driving in either summer or winter. Another thing which you should check before the rainy season sets in is the windshield wiper. At a cost of 15 or 25 cents you can have a new rubber put on the windshield wiper and can be assured of a clear vision even in the heaviest downpour. The glare from headlights during night driving on a wet windshield adds very materially to the dangers of driving during wet weather. Above all, practice caution at all times in driving your car upon wet streets or during the rainy season and I am sure that you will be happy, indeed, to know that you have gone through the winter season without having an accident or without killing or injuring anyone else.

The automobile has taken a place in our lives as nothing else has ever done. We use the automobile for business and for pleasure. Those who use the automobile purely from a business standpoint, realize and recognize that accidents and careless driving are costly and expensive, to say nothing of the pain and suffering that may be the result of an accident. Therefore, those big concerns that are using the automobile to a large extent in their business are at all times endeavoring to make the driver of their vehicles as careful as is humanly possible. Where we have men who are making their livelihood driving an automobile or a truck, it is up to those men to pass a very rigid examination and secure a chauffeur's license which will allow them to operate trucks and commercial vehicles upon our streets. In the event that he is arrested and convicted a number of times for violation of the traffic laws and rules, and gets the reputation of being a careless or reckless driver, that man's means of livelihood is taken away from him and he has to find something else to do.

Then, on the other hand, we have a great many people who use their cars solely for pleasure and it seems as though they do not care whether they are known and classed as reckless and careless drivers or not. Anyone over 14 years of age can secure an operator's license in the State of California. Of course, the parents of a minor from 14 to 21 must sign his application, but anyone over 21 years of age can secure a license himself without very much difficulty.

Many people will operate automobiles on the streets without any licenses whatsoever. It seems to me that is one of the things which is going to require the closest scrutiny on the part of the motor vehicle department and others who have to do with the issuing of operators' licenses to see that the people who drive automobiles are competent to drive cars. Also that if we are to accomplish a substantial reduction in the deaths and accidents by reason of the automobile, it is going to require those of us who drive our cars as pleasure vehicles to take it upon ourselves to be as careful and cautious in the manner in which we operate our automobiles and to drive them as though being a paid chauffeur making a livelihood by operating a motor vehicle.

This traffic problem is one which you yourself can take an active part in. You should preach and practice this safety doctrine at all times and I am sure that you will do everything that you can in order to make it possible to still further reduce the death and accident rate in our city and county and see that you "save a life," the greatest gift that God has.

PRIZES FOR SLOGANS TO BE AWARDED

Contest Participants to Receive From $10 to $100

Widespread response to the offer of cash awards by the California Committee on Public Safety for slogans to be used in connection with the 1931 series of monthly safety campaigns is reported from all parts of the State. Participants in the contest in Southern California are sending their slogans to the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, Los Angeles. GOVERNMENT PREPARES ALASKA FOR TOURISTS

Alaska, that once lured the sourdough with promises of gold, now is luring the summer visitor with promises of magnificent scenery and opportunities for keen enjoyment. Often, the sourdough was disappointed, but the scenery lover will find all promises fulfilled even beyond his expectations.

The National Park Service, the custodian of several of the most scenic areas in Alaska, is planning vigorously to push developments for the accommodation of visitors.

Mt. McKinley, in the national park of that name, is one of the most spectacular mountains in the world. It is the highest mountain on the North American continent, and in fact rises higher above its base than any mountain anywhere. The great peaks of the Andes and the Himalayas rise from bases already well up in altitude. McKinley, on the other hand, on its north and west sides, rears its 20,300 feet of height from a base only 2500 to 3000 feet high. It is the real answer to the question, "How high is up?"

ROADS BEING PUSHED

Roads are being pushed rapidly into the park area, under the competent supervision of the Alaska Road Commission, which co-operates fully with the National Park Service in this work. A great highway is planned from the park entrance, on the Alaska Railroad, to Mt. Eielson, formerly known as Copper Mountain. Already forty-three miles of this highway, eventually to be seventy miles in length, have been completed.

Work on the following five miles, along the side of a mountain, necessarily has been slow and difficult, but when completed this section will be one of the most scenic, affording the motorist an unexcelled view of Mt. McKinley and the great Muldrow glacier.

Perhaps the contrasts of Alaska delight almost as much as its scenery. Last year, with this great modern highway under construction, an airplane service was introduced as an experiment. It proved exceedingly popular and gave visitors an opportunity to get a close-up view of the mountains and their great glaciers that never could be obtained in any other way.

But while these modern means of travel care for the summer visitors, the park rangers in their winter patrols to protect the park animals from poachers travel on snowshoes and by dog team. Last year forty new individual summer pens for the dogs were constructed of wire netting, each dog being allowed a space ten by eighteen feet with his own sleeping kennel at the rear of his pen. It is necessary to keep these animals in separate quarters, as they become restless and quarrelsome during the summer when not used by the rangers.

MONUMENT NEAR JUNEAU

Sitka National Monument, another area under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service, is at the present time the easiest of access, located as it is near Juneau and on the main steamship line. This little area, a beautiful natural park, contains some of the finest existing totem poles of the Alaskan Indians.

Tlal Glacier Bay and Katmai National Monuments are exceedingly interesting areas, the first, as its name implies, containing great tidewater glaciers and the other a volcanic region. Both are of great scientific interest, but neither is yet accessible to visitors.

Highway Closed During Winter

Due to heavy snow on the summit between Colfax and Truckee, the State Highway Commission has closed United States Highway No. 40 until next spring, having placed gates across the road near Blue Canyon and near the Donner Lake summit. This condition will remain unchanged until the end of winter, unless unusually warm weather removes the snow, making the highway passable for through travel, according to information received by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

SAN JULIAN ROAD CLOSED

San Julian Road between Las Cruces and Lompoc is still closed by extensive construction and it is necessary for travel to use the slightly longer all-paved road via Buellton.

DETOUR BEING USED

Construction is in progress on Lincoln avenue on the Anaheim-Artesia route at the west edge of Anaheim. Travel, however, is being detoured over optional paved routes.

ADVERTISING MAN TAKES NEW POST

Earl S. Zeller

The Associated Oil Company has appointed Earl S. Zeller advertising manager for its southern division. He will assume his new duties in the Los Angeles office this week.

PAVING OPERATIONS END

Paving operations have been completed on La Cienega Boulevard between Washington and Venice boulevards, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

While this work is in progress, traffic is being detoured around the bridge. Considerable road work of a permanent nature is being done in that section.

DODGE MEN ON LENGTHY SALES TRIP

Party of Executives to Hold Meetings From Coast to Coast

A flying squadron of sales, advertising and service executives of the Dodge Brothers Corporation passed through here Wednesday morning on the Sunset Limited, bound for San Francisco to conduct a series of meetings that are scheduled from coast to coast.

Included in the group were J. O'Neil, vice-president in charge of manufacturing; A. Van Der Zee, general sales manager; W. M. Fenves, passenger car sales manager; P. N. Slim, director of advertising; W. R. Bamford, assistant to the director of service; Rex. Gholson, director of sales development, and E. Sering, authority on used cars for all of Dodge Brothers Corporation. Accompanying these executives were Les Anderson, A. M. Corrigan, Robert Wolfers and J. W. Barnes, of Advertisers, Inc., advertising counsel for Dodge Brothers.

Mr. Van Der Zee and Forest Pelton, the party at Los Angeles today. Thursday with George S. Dodge Brothers dealer. Then Mr. Pelton and a party of dealers from Southern California and reached San Francisco in time for the Friday-morning meeting in the north.

Mr. Van Der Zee said, "Because of our unbounded confidence in business comeback that is being waged throughout the country, because of the inherent optimism prevailing in the Dodge Brothers organization, we undertaking this extensive and intensive survey not only to discuss business with our dealers, but also to lay before them our very latest merchandising plans for 1931 that will greatly benefit the entire buying."

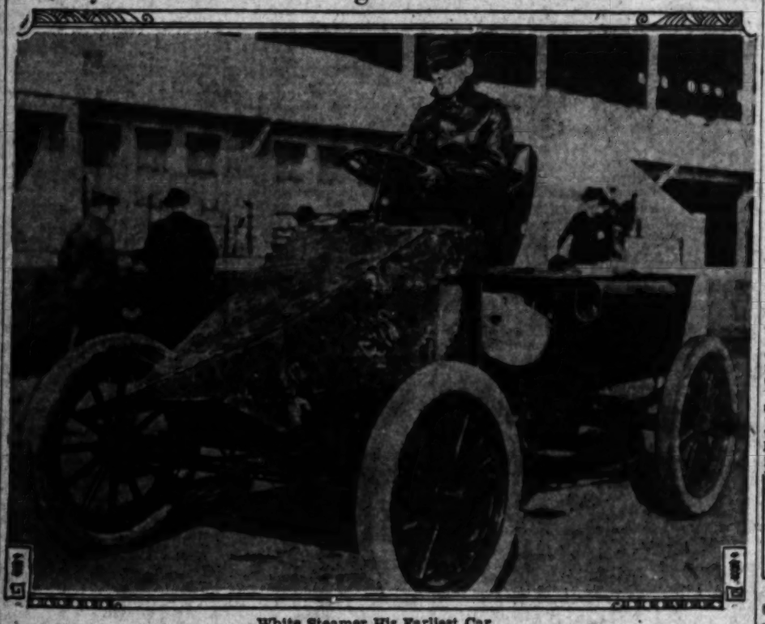
FIRST-CAR ALBUM OF CITY'S LEADERS

Twenty-seven Years Ago With Frank Garbutt



White Steamer His Earliest Car

TWENTY-SEVEN years ago, Frank Garbutt was a familiar figure on the streets of Los Angeles in a White steamer which he not only used for a pleasure car but with which he won some racing trophies in the first automobile competition in the State at Ingleside, near San Francisco. Today he buys gas for an eight-cylinder Buick.

Another White devotee was Maj. Hiram Ryus, who owned the first garage in Los Angeles and was prominent in the racing game in the early days.

models, and to discuss at first hand national and local sales problems with executives of the home offices. Dealers in general are planning to hold promotional meetings in January during the New York, Detroit and Chicago shows.

From an active standpoint, Chevrolet seems to be leading the field. This division of General Motors has set 1,000,000 as the number of units that will be necessary to satisfy Chevrolet buyers in 1931. Fifty meetings in as many zone centers have been listed for December which will be attended by approximately 20,000 Chevrolet distributors and dealers. This year Chevrolet dealers will have sold about 600,000 new and more than 1,000,000 used cars.

But not one of the other companies is idle. Every employee, every dealer and sales manager will be "on their toes" from the morning of January 1 until the chimes ring in the year 1932.

Manufacturers are agreed that there is a potential market in 1931 for at least 4,500,000 automobiles and trucks, and they already organized for an untiring search for that number of buyers.

NEW ANNOUNCEMENTS

The introduction of new models continues as the leading feature of the industry. Latest announcements came from the offices of the Lincoln and Hudson companies. Changes in the Hudson and Essex lines are anything but radical. There are fourteen new body types in the Hudson line, on 119 and 126-inch chassis. The Essex is available in six body types, all mounted on 113-inch chassis. Changes in all models—both Hudson and Essex, although of minor importance, are nevertheless numerous. While mechanical body changes in the Hudson do not appear radical to the eye, they do incorporate an array of improvements.

The new Lincoln line, which made its debut this week, includes eight standard types. The wheel base is 145 inches, and length has been added to afford greater roominess. The outstanding feature, however, permits silent gear shifting back and forth between second and high without disengaging the clutch.

The new eight-cylinder "V" type engine is rated at 120 horsepower, an increase of thirty over present engines. The weight of the car has been increased approximately 100 pounds.

Sales of Lincoln cars during the last ten days of November totaled 121, which was a sharp increase over the corresponding period of 1929.

Although not yet ready for public inspection, official disclosure has been made that the new Oakland and the Pontiac are expected to be given a public showing at the New York show.

THREE NEWCOMERS

Visitors to the January show in New York will find three additions to the list of exhibits—Mathis and Austin of bantam type, and the Duesenberg, mounted on a 154-inch chassis. They will look in vain, however, for the Cunningham, Elcar, Erskine, Kissel, Moon, Marquette, Roosevelt, Ruxton, Windsor, Mercedes-Benz and Volsin. The reason for this is that automobile makers are discontinuing the practice of supplementing their regular lines by the addition of models bearing other names, and believe that conservation, under present conditions, is an asset.

NEW MODEL DATE

A committee has been appointed, made up from the ranks of the best known executives in the automobile industry, to determine the sentiment of the manufacturers on the advantages and disadvantages of new models and for the uniform dates for the introduction of new models.

The subject is one of widespread interest throughout the entire country, especially by distributors and dealers. Many organizations already have expressed a desire for a uniform program, objection to the present system being based principally in difficulties in connection with the liquidation of new and used-car stocks, and public reaction against obsoletion or supersession of recently purchased cars.

All manufacturers will be asked for their view on the subject, and it is already evident that the question will meet strong indorsement and equally strong opposition.

The committee, headed by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, is composed of such leaders as Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company; Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor Car Company; C. W. Nash, president of Nash Motor Company; Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the board of Chrysler Corporation; A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation, and Roy R. Chapin, chairman of the board of the Hudson Motor Car Company.

GARAGES OF AUTO CLUB NOW HANDLE TELEGRAMS

No longer need motorists be disgruntled on reaching small towns after the telegraph office has closed and when a fast message must be sent, it is stated in an announcement from the Automobile Club of Southern California.

There are now eighty-six official garages of the club which have been appointed receiving agencies for the Western Union Telegraph Company located in places with either limited or no telegraph service, from which telegrams may be promptly dispatched by touring motorists at any time, day or night.

DELAYS OBVIATED

This new service for motorists was brought about through the cooperation of the motoring organization and the telegraph company, both of which had received many adverse comments from motorists because of the inability to dispatch telegrams from out-of-the-way places.

It frequently happens that motoring parties who expect to reach their destination at a certain hour are delayed by breakdowns, accidents, illness, poor road conditions, or other causes, and find themselves unable to advise persons expecting them of the delay. It is to obviate such situations that the official garages of the club throughout Southern California are now designated as Class 10 agencies for the telegraph company.

There will be no extra charge for this service. The messages will be handled as expeditiously as from a main office as the garages are under contract with the telegraph company to give prompt service.

It is the custom of many of the smaller telegraph offices in the less populous communities to close at 8 p.m. so that frequently motorists found themselves unable to make badly needed use of telegraphic facilities. Under the new arrangement, the garages under contract to handle messages will have signs telling of this service and be equipped with rate sheets, blanks, and other paraphernalia to meet the motorists' needs.

TO BE USED ELSEWHERE

It is stated further that a similar plan will be placed in effect in official garages of the California State Automobile Association so that in the future motorists touring anywhere in California will find themselves able to communicate directly and immediately with whomsoever they will.

Relief for isolated and delayed motorists in some countries in Europe has been met by the installation of pay telephone stations at intervals along the main highways. It is believed, however, that the plan of making leading garages in the State agencies for the receipt of telegrams will meet with favor among motorists in California, as it will permit the sending of messages immediately without regard to the party sought being within reach of telephone.

BIRDS TO BE FED CORN ON COB

States Will Provide Winter Fare

Prolonged Drought Hard on Wild Life

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (Exclusive) Corn on the cob will be one of the dishes served in the cafeterias for wild birds this winter, according to plans reported from many States to the American Game Protective Association. Winter feeding of wild birds is usually necessary in all States that have snow. It becomes doubly necessary this year because of natural foods destroyed by the prolonged drought or else retarded in growth so that many plants didn't "seed out," observers report.

Corn on the cob has been found a very practical way to feed wild birds. There are several methods of serving corn on the cob, but the two most practical are these, according to game officials—tying an ear of corn in undergrowth or impaling the ear on sticks or spikes.

Some State game departments prefer the spike method. Several large nails are driven through a length of board and ears of corn impaled on them. When the snow comes the board is covered but the ears protrude above it. The birds can easily feed direct from the ear.

Sportsmen and others going into the fields, woods and swamps are urged to carry ears of corn along and impale them on sticks or else tie them in the undergrowth. Or if this is inconvenient, a pocket filled with shelled corn, wheat and other grains can be scattered in areas where birds are known to be.

The Sedalia chapter of the Izaak Walton League has established fifteen one-half-acre permanent feeding stations in Pettis county, Missouri. The Missouri Game and Fish Department furnished the seed. The league and other sportsmen's organizations are planning to establish numbers of such stations all over the State.

These stations differ from the temporary feeding stations in that seeds are planted and the crop left standing for the winter feeding of birds. Hungarian, German millet and sorghum have been sown in various parts of the State. Other States indicate they will establish permanent feeding stations.

HOLIDAY SLOGAN IN USE

"Keep holidays happy—observe pedestrians' rights."

With this slogan as the keynote, a State-wide campaign is announced for this month by the California Committee on Public Safety in recognition of the crowded condition of the streets during the holiday shopping season and the increased need for careful driving in the business districts. The phrase will be given wide display throughout the State on street-car windows and other prominent places.

December is the month in which the streets are thronged by Christmas shoppers, many of them unaccustomed to finding their way safely through heavy vehicular traffic, the committee points out in a statement summing up the spirit of the month's campaign. It is particularly appropriate and necessary at this time, the statement continues, that the attention of motorists should be called to the necessity for the exercise of great care when driving in shopping districts and to show every consideration and courtesy to the pedestrian.

The uniform traffic ordinance adopted by a majority of cities in California gives the pedestrian the right of way over vehicles when crossing in marked crosswalks, and also at unmarked crossings when they signal for the right of way by holding up the hand.

VALLEY TO GET MANY NEW TREES

Arizona Ash and Other Varieties to Be Placed in Antelope Section

Touring in Antelope Valley will be made more pleasurable and scenic upon the growth of 4000 trees to be planted this fall and winter. That number has been authorized for immediate distribution by Spence D. Turner, Los Angeles county forester.

In this lot of trees will be 1700 Arizona ash, which have been planted in the valley sections with the best results. For the last two winters the forestry department has distributed trees to Antelope Valley residents for planting along the county right of way adjoining irrigated fields. All the trees have done well.

In the new lot to be given out are 860 oriental sycamores, another variety that flourishes in this section. There also will be a large lot of catalpa, locust and Italian poplar seedlings.

Forest Fires Expensive to Business Men

Forest fires mean a definite loss to hotels, resorts, service stations and others dependent upon tourist trade, in addition to the damage they do to the forest themselves, a recent study shows, says the United States Forest Service, Portland, Or.

Tourists apparently avoid forest fires as they would a plague; they go away and they hesitate to come back to the stricken area, forest officials state. As a result business often suffers when fires break out. In 1929, a bad fire season in the Pacific Northwest, it is known that the tourist trade dropped perceptibly. Awakening to this menace to tourist trade, the business interests in many regions are co-operating with Federal and State forestry officials to combat fires and cut down losses.

The study, made by State forest officers in a western community, showed a falling off of tourist business amounting to as much as 88 per cent during a period of forest fires in the region. It is apparent that this decline of business also hurts banks, building trades and eventually even real-estate values and municipal and county tax resources in a region where tourist business is an important factor.

Near the town where the study was made an outbreak of forest fires occurred in the height of the tourist season. One hotel had eighty-five guests the day before the fire. Six days later only ten were registered. The recovery in patronage was slow and a week after the last fire was out there were only fifty-eight guests.

PLANE ENGINE CAUSES DEBATE

Prospective Customers Being Considered

Safety Becomes Principal Motor Essential

Buyers Require Beauty as Well as Soundness

There can be no doubt that the air-cooled radial engine has swept into convincing dominance in the airplane field. However, when one assumes the likelihood of that dominance continuing permanently he must not mention the fact in the presence of many engineers. They take the element of conviction out of it in entirely too many instances.

On one point only does the individual in quest of information on the eventual airplane engine find agreement; namely, that it will be the most reliable design possible. All designers recognize the engine to be the basis of airplane safety as well as performance. Most of them together with plane manufacturers concur in the idea that engine reliability is the thing that really must be proved to the average man before he ever can be induced to leave the ground in a plane under his own pilotage and ownership. This, too, despite the fact that the average man does not know what he desires proved to him.

VIEWPOINTS NUMEROUS

One can find numerous points of view as to what is likely to be the eventually most reliable engine. A majority, naturally, believe it to be the currently dominant air-cooled radial engine. Still others trek along with the in-line inverted air-cooled engine, the vertical in-line air-cooled, the vertical water-cooled, the chemically cooled in-line, and a few with the ries that the eventual design has not yet been evolved.

The question of whether the engine shall burn oil or gasoline does not enter the discussion. Either kind of fuel can be used in any of the various designs.

While much of the argument over airplane engine design is beyond the interest if not the comprehension of the potential buyer of airplanes, some aspects of it are within his ken. On them in the aggregate he might even be able to give a better answer than the expert.

There is the matter of appearance, for instance. The final judge of whether a plane design is of pleasing appearance after all is the buyer who makes beauty a factor in his choice of a ship. Appearance figures to a considerable extent in the discussion.

Those who are inclined to give it greatest weight say that the air-cooled engine in its present form never would appeal to the private plane buyer because it gives him an impression like driving a car with the hood removed. The automobile, they say, has "brought up" the public on covered power plants and, in the words of one engineer, "cowl the air-cooled radial engine as you will, you can't put a hood over it."

BEAUTY JUDGMENT DEFERRED

On the other hand, however, the air-cooled engine advocate points out that the last word in cowling has not been spoken and until it is final judgment on the point of beauty will have to be deferred.

Anyone who ever has owned an automobile can understand many of the aspects of the engine debate relating to reliability. For instance, one of the greatest difficulties encountered by the designer of the radial engine is providing adequate, unfailing lubrication for the valve gear. While it is admitted that the problem has been met with relative success in various ways, two engineers with whom the writer talked declare that the inverted in-line air-cooled engine inherently eliminates any problem of valve gear lubrication or of valve cooling.

The reason lies in the fact that the valve gear is at the bottom where reaching it with lubricant is no problem at all.

Another similar point in the case with which it may be understood relates to the rigidity of construction as between the radial and in-line engines. The latter are built as a solid block while the cylinders of the former are not interconnected save at the base.

An interesting point made by some in support of the in-line air-cooled engine as against the radial design is that the cylinders of the former are inherently easier to cool uniformly. That is, it is easier to find a way of directing the air entirely around the cylinders when they are arranged in-line rather than radially. The backs of the radial engine cylinders, obviously, are not so easily cooled. They find ways of doing it, of course, but the argument centers over whether they are the simplest ways possible.

When the argument reaches the question of simplicity, and all agree that the average plane buyer must have a simple engine, the radial engine rather crowds the others off the boards. In the matter of maintenance and tools, skill and time required in it, this design is almost unanimously admitted to be superior.

At a recent sectional meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, the number of phases involved in the engine issue was clearly indicated.

For example, one enthusiast for the radial engine pointed out that it was necessary to use larger tail surfaces to provide adequate control of the airplane powered by an in-line engine. In answer to this an advocate of the latter type declared that the radial air-cooled engined ship had a tendency to spin "tighter" than one with a vertical motor.

Another point made was that the radial design permitted a better carburetor location and fuel feed system than the vertical arrangement of cylinders. This statement drew from still another observer the assertion that the inverted engine was better in this respect than either of the two designs mentioned.

That the private plane buyer will demand the utmost in visibility and that the design of the engine is a tremendous factor in visibility are two other aspects of the future power plant upon which there is general agreement. But it is not agreed just which design offers the greatest visibility.

TULARE GETS GAS MONEY

Tulare county will receive $99,276.73 as its share of road money from the State 3-cent gasoline-tax apportionment for the six months, ending September 30, according to recent announcement from Sacramento. A total in excess of $6,000,000 is to be apportioned for this semiannual period.

ROUTE BEING PAVED

The Bakersville-Glennville-Kernville route is now paved for the first 3.5 miles, then oiled for forty-three miles, with natural gravel and dirt the remainder of the distance to Kernville. Storm conditions govern the use of this route and inquiry should be made at Bakersfield.

BOULEVARD BEING PAVED

Olympic Boulevard is under construction for new paving between Rimpau and Mansfield and between Hauser and Robertson, and while open is rather rough, states the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

New Duesenberg Being Displayed

Two of the latest in Duesenberg cars were placed on display Wednesday in the new showrooms of the Duesenberg distributors at Wilshire Boulevard and Kingsley avenue.

The new building housing this line of fine automobiles is receiving its finishing touches and presents a corner display that is in every way in keeping with the merchandise to be displayed. The display shows a four-passenger Rollston convertible coupe in pearl gray and a seven-passenger Le Baron sedan in cedar brown.

PLANE USE OF GAS AND OIL MOUNTS

Federal Report Reveals Tremendous Consumption of Fuel

Airplanes engaged in both scheduled and miscellaneous flying operations consumed 12,887,532 gallons of gasoline and 537,212 gallons of oil during 68,669,928 miles of flying in the six months period January-June, 1930, according to an estimate made by the aeronautics branch of the Department of Commerce based upon reports from aircraft operators.

Scheduled air transport planes flew 16,902,728 miles and consumed 6,218,271 gallons of gasoline and 202,240 gallons of oil during this six months' period. A total of 6,689,261 gallons of gasoline and 334,963 gallons of oil were used in 51,967,200 miles of flying by airplanes used in miscellaneous operations such as experimental, exhibition, industrial, student instruction and pleasure flying, according to the estimate.

Although the mileage flown by scheduled operators was less than that flown in miscellaneous operations nearly as much gasoline was consumed due to the general use of larger aircraft with increased horsepower by scheduled operators, consequently increasing the consumption of fuel per mile flown.

BOULEVARD COMPLETION ANNOUNCED

Major Gateway Provided Between Hollywood and San Fernando Valley

Completion of the Laurel Canyon improvement project, announced yesterday, provides a new major gateway between Hollywood and San Fernando Valley, the only improved roadway connecting the screen city and the valley between Cahuenga Pass and South Sherman Way, according to N. F. Wilson, president of Hollywood Business Properties, Ltd.

With a 40-foot paved width, the undulating scenic boulevard has a maximum grade of 8 per cent with the exception of one strip of 1000 feet on the north slope, enabling automobiles to make a high-gear trip from Sunset Boulevard to the Ventura Boulevard intersection in eight minutes, Wilson states.

In the course of improvement, curves and steep grades have been removed wherever practical. For a distance 1000 feet south of Mulholland High Way, three curves were made into one. North of the highway three other curves were developed into one long one. Smaller curves were removed at other points, Wilson said.

FLAG CONTROL ON ROAD

Due to construction work on Mission Drive entering Riverside, the road is under flag control, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

WILL PARACHUTES COME?

Air Operators Reveal Reasons for Not Supplying "Protection" to Passengers on Flights

BY TERREL DE LAPP

Are air transportation lines considering equipping their planes with parachutes for passengers? Would such equipment increase passenger business or would it have a detrimental effect through the suggestion that there is danger and need for a means of midair escape? Would passengers use 'chutes even if ordered to "bail out" by the pilot?

These and other pertinent questions—usually avoided by those connected with air-passenger lines—formed the basis for frank discussion by flyers, nonflyers and prospective air passengers during formal opening of the Biltmore ticket office of American Airways, the largest transport system in the nation, which recently inaugurated mail-passenger service between here and Atlanta, Ga.

WOULD LIKE 'CHUTE

Superior Judge William Doran started things going when he declared that he is "one of the legion who would fly if they could go aloft protected by a parachute."

His remark brought similar assertions from other nonflying guests and answers from American Airways officials, including Ike Sewell, division traffic manager; J. B. Alexander, western manager; C. E. Fleming, superintendent air-mail service, and Edwin H. Sharpe, assistant to the president of the system.

Boiled down, the discussion brought out these points:

There are two classes of persons so far as the air lines are concerned—those who use the air for swift travel and those who are "air minded," but who have not been off the ground.

To the first class the air lines are offering every factor of safety they deem practical; to the second class they are pointing out the advantages of flight and demonstrating the safety margin being offered.

PROBLEM CONSIDERED

Air-line operators have considered the practicability of equipping their ships with parachutes of the type recently developed which can be carried on the sides of the cabin and attached to passengers in fifteen seconds, but it is doubtful if the need or demand ever will result in their installation.

The nonflyers pointed out that ocean-going boats are required to provide passengers with life belts, so why shouldn't skyliners offer the extra factor of safety which they believe is embodied in a parachute?

In the first place, the plane operators point out, there has not been an accident due to structural failure of aircraft flying within United States Department of Commerce rules since the Federal regulations were instituted in the latter part of 1927.

Fire hazard in modern air transports has been reduced to the point where it is practically negligible. As an extra precaution, however, all planes operating over licensed routes are equipped with a fire extinguishing system that operates through 200-pound air pressure nozzles—a system that in a few seconds smothers any engine on a plane with fire extinguishing compound.

Extinguishers in the cabin and control room also obviate danger of a midair blaze, but in case a pilot did not want to depend entirely on the fire extinguishing system while in the air he could side slip the plane to earth safely at an angle which would prevent the flames from spreading or harming passengers. This has been demonstrated time and again and does away with the only emergency in which passengers would have a chance to leap from a plane with a parachute.

The airmen substantiate this with the assertion that not a major disaster in air-line operation has been caused by a plane going to pieces in the air or by fire, and that weather is the only foe they have to fight.

Accidents from the latter cause have resulted in crashes which neither pilots nor passengers realized were coming—and in the instances when they did realize it for a moment before the impact they were at an altitude too low to jump.

THE REASONS WHY

If parachutes were provided for passengers the operators argue that it would tend to encourage pilots to get passengers through weather which now keeps them on the ground.

They also assert that where one man might request a parachute the sight of one would bring about the psychological suggestion that air travel is not safe or ships would not carry parachutes.

And to further their views they point out that a small minority of passengers would step into midair during an emergency even if given plenty of time and were at a high-enough altitude for the 'chute to open.

They summed up their stand by declaring that with good ships, good pilots and an efficient weather forecasting and reporting system—three elements which the transport lines have developed to the highest degree possible—they carry passengers thousands of miles every hour, every day swiftly and safely, in craft on which parachutes would serve only as decorations.

AIRPLANE OUTPUT LOW

Falling Off of Production Reaches Extremely Low Figure for Year Fails to Depress

Commercial aircraft production for 1930 will total approximately 2500 planes. Had anyone estimated such a low figure for production three years ago even the more conservative leaders of the industry would have scoffed. That, however, is the figure and that was the attitude.

Although the two seem irreconcilable they have been reconciled and the manufacturing branch of the industry is not nearly so downhearted as the that disappointing necessity of reconciling them would indicate.

For if the figure on 1930 production is not heartening, and the same may be said of the number of licensed planes in service which is around 6000, there are figures which are more favorable.

Although not at the rate anticipated by many, leaders in the industry point out that the training of pilots has had a steady growth for three years. Even the period of depression has seen the number of student pilots' permits increase. There now are 13,000 licensed pilots of all classes, more than twice as many as there are licensed planes. The rate of issuance of student pilot's permits has increased until it exceeds 21,000 yearly.

It is estimated that approximately 40,000 have some degree of familiarity with and a keen interest in actually piloting a plane. That means that the production of pilots has gone forward at a favorable rate. Eventually the production of planes must get in step with the rate at which pilots are made. The industry sees its potential market growing constantly.

The type of plane on which production has decreased most sharply has been that intended for the private buyer. It is the type of which production is destined to be most accelerated by the increasing number of pilots of all classes.

One gathers from leaders of the industry that during the interval of waiting for the potential market to be transmuted into an actual market by better economic conditions and improved sales methods, the ground work now is being laid for a steady rather than a mushroom growth. Cold figures reveal an interesting story of intensive preparation for a happier future in airplane production.

Two years ago the plane intended for the private buyer was virtually a standardized design although manufactured by many different companies. It was a two-place or three-place biplane with an engine of around 90 to 100 horsepower. In the matter of performance it had a top speed of around 95 to 100 miles an hour at best, a cruising speed of seventy-five miles, and landing speed of thirty-five to forty-five miles an hour.

One of these planes looked and flew about like any other in its price class.

Just as depression has stimulated a greater degree of engineering attention to automobiles, it has done likewise in connection with airplanes.

MONOPLANES GAIN

This year close to one-half of the small planes will be monoplanes whereas when production was heavier two years ago monoplanes constituted but a small part of this class of aircraft. That is one evidence of variety produced by deeper design interest. Truly remarkable feats have been accomplished in improving performances without going to higher-powered engines.

The small ship with the largest production this year, at least during the first nine months, provides an illustration of this and several other changes. It is a high-wing monoplane with a twenty-horsepower engine, has a high speed of eighty-five miles an hour and lands at twenty-five, according to the manufacturer's specifications. Low-wing monoplanes with fifty horsepower engines, designed especially for the sport market, are claimed to have speeds of more than 160 miles an hour.

Indicative of a new interest in this market and of engineering progress as well is the entrance of a well-known middle western manufacturer into the private-plane market after years of being concerned with the production of small, high-speed cabin planes. He has just recently announced a monoplane to sell for $1200 to $1500. It is a closed craft, incidentally, which makes the price the more interesting to those watching the change in policy.

Even the seating arrangement in such planes no longer is standardized. As against the tandem location of the seats in nearly all such craft at one time, more are of the opinion that the two-place plane should carry its passengers side by side as the roadster seat of an automobile.

It is not to be inferred that those who make biplanes have been slow to see the lull as a chance to improve their designs. There is variety of all kinds here today. At any airport, even the initiated can tell the difference between various makes of small biplanes. Appearance not only has been made distinctive but it has been improved.

BETTER PERFORMANCE

So has performance in this character of plane been constantly bettered.

It still is the largest selling individual type of aircraft. That is because it is being used largely for two types of service. It not only is the favorite type of training plane for use in civilian flying schools but also it is widely employed for joy-hopping or short sight-seeing service.

Among all classes of planes intended for the private buyer, production research rivals in scope that of design research. It aims at the development of small planes that may be offered at still lower prices, the $1500 mark being one that a large number are seeking. Necessarily this type of research produces results slowly, the manufacturer points out, but even without the influence of quantity production it can be marked by decidedly favorable results.

In taking stock of all the factors of the present situation, observers within the industry are conservative in their prophecies for 1931. An advance over 1930 is generally predicted on the basis of a clearly discernible larger potential market. Broadly, the attitude is that private flying cannot help but have a consistantly steady growth, if not a spectacular one, from now on.

Our former local high-school champ, Manuel Sobral, who vacated the title when he graduated last January, is now in El Paso attending Texas Mines College. He has disposed of the champ down there and wishes to start correspondence games with any of our leading local experts. He plans to visit Los Angeles next summer for a lot of hard chess.

The village of Strobeck, Germany, became enthused about chess over 300 years ago and today a common sight is troupes of boys and girls carrying chessboards, as chess is part of their public-school curriculum. The villagers are proud of their historic Schachturm (chess tower) and the leading hotel is called Gasthof Zum Schachspiel (at the sign of the chess game.) All of the 1400 inhabitants play. There is another such "Schachdorf" in the Bavarian Alps, a community of some 350 people. Nearly all of them play chess. Their local club is in charge of the village priest and the postmaster. Tourists that play are given a great welcome.

The writer has made arrangements to handle the latest chess books. If you are interested in any, write the chess editor.

The Metropolitan League held a meeting last Sunday at the Beverly Hills Club. A. V. Taylor of Pasadena presided. The name was changed to the Southern California Chess League. Their next schedule will start in February, the number of boards to be uniformly eight. The league will handle future negotiations for annual matches between San Francisco and Los Angeles. The next meeting will be Monday evening, the 29th inst.

The continued successes of I. Kashdan in Europe stamp the youthful New Yorker as real grandmaster material. His style is decided-ly hypermodern. He goes conservatively into the middle game and searches for some microscopical advantage which he nurses along while holding the draw in hand. This most of his wins are longer and tamer than the average; and not so interesting except to the close student of position play. But he can be brilliant, when necessary as in the following game from a recent minor tourney at Gyor, Hungary, which he won 3½-½, with H. Steiner of Hungary (a Los Angeles visitor last season) in second place, 3½-3½.

SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 7, 1930. PART V.

INVENTORY OF ENTIRE CITY REALTY LAUNCHED

SCOPE OF BUNKER HILL RAZING SURVEY GROWS

Question of Economic Expediency of Project Involves Every Section of Municipality

BY CHARLES C. COHAN

Intensive study is being made to determine the economic factors involved in the plan to raze Bunker Hill. It is the latest item in the new program of realty procedure now attracting the attention of the country's foremost real estate men, according to Frederick M. Babcock, who has just arrived in Los Angeles from Chicago to join the representatives of Frederick E. Babcock & Sons, now engaged in making this study with respect to the removal of Bunker Hill, as proposed by the Olmsted plan. Mr. Babcock bases his observation on new trends in city economics.

"Sites of comparable size or location is in prospect in any American city, he says. The engineering phase of it is in no wise a barrier to its consummation. It is authoritatively declared, and now the only point to be determined pertains to its economic expediency.

Henry A. Babcock of the Babcock organization of real estate consultants, economists and engineers here last summer, a notarie of this to begin this study

In seeking for the basic facts as to whether it is feasible from an economic standpoint to remove all or part of the hill, these engineers found it expedient to survey the slope of their survey.

"The majority of the parks," he pointed out, "are in mountainous areas and definite winter sports attracting these areas after the summer season should prepare adequate weather. Other people parks without making vision for health and

"Among the parks sport seasons are ... Griffith and Gen. Grant, Mt. Rubidoux in Riverside, Rocky Mountain in Colorado. these areas skiing and tobogganing and other sports may be enjoyed.

"The south rim of Canyon, while much more temperate than the parts mentioned, occasionally snow flurries, and sometimes necessary there also."

FACT AND COMMENT

There is a movement afoot within the ranks of the Los Angeles Realty Board membership to bring this organization into prominence during the coming year when new officers and directors will be at the helm, and to make the board one of the outstanding organizations of the city in leadership in public affairs.

This move should have the earnest support of members of the board who have not been particularly active during recent years. In many instances these men today are the leaders in the real-estate field, and have relinquished their realty board activity due to press of other business and to their belief that others should take on the work where they left off.

Presence of these realty leaders will do much to induce other brokers to attend the meetings. Their very presence will add weight to the luncheons and it might be a good move if each would make a New Year resolution to attend all of the Tuesday meetings and give to his fellow-brokers the benefit of his advice and counsel.

Golf Courses

Recent action of the Los Angeles Realty Board in opposing the acquisition by the county of a golf club has met with many favorable comments in realty circles. The board is to be commended in taking a definite stand in the matter.

There are at the present time a score or more golf clubs throughout the county which are open to the public at a small charge, at a cost as low as the proposed county-owned project could be operated. These clubs are paying taxes to the county on extensive properties. It is doubtful whether the county should openly compete with them and remove from the tax rolls a club, revenue from which is considerable, and operate it as a tax-free organization. The matter is one which should be given serious consideration before final action is taken.

City Planning Effects

There has been a great advance made in the general scheme of laying out subdivisions during recent years, and much of the credit for this is due to planning organizations of the country. Instead of there being a large amount of land devoted to streets, the length of blocks has been increased thereby reducing the cost of street maintenance and increasing

ORDINANCE PROVISIONS DISCUSSED

Hollywood Group Hears Residential Zoning Talk by George H. Coffin

Provisions of the new city zoning ordinance were discussed on Wednesday last by George H. Coffin, past-president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, and chairman of the board's zoning committee, at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Hollywood branch of the board.

Particular attention was given to the special provisions of the residential zones, formerly known as "A" zone, and the procedure by which property owners who held property in the old "B" zone could, by petition, have their property reclassified in one of the "R" zones, newly created under the present ordinance.

Next week's meeting will feature Carl Bush, secretary of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce and member of the City Planning Commission, who will tell of the progress being made in the development of the "Five Finger Plan," according to Bernard J. Wall, chairman of the Hollywood branch.

EXPERTS ON APPRAISALS WILL SPEAK

Chicago Authorities to Address Realty Board at Tuesday Meeting

Two internationally known authorities on appraising will address members of the Los Angeles Realty Board at their luncheon meeting Tuesday next, Fred M. Babcock and Henry A. Babcock of Chicago.

Fred M. Babcock, the author of "The Appraisal of Real Estate" regarded as one of the outstanding works on appraising, will explain "Why Land Values Change." Henry Babcock, who is chairman of the appraisal division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and chairman of the association's permanent committee of standards of appraisal practice, will talk on "The Need of Applying Modern Standards of Appraisal Practice."

DEPOSITORY TO BE BUILT IN GLENDALE

Seven-Story Structure to Be Started Next Week by Company

Bekins Van & Storage Company announces the breaking of ground for a seven-story depository in Glendale the 15th inst.

The building is to be erected at the corner of Brand Boulevard and Acacia. It will be of fireproof construction, and will provide modern storage facilities. The ground floor is to be leased as store space, and the remaining six stories are to be used exclusively by Bekins.

The present Bekins Glendale office, located at 140 North Brand Boulevard, has for the last two years been managed by Harry Hunt. At present, Bekins owns and operates furniture depositories in Los Angeles, Hollywood, Beverly Hills, Pasadena, Santa Barbara, Fresno, Sacramento, San Francisco, Berkeley and Oakland. The opening of the Glendale unit will bring the total of Bekins California depositories to sixteen.

HOUSING PERMITS IN LEAD

More Than Half Valuation of City's Construction Work Last Month for Family Accommodations

Construction work begun in Los Angeles during November, will, when completed, provide accommodations for 905 families, according to figures issued last week by J. J. Backus, superintendent of building. Apartment-house construction will provide for 464 families and an additional 441 will be provided for by residences.

Of the $4,784,444 representing the total valuation of construction work begun during the month more than half of $2,511,130 is for living quarters, the balance being divided among stores, industrial buildings and other classes of building.

A total of $1,211,350 was expended during the month on apartment-house construction permits and $1,299,886 on dwelling construction. Mercantile building construction provided for $358,618 in valuations.

Among the larger permits issued during the month were the following: Van De Kamp Holland Dutch Bakeries, Inc., 2930 Fletcher Drive, $300,000; Cherokee Apartments, 1861 Cherokee avenue, $275,000; City Jail, 401 Avenue Nineteen, $220,000; theater and stores for the Westwood Realty Company, 959 Broxton avenue, $150,000; apartment building for Peter Elvad, 535 South Gramercy Place, $150,000; apartment-house and garage for Mabel L. Smith, 1036 Menlo avenue, $125,000, and store and loft building for Westmoreland Building Company, 3055 Wilshire Boulevard, $120,000.

Lease of Sales Room, Sale of Acreage Cited

R. C. Mason & Co., Ltd., industrial realty brokers, announced a lease to the Clow Gasteam Heating Company at 625 South Western avenue. This location will be used by the Clow Company as a sales and display room for its products. E. V. Daily is the local manager. The general office and warehouse is located at 710 East Fourth Place.

A sale to the Desser Tire Company of one and one-half acres on Cottage street, south of Randolph, in Huntington Park is also reported. The Desser Tire Company is said to be the largest dealer in scrap rubber on the Pacific Coast. C. R. Wyman handled this transaction.

PERMITS IN HOLLYWOOD SHOW GAINS

Increase in Apartment House Building Boosts November Valuations

Hollywood building permits for November, 1930, totaled $1,343,250, a gain of $526,079 compared to November, 1929, as reported by Harry E. Jones, president of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

This gain is due to decided increase in apartment-house building in the Hollywood section, Jones states. Among permits granted are: E. M. Fleming, thirteen-story apartment at 8495 Delongpre, $350,000; Cherokee Properties, ten-story, seventy-nine-room apartment, $275,000; J. G. Largdon, apartment building on Sunset Boulevard in West Hollywood, $350,000; Louis B. Weber, four-story, ninety-room apartment, 5738 Carlton Way, $80,000; Southern California Telephone Company, brick garage building, 1407 North Gower, $75,000.

Store Building to Be Erected on Site Bought

The Federal Corporation has purchased through Jim Hool, agent for the company, the property at the southeast corner of Central and Forty-eighth for a consideration of $15,000.

The property is 46 by 140 and the corporation will improve it immediately with a one-story store building to cost $15,000, on plans being prepared by Architect William Meilema.

Frontage Sold Under Previous Lease's Terms

Among realty deals of the past week was the acquisition by the Robinson Fireproof Building Company, a subsidiary of the J. W. Robinson Company, of forty-five and one-half feet on the Grand-avenue side of the site occupied by the Robinson department store for a consideration of $137,500 or at about $3028 a front foot.

The price of the land is said by realty brokers to have been fixed as a result of a lease entered into by the Robinson Company in 1914 and the valuation is based upon the earning power of the lease made at that time. Property in the immediate vicinity of the parcel sold is being quoted at $7500 a front foot, brokers assert, which is regarded as about the value of Grand-avenue frontage in this vicinity.

Realty Course Will Close in Time for Exam

Real estate classes given by the extension division of the University of California at Los Angeles will be concluded in time for salesmen's and brokers' examinations the first part of January, Ivan Thorson, instructor, reported yesterday. The classes are conducted in room 814, Hillstreet Building, corner of Eighth and Hill streets, at 7 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday.

STREET WORK TO BE LET

Contract for Widening and Paving Washington From Figueroa to Alameda Due to Be Awarded

Contract for widening and paving Washington street between Figueroa and Alameda streets, and for installation of sanitary sewers, storm drains, sidewalks and curbs, is scheduled to be awarded next week by the Board of Public Works, which now is checking bids opened last week. The procedure is being rushed by the board with a view to having work started on the project as a Christmas present for property owners and to provide more employment locally, it was reported yesterday by Clarence Urban, president of the Washington Boulevard Association.

The Los Angeles Paving Company was the low bidder on the project, submitting a figure of $220,965 on the open specifications and $231,559 on the alternate specifications. It is understood that this concern will be given the contract, and that work will get under way before the first of the year, with completion scheduled in about 120 days.

The project provides for paving of Washington street with eight and ten-inch asphaltic concrete for a distance of about two miles, with a fifty-six-foot roadway. In addition, more than two miles of sanitary sewers will be laid, more than 1000 feet of storm drain installed, curbs, gutters and sidewalks laid and house connections for the sewers built, it was explained by Urban yesterday. The paving and other improvements will be carried on without interruption to traffic.

The Board of Public Works also reported yesterday to the association that construction of the Washington-street bridge over the Los Angeles River was 66 per cent complete on the 1st inst., the contractors being 1 per cent ahead of schedule. There are fifty men at work on the structure at present, and indications are that the bridge will be completed by February 1, next.

HOLIDAY TREE BUSINESS LARGE

Center of Industry Located in Los Angeles

Cutting, Shipping Controlled by Single Family

Orders Taken in January for Following Season

BY JAMES L. DAVIS
Real Estate Editor

Christmas-tree business is big business in Los Angeles.

Not only is this city one of the largest consumers of holiday trees among the communities of the world, but it is headquarters for the most successful and closely organized Christmas-tree industry on record.

Out of the approximately 1,200,000 trees which will be handled by Los Angeles producers this season, more than 1,000,000 will be cut and sold by a single family known to the trade as J. Hofert.

This season more than 600 cars of trees will be cut, shipped and sold by this firm alone. From Los Angeles the Hoferts will export to the Hawaiian Islands, China, the Philippines, Bermuda, South America and Panama, trees valued at approximately $50,000. Through some 2500 retail dealers in the city of Los Angeles they will place on the local market more than $750,000 worth of trees and will sell approximately $2,000,000 of trees throughout the State.

DEMAND GROWS APACE

Starting with two cars twenty-two years ago the Hoferts' business has increased each year until this season the demand made upon them for trees from the city alone will be in excess of seventy-five cars. Within ten years the local demand has increased by more than 60 per cent, and seventy-five carloads to be used here will total more than 250,000 trees of various sizes. As the Hoferts do about 90 per cent of the local wholesale business, the extent of local tree trade may be easily reckoned. Incidentally, the Hoferts will handle from their Los Angeles headquarters upward of 50 per cent of the entire nation's Christmas-tree wholesale trade.

With a history of more than fifty years in the Christmas-tree business this unusual Southern California family has established a nation-wide trade of such magnitude that it far outstrips the efforts of all competitors.

HISTORY OF BUSINESS

Fifty years ago John Hofert, president and founder of the company, was engaged in the transportation business in the city of St. Paul, Minn. One day just before Christmas holidays a friend suggested that they should go out into the woods and cut a few trees. The result was between 300 and 400 Christmas trees which sold so readily and proved so profitable that Hofert abandoned the transportation business soon afterward and since has devoted his entire time to Christmas trees.

Twenty-two years ago, sensing the greater opportunities for development of Christmas tree production and distribution which awaited on the Pacific Coast, Hofert moved to Los Angeles where his business has grown into an industry of the first magnitude.

As the business thrived Hofert was aided first by his wife and then by his children, until today sees the entire family of two sons, two daughters and two sons-in-law in

PRATT EXPLAINS EXCHANGE PLAN

Chicago Board of Trade to Be Model of Market

All Warranted Commodities Will Be Traded In

Resultant Advantages to City Pointed Out

Plans for the establishment in Los Angeles of an exchange to be known as the California Commodity Exchange, and modeled along the lines of the Chicago Board of Trade, were presented to members of the Los Angeles Realty Board at last week's meeting by Dr. Edward E. Pratt, executive vice-president of the exchange.

Dr. Pratt pointed out that the great increase in productivity and population of the eleven western States during the past ten years make it not only feasible but necessary, that a trading market be established to serve this territory, and that Los Angeles is the logical location for such a market.

The principal functions of the California Commodity Exchange, according to Dr. Pratt, will be to maintain and properly equip a meeting place of buyers and sellers; to operate both a spot and a future market; to establish the contracts on which all trading is based; to guarantee each and every transaction; to set up a system of clearing all transactions and to license warehouses to carry commodities.

Commodities to be traded in will include grain, petroleum, lumber, cotton, rubber, hogs, sugar, hay, potatoes and any commodity showing a sufficient volume of business.

"The opening of the Commodity Exchange will bring to Los Angeles merchants, dealers, buyers and sellers from all parts of the world interested in these various commodities. Inevitably cargoes of these same materials will dock in our harbor. Warehouse and terminal facilities will follow," Dr. Pratt said.

Other advantages which will accrue to the city of Los Angeles coincident with the opening of the exchange are:

"As a direct result scores of new firms and corporations will be established to avail themselves of the facilities of the exchange. The effect on bank clearings will be noticeable almost at once. Tonnage both by rail and water will be increased, and better warehousing facilities will be necessary right from the start."

Installation Conducted by Venice Board

VENICE, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Claude Gerard was installed this week as president of the Venice Realty Board, formal ceremonies being conducted by W. H. Fitchmiller, State realty official. Other officers inducted were A. Kuck, first vice-president; T. O. McCoye, second vice-president, and Judge Frank A. Willard, secretary-treasurer. This will make Willard's eighth term, and local realty operators expressed high approval of his aggressive work in the office. Carroll J. Daly, developer of Venice property, was elected chairman of the board of directors.

Three Houses to Be Erected

VAN NUYS, Dec. 6. (Exclusive)—Three dwellings are soon to be erected on a three-acre tract on Haskell avenue near Vanowen street by W. R. Hulsey of 14326 Erwin avenue. Hulsey recently bought the tract from Harry Clever through Rockwell Smith, local realty broker.

BUILDING-LOAN associations in Los Angeles and surrounding cities are declared to be taking advantage of the present low level of building material costs to remodel their headquarters along advanced modern lines. Artistic fronts are being installed and the interior walls are being decorated with murals executed by well-known painters, creating what is said to be a new and distinctive type of building-loan headquarters used as a model for building-loan offices all over the country.

Ventura Guarantee Building and Loan Association formally opened its rebuilt Spanish type home in Ventura last Thursday. Three large panels of murals by Norman Kennedy, artist, were used for interior decorations. The wall paintings take El Camino Real as their theme.

Guaranty Building and Loan Association's remodeled home in Beverly Hills, recently opened, also features a mural. The murals in the Spring street headquarters of the Guaranty are declared by experts to rank with the great wall paintings of the country.

United States Building and Loan Association, which is remodeling its Hollywood headquarters, will display a group of three colorful murals glorifying the motion-picture industry, executed by Millard W. Sheetz.

Western States Building and Loan Association will open its new Huntington Park home the 20th inst. The building at Pacific Boulevard and Zoe street is being extensively remodeled and a model building-loan headquarters created. Recently Western States remodeled the building at the southeast corner of Broadway at First street for its main office.

Murals also have been installed in the recently opened headquarters of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association in Glendale and in Pasadena and by the United States Building and Loan Association in San Diego.

REMODELED STRUCTURE WILL OPEN

Interior and Exterior of Apartment Building Renovated

After completely remodeling the interior and exterior of the Wickland Apartments, 427 South Hope street, which involved an expenditure of $65,000, the contractors announce that the apartments will be ready for occupancy next Wednesday.

Formerly known as the Rubiyat, the Wickland was named after the brother-owners, C. F. Wickland and R. M. Wickland, who will assume the management of the house, which has been completely furnished by Barker Brothers. Art tile, imported from Holland, has been used both inside and out, particularly in the baths and kitchens.

Remodeling of the four-story brick building required exactly four months, and afforded employment to forty men during that time.

Radio Factory Operations at New High Mark

In spite of the so-called economic depression certain spots in the radio industry show remarkable vitality, according to Harry A. Fore, manager of the Los Angeles office of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company. The Philco factory has been running 25 per cent ahead of its 1929 record-breaking season, Fore reports.

Philco output, originally scheduled at a maximum of 25,000 sets per week, has mounted steadily to 45,000 per week, and still is unable to keep up with orders, Fore adds.

About 65 per cent of this production consists in baby grands, a miniature type of set.

BUILDING FUNDS PLENTIFUL

Investment Company's Survey Discloses Financial Backing for Construction Projects at Low Rate

More than $50,000,000 in mortgage money is available at the present time for building purposes in Los Angeles and environs at interest rates which are lower than at any time in the last five years. This was revealed yesterday in a study of the mortgage money situation made by L. A. Zeigler, president of the Zeigler Investment Corporation, Ltd., who has been closely affiliated with this field for many years here.

"Lending institutions in this section report that mortgage money for construction purposes is cheaper now than it has been for five years," said Zeigler yesterday. "This situation has been brought about by diversion of funds from the stock market, the call money market and because industry, as a whole, is operating on reduced schedules, with a consequent below-normal requirement for financing.

"The fact is that numbers of large corporations have considerably more capital on hand at present than can be used in the operation of their businesses, and many are seeking outlets for profitable investment," he continued. "Not only that, but, to show the way the wind is blowing, it was reported this week that one of the large local banks refused to accept a $1,000,000 deposit for its savings department. This indicates that money is cheap, generally, and, as a result, has finally returned in huge volume to the mortgage money market."

According to Zeigler's study, interest rates on mortgage money are as low as 6 per cent, the rates varying according to the percentage of the loan and other factors. Lending institutions prefer sites in the territory west of Main street, but opportunity for obtaining construction money for projects in other sections of the city is better at present than ever before, owing to the large supply of funds which cannot be utilized in their entirety in the preferred localities, he explained. The lending institutions prefer making loans for building homes and small residential income properties, but apartment-houses, ranging from four stories upward, and business structures obtain favorable consideration when the owner has a substantial equity in the project, he added.

"On the present basis of building material costs, rentals, plentiful labor supply, and low money rates, a satisfactory return can be obtained on buildings of almost every classification, with the possibility of considerably greater return on the investment when materials, labor and money return to their normal costs," said Zeigler. "Certain materials already have increased in price since July, but still are under the 1928 and 1929 figures.

"The present cheapness of mortgage money cannot indefinitely continue," he stated, "so lot owners and investors should take heed and, if they plan to build, take the necessary steps at the present time. The man who can build now is bound to reap the benefit of the enhancement in material costs, interest rates, and wages of labor, let alone the natural increase in property values."

Builder Sells Four Houses, Erects Fifth

Will E. Stone, builder, has built and sold four homes in rapid succession in Huntington Palisades and is now constructing his fifth home, according to P. A. Rairden, vice-president of the Santa Monica Land and Water Company. Stone's operations in this property total more than $100,000, Rairden states.

"There is a demand for the right sort of homes in desirable locations today," says Rairden. "Stone stresses the advantage of the architectural control in force here. The committee of architects has materially assisted him in making suggestions for changes that have appreciated the value of the homes, and at the same time the committee has maintained a character of appearance that enhances the value of all the property.

COUNTY REALTY FILINGS LISTED

Nineteen Major Areas Taken Into Consideration

Los Angeles Records More Than Half Volume

Relative October Rankings Nearly Maintained

In the nineteen major counties of Central and Southern California, a total of 61,917 real estate filings was recorded during the month of November, with substantially more than half of the entire volume of activity centered in Los Angeles county, according to the regular monthly survey compiled by the Security Title Insurance and Guarantee Company. The statistics are received from the various counties in which the title company maintains branch offices.

In this county, there were 35,078 realty filings last month, more than the total in the remaining eighteen counties combined. San Diego county was the second most active center in the survey with a total of 4645, less than one-eighth of the total filings recorded in Los Angeles county.

Five of the nineteen counties exceeded the 2250 mark, and twelve counties recorded more than 1000 each during November. Orange county held third rank with 2656 filings, and San Bernardino was a close competitor with a total of 2584 for the month.

With two exceptions the relative rank of each county in October was maintained last month. The first change transposes Stanislaus and Tulare counties in the survey. With a total of 1218, Tulare county held tenth place in the November survey, supplanting Stanislaus county by the narrow margin of nine filings.

With total of 893 filings, Ventura county showed an increase of eighty-seven and forced Merced county, with 811 filings, into fifteenth place. Additional increases were recorded in San Luis Obispo county with a total of 724; Kings county with 477; and Madera county with 475.

These products, Richardson reports, range from accounting systems to advertising material, artificial plants, various types of stage rigging, electrical equipment, carpets and rugs, house furnishings of all types, decorative materials, disinfectants and perfumes, fire protection and fighting equipment, hardware, musical instruments, sheet music, phonographs and parts, paints, pottery, sweeping compounds, tickets and holders, towels, uniforms and costumes, ventilating and heating systems, wall coverings, and lumber.

In the year 1929, $150,000,000 was spent in the production of motion pictures in the United States as compared with $115,000,000 in 1928. Figures available for the first six months of 1930 would indicate that approximately $180,000,000 will be spent in that field during the present year, Richardson declared.

In 1929 approximately 80 per cent of the pictures produced were in sound, and in 1930 that percentage has been substantially increased. Color films have made great strides during the past year, Richardson explained, due to the advance in lighting methods and superior equipment being provided for studio use.

LEASES OF NOVEMBER REPORTED

Total Consideration of Approximately $200,000 Involved in Deals

Leases involving a total consideration of approximately $200,000 were closed during November through the rental department of R. A. Rowan & Co., according to a summary of the month's activities given out yesterday by officials of the company.

The largest transaction of the month was the leasing for ten years of a storeroom at 447 South Spring street to David Fink by Alta G. Suber, Georgia Suber Hoberling and Nellie Suber McHenry. Together with the cost of improvements being made by Fink, the total consideration involved amounts to approximately $100,000.

Duson L. Krivocapich, William F. Wisehart and Francis Stephens leased premises at 745 East Pico street from Anna Seller and Robert G. Seller for a wholesale coffee and spice business, the rental aggregating $36,000. The McAlpine Hotel, at 648 Stanford avenue, was leased to the McCarthy Company for five years at a rental of $35,000.

Other leases closed through the Rowan Company during November include, 348 South Spring street to Thomas Crowhurst for a curio store, by Grace Matfield, $7500 rental; 112 East Fifth street to J. D. Enright and A. R. Dean, for a restaurant, $7500 rental; 112½ East Fifth street, to H. Podolney, $7500 rental; 453 South San Pedro street to Ivan Carlson by Don C. Porter, for a restaurant, $2000 rental; 663 South Anderson street to Chapman Brothers by I. R. Overell $2000 rental; 1238 Santa Fe avenue to Elmer H. Pruer by Robert E. Harper, $10,000 rental; 820 West Eighth street to Max Kurtz, and 830 West Eighth street to H. Bunkall by Alma Woolwine, $5000 rental; 513 West Washington to Ralph Abounader by O. W. Morgan and J. M. Sartori, $2500 rental.

Improvements to Aggregate Enormous Sum

A total of more than $388,000,000 will be expended in the San Francisco Bay District in the next three years for Federal, municipal and private improvement work, according to Kenneth H. Smitten, State director, in advices received by the California Real Estate Association. Golden Gate and East Bay bridges and San Francisco Harbor development are among the outstanding projects listed.

Approximately $390,000,000 will be spent by the United States government and the Metropolitan Water District in developing the Colorado River project, according to S. P. Lev, incoming regional vice-president of the Los Angeles district of the State association.

Fraternity Chapter House Nears Completion

Structure to be Occupied Next Semester

The chapter house of Upsilon Chapter of Sigma Pi Fraternity, illustrated above, is nearing completion on Landfair avenue, Westwood Hills, and will be occupied beginning with the next U.C.L.A. semester. The building overlooks the campus and is of the California-Colonial type, of brick and stucco, with low-pitched shingle roof, shuttered windows and two-story balconies. Accommodations are provided for thirty-five men. There are sixteen double bedrooms, each with separate wardrobe and lavatory. C. Roderick Spencer and John J. Landon were responsible for the design. The Earl W. Chester Company, Beverly Hills, is the contractor.

the business. The elder daughter, Mrs. Lyle Scott, is general manager of the Hofert Company. The elder son, Alvin Hofert, superintends the cutting and shipping of the hundreds of thousands of trees required to fill orders which flow in from every part of the land.

This Christmas the Hoferts will distribute approximately ninety carloads in Los Angeles county, each car containing from 3000 to 5000 trees. They will make large shipments to the Hawaiian Islands, Florida, Chicago, St. Louis, New York, New Orleans and other hundreds of American cities.

RAILROAD UNLOADING

Thousands of these trees will be unloaded and reshipped from the Hofert headquarters on the Southern Pacific tracks at Alameda and Eighth streets. At any time, day or night, during the two weeks immediately preceding Christmas, upward of 250,000 trees can be seen in this railway yard. As many as 60,000 in a single day are unloaded from railway cars and reshipped to dealers scattered all over the Southwest. Trees commenced arriving the first of this month. The day before Christmas there may be more than 50 000 trees in the yard. On Christmas Day not a single tree will be left.

The business, however, is a year-round industry. Orders commence pouring in early in January for the following season's business. Salesmen representing the Hofert Company cover the entire country soliciting business, all of which flows to the firm's Los Angeles headquarters.

Early in July Alvin Hofert leaves for the woods to select personally the million or more trees which will be required to fill his firm's orders. He seeks for but two varieties—the silver-tip fir and the red fir. For the Los Angeles trade these trees come from British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and Northern California where they grow in profusion.

PLENTIFUL SUPPLY

Incidentally there need be no fear of severe Christmas tree shortages due to lack of nature's ability to make good these huge annual drafts made upon her storehouses. Shortages which arise from time to time usually are due to the mountain storms and unanticipated deep snows which make it difficult either to cut or ship trees.

About October 1 each year the firm's clerical force commences to write shipping tags to cover orders taken earlier in the year. By the time the first of the trees roll into town over the Southern Pacific's tracks, most of the shipping tags are ready and all that remains is to sort the trees, count and tie into bundles, attach the tag and reship.

Los Angeles dealers do a large part of the nation's Christmas-tree business, the Hoferts's operations alone covering approximately 50 per cent of all holiday trees sold in the land. That easily makes Los Angeles the Christmas-tree capital of the nation and of the world. The Christmas trees cut by this Los Angeles firm will carry Los Angeles shipping tags to almost every State in the Union as well as to the islands of the Pacific.

Auto Company Closes Lease on Showroom

George S. Pelton of the Pelton Motor Company, Dodge dealers, last week signed a ten-year lease on the used-car showroom at 1330 South Figueroa street. The Jack C. Henderson Company consummated the deal, representing both the Pelton Motor Company and the Cardale Corporation, owners of the building. Total rental for the term is announced as $127,500.

The structure leased was completed eight months ago for J. W. Leavitt & Co. Depth of the display room is 135 feet, with an additional twenty feet in the rear devoted to service and wash rack operations.

VALUE EVENLY DISTRIBUTED

Increase in Assessed Valuation of Inside Lots in Block Practically Equals That of Corners

Reflecting the evenly distributed increase of Los Angeles property values, twenty-nine lots which comprise the solid block on Vine between Hollywood Boulevard and Yucca street, have registered an average assessed valution increase of 1497.7 per cent or 149.7 per cent annually for each lot during the last ten years, according to a survey made by the Title Guarantee and Trust Company.

Owing to the fact that heretofore consecutive corner lots have been used in comparisons showing rapid increases in Los Angeles property values, the impression has prevailed that the high percentage of increased values applied only to properties located on favorable intersections and that inside lots taken consecutively on a given block would not register corresponding gains, the Title Guarantee survey states.

That the inside lots are keeping pace with the corner value increases is shown by a comparison of the 1919 assessed valuation of the twenty-nine Vine-street lots with that of 1929, the survey says. In this comparison every inside and outside lot on Vine street between Hollywood Boulevard and Yucca street was included. The survey developed the fact that the average increase in assessed valuation of the twenty-five inside lots was 1491.4 per cent each for the ten-year period, as compared with 1537.3 per cent for the four corner lots covered in the comparison. In other words, the percentage of valuation increase of the inside lots was practically as great as that of the corner lots.

BUILDING PACE CONTINUES

Year's Construction Featured by Residence Work, Fraternity and Sorority House Erection

With a building permit total of $398,715 for November, Westwood Hills continues its record of growth, according to A. H. Wilkins, vice-president of the Janss Investment Corporation. An analysis of the building report reveals that within a single week permits were issued for ten residences costing $80,000, or an average of $8000 each. The total number of permits for all types of buildings was forty, while the major permit for the month was for the Fox West Coast Westwood Village Theater.

If the month's building total were divided into the twenty-five working days of November, an improvement program of nearly $17,000 per day would result, Wilkins declares. Building totals in Westwood Hills for the entire year of 1929 were $5,215,277 and it is predicted that the totals for 1930 will equal, if not exceed, the 1929 figure.

Considered on a square-mile basis, new buildings are being constructed in Westwood Hills at the rate of approximately $1,000,000 valuation per square mile per year; while the square-mile improvement ratio for the entire city has been quoted at $250,000, giving Westwood Hills four times the square-mile total of the entire city, Wilkins states.

A feature of the year's construction has been the number of sorority and fraternity houses which have been constructed adjacent to the University of California at Los Angeles. There have been completed to date a total of thirty structures of this type, with four more now under way. The total value of these buildings, including the land, will exceed $1,300,000, it is estimated.

Three Leases Consummated on Vine Street

Rental leases totaling more than $100,000 are reported consummated by the Uncle Sam Realty Company of Hollywood, during the past month.

Klein's Hungarian Cafe, formerly located near the downtown section, has taken a five-year lease at 1219 North Vine street. The Vine Street Jewelry Company signed a five-year lease at 1553 North Vine street. The second floor of the Hollywood Roof Building at 1549 North Vine street has been leased for six years to the Hollywood Gardens Corporation. Extensive alterations and improvements are being made prior to opening a ballroom.

IMPROVEMENT COSTS FIGURED

Report of Board of Public Works Analyzed

Street Work of Past Fiscal Year Estimated

Construction of Pedestrian Tunnels Advanced

During the past ten years, Los Angeles has expended $132,456,481.12 in street paving, street improvements, storm drains, sanitary sewers, bridges and pedestrian subways, according to a study of the annual report of the Los Angeles Board of Public Works made by Cecil B. Barker, general manager of C. C. C. Tatum, realtors.

One hundred and sixty-eight miles of city streets were paved during the last fiscal year at a cost of $10,018,162, and thirty-seven miles of storm drain were laid, involving an expenditure of $2,128,351. In each of these instances the total was less than in 1927-28, which was the peak year for this type of construction.

Concrete pavement led the list in total miles paved, there being during the past year 110 miles of this type of pavement laid. Asphaltic concrete pavement was second on the list and showed twenty-five miles at a cost of $1,009,480. The former type cost a total of $4,448,848.

The 1911 Act proved the most popular improvement act during the year, more than $10,000,000 worth of improvement work being accomplished under its provisions.

During the past four years considerable progress has been made in pedestrian tunnel work, according to the Barker survey.

FOCUS OF ACTIVITY LOCATED

Los Angeles Metropolitan Area Held Nation's Leading Building Section

The Los Angeles metropolitan area, which covers territory within a radius of fifty miles, is the nation's most active center of building construction, its October permit total exceeding that of any city in the United States except New York, according to a national survey made by G. R. Dexter, president of the Bank of Hollywood.

Dexter's analysis shows that building permits issued in the fifty-mile Los Angeles district during October reached a valuation of $11,854,118, which was more than the combined permit valuation total of Chicago and Philadelphia, aggregating $11,333,390. The survey further visualizes the extensive proportions of local building activity by citing that the Los Angeles area permits exceeded those of Cleveland and Boston combined by $1,500,000, the total of the two cities being $10,129,197.

Extending the comparison the survey shows that the Los Angeles permit total was more than $1,500,000 greater than that of Detroit, Cincinnati, Washington and Baltimore combined, the four metropolitan centers having aggregate valuations of $10,397,683.

In Hollywood, a sectional community located outside of downtown metropolitan areas, the permit totals for October exceeded those of Minneapolis and practically equaled the total registered by Buffalo, N. Y., the survey states.

and also are having an adverse effect on adjacent areas. This is on the principle of the spoiled apple in the barrel. In fact, directly or indirectly, these depreciated areas threaten a bad effect on entire municipalities.

"They cannot be fenced off and left to their fate. They cannot be segregated to work out their own salvation regardless of the rest of the community," Babcock declares. "Consequently they present a problem of concern to the entire city in which they are situated. Naturally, the rehabilitation of blighted areas is governed entirely by the conditions involved.

"In the instance of Bunker Hill the matter of topography enters largely into consideration. Admittedly it is a traffic barrier not only for itself but for extensive and growing sections at every side of it. Architecturally it has not kept pace with the modernly growing parts of the city. It apparently presents a striking need for rehabilitation if it is to share in the indicated improvement in realty values.

"Modern engineering methods lend themselves expeditiously to the razing of this area or any part of it and without undue interference with a natural volume of traffic while the work is under way. However, we are not concerned with this part of the project. Our part is to determine how a resubdivision of the level area resulting from the razing of the hill will affect not only realty values there, but what the effect will be on the adjacent areas and to what degree they will have an influence on the general realty set-up of the community. It is one of the most important realty propositions that the city has faced in years, we believe."

the amount of land available for home building.

The automobile has played a large part in this in that it has reduced distances to a minimum and long blocks no longer have as many objectionable features as in the past. Corner residence lots often have been the most difficult to sell, and the new order of things benefits the subdivider of the land as well as lot purchasers and cities in general.

CONSTRUCTION PLANS QUESTIONS ANSWERED

COMPACT HOME COST MODERATE

One of Group of Ten Houses Here Illustrated

Tile Roof and Shutters Give California Charm

Illusion of Size Produced by Attached Garage

The house shown here, designed by H. Roy Kelley, architect, is one of a group of ten small houses built at Palos Verdes Estates for persons of moderate income. The houses have four, five and six rooms and range in cost from $2500 to $3600. The plans are all said to be compact and economical in construction and use of materials, but the arrangement of rooms in each house is a livable one and all of the rooms are of fair size.

The exterior of this house is stucco and the interior walls are of textured Latin-finished interior stucco. The tile roof and shutters on the windows and doors are said to give a feeling of charm and hospitality that is typical of California houses and the garage attached to the house makes it appear even larger than it is.

The floor plan is well executed, with all waste space eliminated, and yet includes everything that is necessary for comfort and convenience. The living room, with its large fireplace, has windows on two sides, making it a light and livable room. The kitchen, breakfast room and service porch combine to make a compact working unit with little chance for wasted steps and effort. The room opening onto the kitchen is placed so that it can be used either as a dining-room or bedroom. The two bedrooms, with windows on two sides, which insure the best kind of ventilation, have large closets. The hall, though small, serves its purpose and connects the living-room with the bedroom portion of the house and acts as a passage way connecting all parts of the house with the bathroom. The walled-in court makes possible a private garden, which adds to the charm of the house.

Photographs and floor plan of this house may be seen in the Architects' Building Material Exhibit at Fifth and Figueroa streets.

ECONOMIC CHATS on HOME OWNERSHIP

by Peter Hanson

Usually in every growing city there are several distinct residential districts, with each district having its own individual trend. In such cases the buyer must study the trend of the section in which he is interested.

The force and effect of a residential trend in any subdivision may be fairly well ascertained by a survey of the following conditions in fact:

(1.) The class and type of appeal of the subdivision.

(2.) The building restrictions and kind of improvements installed.

(3.) The number of homes already built in proportion to the whole number of lots in the tract.

(4.) The proportion of actual occupancy as indicating bona fide home buyers.

(5.) The rate of absorption in the light of population growth.

(6.) The competition of other tracts in the vicinity.

(7.) The amount of building now actually going on.

(8.) The natural appeal of the tract because of its setting.

It should not be a hard matter to obtain this information with a fair degree of accuracy, and by counting the number of homes built, and the number of vacant lots remaining, the prospective buyer can obtain an accurate ratio of occupancy upon which to base a reasonable future estimate of what may be expected of the tract, in the light of similar trends in other tracts.

The impetus of a building movement in any tract is its most certain asset, and the amount of actual building going on is the best index to the tract's future continued development. The good name and standing of the developer of the tract is often an assurance of success, while the reputation of the builder also plays an important part. In our next article we shall analyze the "chance for resale."

MORTGAGE VALUATION ESTIMATED

Total Outstanding on Nation's Homes Placed at $22,500,000,000

The total valuation of all mortgages outstanding at present on the dwellings of the United States is estimated at $22,500,000,000, of which almost 40 per cent represents loans made by building and loan associations, according to statistics received yesterday by Roy H. Fish, secretary-treasurer of the American Mortgage Company and the American Loan Society, local building-loan concern.

First-mortgage loans by building and loan associations of the nation now amount to more than $8,000,000,000, the data show, while banks and trust companies' loans account for approximately $5,000,000,000 of the total. First mortgages held by insurance mopanies total approximately $3,500,000,000, and private mortgage companies hold $3,000,000,000.

According to Fish, there is a total of approximately $2,000,000,000 outstanding in second mortgages on dwellings, and approximately $1,000,000,000 in mortgages on farm homes. According to the statistics received here, the total investment ni city mortgage loans of fifty-two American legal reserve insurance companies, which hold more than 91 per cent of all assets of all legal reserve insurance companies of the country, was $4,831,000,000 at the close of 1929. This substantiates the estimate of first mortgages held by insurance companies, it is pointed out.

HOME BUILDERS' PRIMER

[Conducted by the Home Modernization Department of the Los Angeles Builders' Exchange. Questions will be answered without cost, and salesmen will not be sent in response to inquiries if letters are addressed to this department of "The Times."]

Question: Is it possible to install a shower above an existing bath tub without damage to plaster walls?

Answer. A specially designed fixture made by a Los Angeles firm is now available for the use you suggest. The fixture is ornamental and easy to install without breaking or damaging plaster. It may be had in nickel or chromium finish and costs $20 to $25 including shower curtain.

Q.: I have been told that there is a door mat now made (not coco mat,) which is efficient and long wearing. Will you give me information about it?

A.: There is now made a rubberized fiber, link section mat for use at doors or over concrete floors. It is not rubber but is soft under foot, is efficient in cleaning dirt from shoes and can be had in a variety of sizes and shapes.

Q.: Is there a sink available which has some form of patented strainer which prevents grease and refuse from getting into the drain pipe?

A.: A local manufacturer makes a sink equipped with the drain you have described. The sink is a one-piece combination with back and drain board all in one without seams. It can be had in colors and the enamel is acid proof.

Q.: My bungalow, built ten years ago, has a low ceiling and old-fashioned dark wainscote in the living-room. Please suggest a plan of modernizing.

A.: The low ceiling could be raised into the attic space giving a studio room effect. False beams could be built into ceiling, and walls, if desired, could be panled perpendicularly to enhance the feeling of height. The panels could be done in fiber board which at the same time would insulate against heat or cold. This material is very adaptable to any form of decoration and would bring the room back into up-to-the-minute style at a moderate cost. An estimate of the cost will be given and a pencil sketch of the finished room will be made for you if you will apply to the Modernizing Bureau through The Times.

Q.: Our five-room bungalow is too small for our growing family. What would you suggest to give us two extra rooms and a bath and to bring the outside appearance into class with the newer houses?

A.: If your home is in a good neighborhood it will pay both in resale value; ease in selling, and your own added comfort, to enlarge and modernize at this time when costs are low. Why not convert your one-story into a two-story Monterey? The latter is much in demand. An estimate and pencil sketch can be had from the Modernizing Bureau by writing to the bureau through The Times.

If the lady who wrote in asking how she could protect the accumulated interest on her saving, and still pay her taxes due on December 5, will send self-addressed and stamped envelope, we will explain by letter, a simple way of doing it.

(Questions of this type will be answered and literature sent free on request if inquiries and stamped return envelope are sent to the Home Modernization Bureau, care of Real Estate Editor, The Times)

HOME FINANCING SCOPE EXPANDS

Use of Building-Loan Credit Increases Yearly

Mortgage Loans and Homes Thus Built Reviewed

Residential Schedule for Next Year Foreseen

Mortgage loans reaching a total of $1,866,000,000, which were made by the building and loan associations of the nation during the last year, financed the construction of 500 homes.

With assets of the building-loan institutions now in excess of $8,696,154,220, increasing at the rate of $500,000,000 annually, and with building material costs at new low levels, indications point to a tremendous residential construction schedule during 1931, nation-wide in its scope, which will involve building-loan financing even greater than that of 1923, when $2,153,000,000 was advanced in loans on homes, according to a survey made by Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary of the Guaranty Building and Loan Association, on the eve of the 100th anniversary of the birth of the building-loan movement in America.

Other features of the survey show that the nation's building-loan institutions have financed the building of 6,566,700 homes, on which loans amounting to $22,215,122,000 were made. These dwellings have provided accommodations for approximately 32,833,500 persons.

NUMBER OF HOMES FINANCED

The scope of the home-building activities of the building-loan associations may be visualized from the following Guaranty figures showing the number of homes in the United States which have been financed by these institutions since 1901:

CALIFORNIA HOLDS LEAD

California building and loan associations have increased their resources more rapidly than the institutions of any other State in the Union, the survey sets forth. From combined resources of $20,820,082 in 1894 the asset total dropped to $18,935,883 in 1900, increasing to $21,255,176 in 1910, then to $47,851,294 in 1920, with a total of $513,110,594 in 1930. The number of savers in California associations has increased at the rate of 100,000 per year during the last three years, and totals in 1930 more than 550,000. The popularity of building-loan financing is indicated in that loans are now in force on 137,000 California homes. Of $450,425,879 of loans now in force, 70 per cent are on residential property. Approximately 350,000 California homes which have furnished accommodations for 1,750,000 persons have been financed by the State's building-loan institutions.

The advance of California building-loan associations during the last four years of so-called depression is indicated by Guaranty figures showing the annual increases in resources since 1927:

	Resources	Gain
1927	$241,796,767	$ 51,799,739
1928	297,196,401	55,399,634

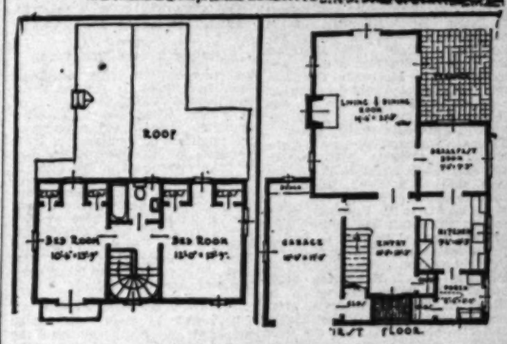
Plan Awarded Honorable Mention



Competition Conducted by Architects

The above plan of a California home, designed by Harold E. Burket, may be examined at the Small House Plan Service, 6537 Lexington avenue, Hollywood. The plan won honorable mention in a competition conducted by the Long Beach Architectural Club.

DESIGN ACHIEVES DIGNITY

Small Lot Limitation Met by Arrangement of Floor Space With Two Bedrooms on Second Floor

The dwelling shown in the accompanying sketch, while within the category of small houses, is declared to reflect a feeling of dignity and substance that attracts attention and commands respect.

One of the entries in a competition conducted by the Long Beach Architectural Club was limited to a lot 40x90 feet. The designer has met this limitation with his arrangement of floor spaces and clothed the plan with an exterior of Spanish-Italian tendencies, both adapted to California living conditions.

Essential to a successful solution of the given problem, judges stated, is a compactness in the plan, achieved here by combining the garage with the house and placing the two bedrooms on the second floor, with the result that abundant area remains on the plot for planting and garden in front and rear and freedom from interference with any vistas afforded by the site.

This compactness further lends itself to the utmost of economy of effort in the household routine. The garage opens into the entry, and from the entry it is but a step to any part of the house.

Probably the most striking single feature of the design is the doorway, set in an Italian arch, leading to the central hall. This hall is itself of sufficient size to contribute an element of formal dignity to the whole.

The design, by Harold E. Burket, was awarded an honorable mention in the Long Beach competition.

Nine Dwellings Being Built in Development

Nine homes are in course of construction in the Outpost, Hollywood residential development controlled by the C. E. Toberman Company, representing a total valuation of approximately $365,000, including sites, according to Don D. Wade, sales manager of the project. This year marks the greatest building activity in the history of the Outpost, Wade states.

The value of residences that have been fully completed during the year terminating yesterday is in excess of $250,000, including the sites. The recently comp'eted residence of Mrs. Maude Mills of early California-Spanish design, represented a total investment of $75,000. It is now open to the general public for inspection.

Wade points out that the Outpost's new design of smaller home is proving so popular that plans are now being prepared by Rollin F. Pierson for the construction of two more within the near future.

NOTRE DAME CRUSHES TROJANS, 27-0

BUCKING ALONG WITH THAT O'CONNOR PERSON

For a chap who stepped into the fullback position rather unexpectedly, "Bucky" O'Connor acquitted himself nobly. Here is the Notre Dame ace smashing off a bit of yardage through Troy's line at the Coliseum yesterday. Ernie Smith has made the tackle. Baker and Shaw of the Trojans are on the left, with Arbelbide and Musick at the right. O'Connor later dashed 80 yards to Notre Dame's second touchdown.

ROCKNE HAS TOUGH TIME

Poor Bald Knute Stumbles Along With Makeshift Fullback to Wreck, Ruin and Whip Trojans

BY BILL HENRY

It's a shame, that's what it is—a dirty shame.

Yes sir, when a coach loses all his really good players and has to fall back on a "bum" like this fellow O'Connor to play fullback on his team it just makes me cry. Poor old Rockne. It certainly was tough to have nobody better than O'Connor in there. I presume that if Savoldi had been on the job instead of running 80 yards for a touchdown they never would have stopped him short of Vermont avenue.

There have been football teams of considerable fame appear in these parts in the past twenty years but there has never been a team with anything like the speed, precision and alertness of the gang that that sobbing Scandinavian turned loose on Zack Farmer's lawn yesterday. The "four horsemen" were perhaps more graceful and resourceful but they never began to have the power that this crowd had.

KNUTE ROCKNE

And while we're on the subject of O'Connor you certainly have to hand it to the lad for learning so quickly a brand-new position in as finely tuned a machine as the Rockne outfit. O'Connor's actual practice in the fullback position, as told exclusively in The Times of Friday morning, took place on Wednesday and Thursday afternoon at Tucson.

GREAT GENERAL

There may have been field generals in the past who appeared to have the situation well in hand but Los Angeles spectators were never treated to a finer exhibition than that given by the well-known Irishman, Mr. Carideo. The stocky quarterback stepped on the field at 2 p.m. and took charge of the situation and had everything well under control until shortly after 4 when he became slightly bored and turned matter over to his assistant,

IRISH FORWARD WALL PRAISED

Lieb Credits Linesmen With Capturing Contests

BY TOM LIEB
Loyola Fotball Coach

Notre Dame defeated Southern California yesterday because the Irish line completely outplayed the Trojan forward wall throughout the entire game. Everybody, ends, tackles, guards and centers, outclassed their Trojan opponents completely, opening holes for the Irish backs to get through, as well as breaking up the Trojan offensive.

TOM LIEB

"Hunk" Anderson, line coach of the Irish, deserves a world of credit for the victory. The men he coached played their positions perfectly, and it was due to their aggressive charging and their smart work that the Irish won.

Southern California didn't have a single chance to score all afternoon. Every attack was smoth-

Chicago Gets Irish Contest

CHICAGO, Dec. 6. (AP)—The Western Conference faculty committee on athletics today approved a proposal to shift the 1931 Notre Dame-Northwestern football game from South Bend, Ind., to Soldier Field, in the interest of the Illinois unemployment commission fund. Following the faculty committee's refusal to permit the 1930 game to be played at Soldier Field, instead of at Dyche Stadium, Northwestern, officials of the latter institution offered $100,000 for the unemployed if the 1931 game could be moved from South Bend to Soldier Field. Northwestern would then be taking a chance its share of the receipts would be at least $100,000.

"ROCK" USES SHIFT, TOO

K. Noot Yanks Fedora Out of Shape as Ambling Ramblers Amble in Coliseum Tussle

BY CHESTER G. HANSON

It would have been a tough afternoon for the rim of Knute Rockne's gray fedora hat if the game with U.S.C. had been a close one.

Observation of the great coach as he sat on the sidelines watching his ramblers amble over U.S.C. revealed something new in a Rockne shift that goes something like this when the game is young and tense: The right hand moves from the right knee, rubs the mouth with the back of the hand, catches the rim of the low-swung gray fedora and pulls the hat firmer down on the head. Knute then leans forward again, settles a bit firmer in his chair and gazes once more intently at the players lined up on the field.

COACHES SING IRISH MELODY

Visiting Mentors Laud Play of Notre Dame Team

BY FRANK ROCHE

From every nook and corner of the press stand where the nation's leading football coaches were seated praises of the Notre Dame team were sung yesterday at the Coliseum. "Pop" Warner, "Doc" Spears, Babe Hollingbery, Bill Spaulding, A. J. Stuhldreher, Buck Bailey, Slip Madigan and others too numerous to mention lauded the Irish to the skies for their great display of football yesterday afternoon on the Coliseum greensward.

"POP" WARNER

At first members of the group were a little bit backward in giving any opinion but when half time was reached it was a different story. "Pop" Warner was one of the first to break the ice. Stanford's famous coach stopped on his way to a radio booth to tell the scribes how much he thought of the Notre Dame plays.

EARN TROPHY

CHICAGO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Notre Dame's overwhelming victory over Southern California today not only gave the Irish the national football title under the Dickinson rating system, but won Knute Rockne's warriors permanent possession of the Rissman national intercollegiate trophy. Permanet possesion required winning the national title three times within a decade. Ten victories in a row over Southern Methodist, Navy, Carnegie Tech, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh, Northwestern, Drake, Army and Southern California gave Notre Dame a point score of 25.13, while Washington State had 20.44 for second place. Alabama, champion of the South, rated 20.18 for third place. Northwestern landed fourth with 18.63. Michigan was fifth with 18.34. Southern California followed with 17.98, and Stanford was seventh at 17.92. Dartmouth was eighth with 17.11, and Army was next with 16.66. Tennessee and Tulane were tenth and eleventh, with 16.15, and 16.05, respectively.

taking the kick-off and advancing the ball on sharp dashes by Schwartz nearly to the middle of the field.

Then Schwartz stepped back and shot a perfect toss to Conley from a formation that tricked the Trojan secondary to one side as Conley ran to the other sideline, being forced out of bounds after a gain of 33 yards.

Temporarily halted on the 20-yard line the Irish regained the ball when Musick fumbled, and Schwartz quickly rifled a pass to Carideo for the touchdown. Nobody was near Carideo when he took the ball, the Trojan defense appearing absolutely helpless against the aerial attack of the Irish. Carideo kicked goal to make the score 7 to 0.

After the kick-off the Trojans put on their only sustained offense of the day, making two first downs and advancing the ball to Notre Dame's 33-yard line.

Here Duffield had to take a bad pass from center, which shot by him like a bullet, but by a bit of quick thinking he kicked over the Irish goal line.

This set the stage for the most dramatic run of the game, the 80-yard spin by Bucky O'Connor, the dark-horse hero of the game.

METZGER LEADS

The play was an orthodox dash between tackle and end with Bert Metzger leading the assault on the end and clearing the road for O'Connor to race toward the sidelines.

There Duffield was awaiting the Irish back, but O'Connor stopped, spun and whirled out of Duffield's arms and reversed to the left.

Pinckert was set for a tackle when Yarr, Irish center, came along and bowled him out like a ten pin. That cleared the decks and all O'Connor had to do was run to the distant goal line.

Tom Lieb, head coach of the Irish, sitting in the press box, said O'Connor never ran so far before in his life. Much to everybody's surprise Carideo missed goal, leaving the score, 13 to 0.

The Irish completely dominated the situation in the second period, but there was no official scoring. However, they sent Hanley over on a pass from Lukats after a sixty-yard march, but the ball was called back and Notre Dame penalized for off-side play.

JONES INACTIVE DURING GIGANTIC

The Thinker!

That was the attitude of Howard Jones, Southern California football coach, as he watched Knute K. Rockne's Notre Dame Ramblers run up a 27-to-0 score on his Trojans at the Coliseum yesterday afternoon.

Scarcely moving from his seat on the bench for four solid periods, the only outward manifestations of an inward seething displayed by Jones were in the nervous manner with which he chewed his gum and puffed at an occasional cigarette. Jones's gum chewing kept tempo with the play, speeding up when the going was fast and slowing down during slack moments.

Flanked by Bill Hunter, assistant Trojan coach, and Francis Tappaan, S.C.'s all-American end of 1929, Jones seemed to speak hardly half a dozen words during the game. Possibly he was stunned, or maybe enthralled, as were the 90,000 spectators who cheered the matchless football of a great Notre Dame team.

The entire Trojan bench, for that matter, appeared lifeless. As the Irish stars left the field, Rockne dashed out to congratulate each player, and the Rambler bench rose to a man to applaud. There were no such demonstrations on the S.C. bench, where the players reflected the phlegmatic reactions of "Head Man" Jones.

TROJANS NOT ONLY ONES FOOLED BY K. K. ROCKNE

By LAWRENCE

"Two years ago," said K. Noot, "O'Connor worked out at fullback for six weeks, but Jumping Joe Savoldi managed to make up credits in geography and long division, and being well fortified with fullbacks, I decided that Bucky would be more useful as an understudy to Brill at halfback.

"You can't make a fullback in three days' time, but with six weeks of spring practice drilled into him, I knew that he could fill the bill. O'Connor was a revelation to me. He played better than he knew how."

And that's the story behind O'Connor, who got off the greatest run of the day, a demoralizing 80-yard jaunt that put the game on ice for the Irish and sounded the knell of defeat for the Trojans in that 27-to-0 trimming at the Coliseum yesterday afternoon.

Rejuvenated Navy Eleven Crushes Pennsylvania Before 60,000 Spectators, 26

MIDSHIPMEN IN GREAT SHOWING

Push Over Four Touchdowns With Brilliant Attack

Substitutes Shine as Team Clicks Against Quakers

Army Warned as Annapolis Athletes Show Punch

BY EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

PRANKLIN FIELD (Philadelphia) Dec. 6. (AP)—Navy set a string of storm signals for all of Army to see today as a surprisingly versatile squad of midshipmen battered and passed Pennsylvania's fair eleven into submission before an enthusiastic crowd of 60,000.

Whipped four times this season, rated hardly a formidable rival for the powerful Cadets in the charity climax of the eastern campaign in New York next Saturday, Navy pulled the plug on an amazingly potent offensive and smothered the Quakers, 26 to 0. The score might have been twice that large if the midshipmen had chosen to take chances instead of kicking and waiting for scores until they all but dropped in their laps.

So completely was Navy in command of the situation without the aid of a single marine that the Pennsylvania team thats cored twenty points in the Notre Dame rout scored just three first downs and gained only 15 yards more than it lost from scrimmage. Two desperate passes, one complete because of interference, and a 13-yard run by Capt. Dick Gentile on a fake kick from behind his own goal line, provided the entire Pennsylvania offensive.

Lou Kirn, Navy dynamo at right halfback, battered the Quaker line miserable in a scoreless first half that saw the rejuvenated squad from Annapolis push Penn all over the field, but refuse to take chances deep in the enemy's territory. It wasn't until Kirn's substitute, a 170-pound youngster named Tommy Hurley, a second-classman from New York City, came into the backfield for the second half, with a substitute quarterback, "Rusty" Williams, of Richmond, Va., at the helm, that Navy began to go places and do things in a manner that surprised even the roaring regiments from the Naval Academy.

Four times in the second half Navy took advantage of breaks as avidly as they had spurned them in the first half and converted each opportunity into a touchdown. Mal Tuttle, Navy's crack center, smothered a ball that bounced off Penn's back in motion, Gentile, on the Quaker 37-yard line, and a pass, Hurley to Williams, carried to the 16. Hurley blasted straight down through the center alley in short takes until he boomed over from the 3-yard line. Blimp Bowstrom, Navy's big kicking tackle, booted the goal from placement.

Jack Gannon, wheel horse of the Navy backfield, then helped himself to the first of his pair of touchdowns. He scored the first on a 5-yard burst through center near the end of the third period after Williams intercepted on Penn's 28-yard line a pass that Jerry Ford, substitute Quaker back, tried to complete from behind his own goal. The second, early in the fourth quarter, was a personal venture. Gannon reached up and grabbed another desperate Penn toss on the Red and Blue 42-yard line. He shot a long pass to Byng, best of the Navy ends, on Penn's 10-yard line and in two whacks at center personally escorted the leather across the goal. Williams offered a variation to the usual procedure by tossing a short pass to Byng for the extra point.

Navy's substitutes scored the final touchdown near the end of the final quarter. The Penn line, battered almost helpless by Navy's relentless forwards, folded up on successive plays as the loss of 10 yards in two attempts to run the ball from the 24-yard line. On the third play Elliott, substitute Navy end, smashed through again and blocked Onderdunk's attempt to kick. He recovered on the Penn 3-yard line and Castress, a substitute back, crashed over for the final point.

Navy gained 225 yards from scrimmage, compared to the net profit of 15 gathered by Penn in the Quakers' final effort of the season, and made 18 first downs to Penn's 3. Navy gained 75 yards by passing, Penn, 50. Penn's longest gain from scrimmage was 36 yards. The line-up and summary:

ROCK'S SHIFT IN FINE FORM

less, he watches; the ball is snapped his man makes five yards, and when the play is over, Knute straightens up again, rubs his mouth with the back of his hand, pulls his hat down by the rim, and settles forward for the third play.

KNUTE IN MOTION

And so it goes as the game gets under way. Intently watching as the play is on, relaxing by pulling on the hat brim, and then back to the play. Here's the first long pass by Notre Dame. It is successful. Rockne just sits and glues his eyes admiringly on the man who made the pass and follows him as he trots down the field to take up the play again.

It is fourth down and a yard to go. Knute leans back in his chair, and this time lifts his hat in both hands, settles it back on his head, pulls it down on his ears, and leans forward again, elbow on his knee. He clutches a folded chunk of newspaper in his left hand.

As Notre Dame calls for time out the water boy starts to run out on the field, but is waved back by Carideo. The water boy hovers around out there a bit and slinks back. As he reaches the sideline near Rockne, the coach says a word to him and tells him to go out there and give the boys some service. The water boy goes. Rockne knows better than Carideo whether or not it is time for the water boy.

As the first touchdown is made, Knute turns to Hunk Anderson, line coach, who sits in a chair at Rockne's right, and laughs. Just briefly, but it is a laugh, and then he watches the try for the extra point. She's over! A nod from Knute.

As the teams line up for the second kick-off Rockne wipes his mouth with the back of his hand, pulls his hat down and leans forward again.

The gray fedora appears to be getting larger and larger as it sinks further and further down on his ears.

At the announcement that there are four more minutes in the quarter, Rockne turns and calls over his left shoulder to one of his players on the bench. The lad leaps, grabs his headgear, jams it on his sconce and takes a seat at the feet of the coach. It is Dan Hanley. The next play is on. Rockne leans forward to the player at his feet, makes a few brief remarks, the while he jabs the folded newspaper out toward the players on the field. Hanley nods—yes, yes!

Suddenly Knute turns again to the players on the bench and they begin to talk up the game to the boys on the field; they clap their hands! They come alive!

As Duffield makes the quick kick upon recovery of a poor pass, Knute does nothing. Just looks. It is Notre Dame's ball on her 20-yard line. And then comes the eighty-yard run! Knute follows O'Connor as he goes down the field, but he keeps his seat. As the lad crosses the goal line Knute is on his feet. He runs to the sideline, hat on the back of his head, arms outstretched as he beats his left hand with the paper he now clutches in his right. Bravo! Bravo! What a run! And Rockne laughs long and heartily.

As play is resumed, you are suddenly aware that Rockne and Hanley are on their feet. The coach is talking fast and vigorously to the lad as he crouches, eager to be off. A final gesture and a slap on the back from Rockne as he points to the players out on the field, and Hanley is streaking out to bring to his team-mates a load of the Rockne personality to put into the game.

O'CONNOR CHEERED

O'Connor comes out from the game and Rockne gets up to greet him, a quick handshake and an approving slap on the back. Just that—no slop nor mush. And the coach turns his attention to the play again. He is easing up. The tenseness is not there. The old hat brim is getting a "break." Knute is working on the newspaper. Just a word or two of comment from him to Anderson.

The half is nearing a close. Knute gets up, looks over his flock on the bench, picks out several as he taps them on the shoulder with a word. They are ready whenever he is. He is alive, driving, happy, imbuing his players with the fighting spirit.

As the half suddenly ends, Knute leaps from his chair, bounds to the sideline, clapping his hands to his team as they come trotting off the field. He seeks out Carideo, seizes his hand, and pats him on the shoulder as they move off happy.

During the second half, you can just see that Rockne's worries are over. He laughs frequently—at a long run by Notre Dame; as Carideo makes the clever kick out of bounds. The minute it appears some one of his players is hurt he is up on his feet, and peering intently out at the men grouped around the man who is down. As he begins to call in his stars, the third quarter, he greets each one with a warm handclasp, a pat or two. To Carideo, as he called him in, he bent, it seemed, an anxious look. And the players on the bench also rose and cheered the men being called in.

It's the Rockne spirit and he gives it to his players.

years and a great offense," Pop said. "Why U.S.C. seems to have practically no defense for those passes," the old man said with what seemed like a chuckle.

Slip Madigan, a former Notre Dame player in years gone by and now coach of St. Mary's, was the next to dash up with an opinion. "Why, there is nothing to it out there. Carideo is the class. That fellow reads the mind of the eleven Trojan players and then just does the opposite," declared Slip of Galloping Gael fame.

Here are some of the other opinions gathered from coaches who are known from coast to coast:

Dink Templeton, Stanford track coach and football authority—"The Notre Dame team simply took the guts out of the Trojan running attack. Imagine U.S.C. passing from their own 20-yard line, in the early part of the game. The Notre Dame line outplayed them all the way."

Bill Spaulding, U.C.L.A. coach—"Notre Dame has the smoothest-running team I have seen in years. Gee, but those off-tackle plays and passes were great."

Herb Dana, Coast football official—"The Notre Dame line outplayed U.S.C. all the way. Carideo is a great field general. He seemed to call the right plays all the time."

Slip Madigan, St. Mary's College Coach—"Carideo is a wonder. He read the minds of the Trojan players and then did the opposite. The Trojans finally ran up against a real offense and a great line. The result speaks for itself."

A. J. Stursenegger, assistant coach at U.C.L.A.—"Speed—there is the answer."

Buck Bailey, assistant coach at Washington State—"Great team, that South Bend outfit. Always on the alert. They looked good at all times."

Babe Hollingbery—"Fine football team. One of the smartest I have ever seen."

Besides the coaches the visiting newspaper men were all high in their praise for the Irish. And in closing your correspondent will concur with them even if it did cost me some money.

O'CONNOR HERO OF GRID CLASH

Notre Dame Crushes Trojans by 27-to-0 Score

jans' play in this period was the punting of Shaver, who had entered the game with Mohler after the second Notre Dame touchdown. Shaver unloaded two beautiful kicks of forty-five and forty-seven yards, respectively.

The Trojans were just as helpless against Notre Dame's brilliant attack in the third period, and soon after play opened Marchmont Schwartz broke off tackle to race fifty yards to the Southern California 12-yard line. He was pulled down from behind by Apsit.

O'CONNOR SCORES

A Trojan offside and a short running pass from Schwartz to O'Connor brought the third touchdown, and Carideo kicked the goal to make the count, 20 to 0.

The Trojans could get away with nothing and Conley intercepted a pass after the Trojans had advanced to the Irish 35-yard line following Pinckert's 30-yard runback of the kick-off.

Conley gained 30 yards on the interception, and from the middle of the field Notre Dame worked the leather to the Trojan 20-yard line, where Carideo and O'Brien came together instead of spreading on a pass and it was knocked down.

Carideo then gave one of his exhibitions of kicking on a dime. He toed the ball out of bounds on the Trojan 5-yard line.

In the fourth period, even though Rockne rushed subs by the truckload, the Irish kept hammering away in Southern California territory, and finally a touchdown developed when Lukats cut back over tackle and raced 14 yards to a touchdown.

The irrepressible Mr. Carideo kicked the customary goal and the score was 27 to 0.

You can go right down the line, starting with the names of Bucky O'Connor, Marchmont Schwartz, Frank Carideo, Brill and call the roll of the entire Notre Dame playing personnel if you want the stars of the game.

Every man did his bit perfectly—Yarr, center; Metzger, guard, and what a man; Kassis, guard; Kurth and Culver, tackles; O'Brien, Conley, Kosky, ends, and all the subs.

They played a perfect game. It is no disgrace to be beaten by such a team.

IRISH FORWARD WALL PRAISED

ered before it got under way. I think that Musick, the fullback, was the best ground gainer the Trojans had, and when a line plunger gains more ground than any other player, it is a sure sign that the running attack was well bottled.

BACKS FASTER

The Notre Dame backs were faster, and apparently smarter than the Trojans, and were much more alert. The number of intercepted passes indicates the manner in which the Irish backs were following the ball. Rockne had the Trojan attack diagnosed perfectly, and each back carried out the prearranged defensive plans to perfection. The pass receivers were well covered, and the backs played smart, alert defensive fotball.

Carideo called a perfect game. He didn't make a single mistake that I saw at any time. He carried the attack along without a flaw, and made the most of every scoring opportunity.

"Bucky" O'Connor filled in very well at fullback. Being used to the right halfback position, his work naturally wasn't as smooth in his new position as Mullins or Hanley would have been, but he played a great game all around.

I thought that Bob Hall was the only Trojan linesman who played up to his best form. He was injured early, and was out quite a bit of the game, but he did better than anyone else. Perhaps the Trojan line was not up to its best form, but it was so completely outplayed that it looked bad, anyway, in comparison with Notre Dame's forwards.

Duffield's quick recovery, and kick, of a bad pass from center was a fine piece of football. It looked to me as though a quick kick had been called for, however, and he merely carried the play through.

CENTER NERVOUS

Williamson appeared to be very nervous, and unsteady. He passed the ball back very fast, and, I thought, it was sometimes almost too hard to handle. Musick's fumble in the first quarter was a break for the Irish, and Carideo was quick to take advantage of it, and turn the miscue into a touchdown.

The men from the short side of the Notre Dame line, on offense, had considerable to do with the success of the Irish backs. They crossed the line of scrimmage very fast, and cut down the secondary defense.

In all, Notre Dame won because of superior ability in three fundamentals:

(1) Better line play.
(2) Faster, and more alert backs.
(3) Exceptionally good blocking by the interference runners.

Lightweights Mix at Legion

Lou Paluso, Salt Lake City veteran, and Johnny Lamar, local Mexican, headline the Hollywood Legion's fistic program Friday night. These two lightweights will trade their best wallops and the winner will get a bout with Tod Morgan here in the near future. Lamar, a boy who performed in the old four-round days, is one of the most pleasing fighters in the local ring circles. He never backs up and is always colorful, Tom Gallery, Legion matchmaker asserts.

Paluso, a veteran, should provide a nice test for the Mexican. Ernie Hood and Leonard Rahming clash in the semi-wind-up over the six-round route.

A six-round special and two fours complete the program.

play being the major advance of the day as far as S.C.'s ground attack was concerned.

Naturally, with their running attack all foozled up the Trojans got nowhere with their passes. Those thrown by Orv Mohler were tossed either behind the S.C. receivers or straight into the arms of some Notre Dame back.

It has been said that you can't make mistakes against Notre Dame and win. This was never more vividly demonstrated than yesterday. When that low pass from center was fumbled by Musick on S.C.'s 19-yard line, after the Trojans had held the Irish for downs, Southern California was in the hole and there they stayed all day long. It is doubtful if a Trojan team ever spent so much of an afternoon deep in it's own territory.

Mistakes or no mistakes, and nobody will deny that the Trojans made them, Notre Dame was head and shoulders above Southern California in all departments of play.

The speed of Rockne's backs was amazing. This important asset, when added to Notre Dame's superior work in the line, spelled defeat in large letters for the sons of Troy. Of course, it was the Irish passing attack that paralyzed Zones's boys, but what made this aerial outburst work so beautifully was the continued threat which lay in Rockne's running plays.

The Trojans are capable of better ball than they played yesterday, but this does not detract from Notre Dame's brilliant victory. At the fag end of a long season the fact stands out that the Irish had enough (and plenty more) left to crush the Trojans and run Notre Dame's string of consecutive triumphs to nineteen in two seasons. There is nothing to be said in the face of that other than to give Rockne's players credit for their stupendous accomplishments.

Loss of Wilcox at left end hurt Southern California, for O'Connor and Schwartz did most of their ground gaining in this direction.

Speaking of these two chaps there are no more deserving heroes among Notre Dame's all-star aggregation than O'Connor and Schwartz. Shifted from halfback to fullback at the Tucson workouts, O'Connor played with all the dash, speed and confidence of a seasoned fullback.

One conclusion stands out in bold type. If the Trojans are professionals then the Irish are superprofessionals. And the difference in the play of the two teams was greater than that.

I did not see, before the game, how Bert Metzger could stand up under Southern California's attack. Right now I want to apologize to Bertie. He is plain dynamite and entitled to every cheer he gets. His playing yesterday was one of the real highlights of the game and it is unlikely that Rockne would trade him for all the 200-pound guards in the country.

Carideo ran Notre Dame's attack perfectly. Of course, it is fairly easy to engineer your team smartly when everything works as it did yesterday, but Carideo must be given his just due for the major part he played in Notre Dame's triumph.

LINE DECIDES ISSUE

I said yesterday that line play would decide the game. It did. I also said "if the various cogs in the Trojan machine are properly tuned and oiled there is no reason to believe that three or more touchdowns should not be scored." That was okeh also, only I made a slight mistake by naming the Trojans rather than Notre Dame. My only consolation, and gosh knows we experts need it now, is that Rockne, in saying his team wouldn't get licked by four touchdowns, is a bad picker also. But, of course, nobody believes Rockne. And if anybody ever placed any stock in what I've had to say about football, which is rather unlikely, they'll know better in the future. You shouldn't believe what you read in the papers, don't you know.

There isn't much more to say. The Trojans didn't even have any need of Aimee to convert for them.

The hardest guy to keep down from now on will be Hap O'Connor. It's a cinch Hap will bob up claiming Bucky, the lad who galloped 80 yards to the touchdown, is his son or brother. It may have been Hap in disguise, for all I know, for the gentleman was down the field so suddenly that nobody got a good look at him.

Indians Scalp Tulsa Eleven

TULSA (Okla.) Dec. 6. (AP)—The heretofore unconquered University of Tulsa eleven was trampled here today by a fighting band of red-skinned warriors from Haskell Indian Institute of Lawrence, Kan., who won the prized scalp by a decisive 34-to-7 victory.

Led by Louis (Little Rabbit) Weller, who reeled off many a sensational dash, the Haskell tribe counted touchdowns in rapid-fire order after the initial period. The onslaught was a terrific one, far too much for the touted Tulsans.

On one occasion an amazed Tulsa team saw Buster Charles, running mate of Weller, dart 92 yards down the field for a touchdown after receiving a kick-off.

The Hurricane's lone tally came early in the final period after a fumble by Weller that was recovered by Beattie on his 27-yard line. The diminutive Keeling skirted right end for 23 yards and Dubie hurled a 30-yard pass to Pilkington on the Indians' 13-yard line. Pilkington stepped the remaining distance to the goal.

BY ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (AP)—The all-America football team for 1930, as chosen by the newspaper experts balloting in the sixth annual Associated Press consensus, comes as close to being the "perfect eleven" as any in recent years. It has everything the modern gridiron game needs.

Although many a close contest developed before the final results were posted, outstanding performers in nearly every position dominated the votes cast by 213 sports editors and writers, representing every gridiron sector of the United States.

GARRETT ARBELBIDE

The poll was by far the most comprehensive conducted so far by the Associated Press to determine popular opinion as to the college stars, and was conspicuous for the recognition accorded to the performers of the Middle West and Far West.

The Middle West, featuring the work of Notre Dame and Northwestern, carried off six of the eleven places on the first team. The Far West gained two, the East two and the South one.

MIDWEST LEADS

On the entire squad of thirty-three players, comprising three complete teams and assuring plenty of able replacements for the mythical outfit, the Middle West captured eleven positions, the Far West nine, the East eight, the South four and Texas one.

Altogether eighteen colleges are represented on the squad, Notre Dame heading the list with five, including three places on the first team and two on the second eleven.

Southern California places four, including one on the first team, Northwestern and Washington State each three, Alabama, Army, St. Mary's of California and Fordham each two.

Notre Dame's great campaign, leading up to its climax game in the Far West with Southern California, was reflected in the tremendous popular vote cast for the Roughriders coached by Knute Rockne. Frank Carideo, Bert Metzger and Marchmont Schwartz were choices for the first team, Capt. Tom Conley and Joe Savoldi for the second team.

Carideo, all-American quarterback for the second straight year, polled the highest vote in the six-year history of the Associated Press consensus and was the nearest to a unanimous choice of any player in the country.

The remarkable field general of the Roughriders received 388 out of a possible 426 votes figured on the basis of two votes for every first team nomination and one vote for a second-team selection.

Exactly 194 of the 213 experts named Carideo to do the masterminding for the all-American team. Twenty others made him second choice. His only rival was Bobby Dodd of Tennessee, and even so fine an all-around quarterback as Dodd was swamped in the landslide for Carideo.

The supporting backfield cast for Carideo consists of Marchmont Schwartz of Notre Dame and Erny Pinckert of Southern California as halfbacks and Len Macaluso of Colgate at fullback. This combination possesses superlative all-around ability. All four can block, tackle and run with the best.

Carideo's kicking has decided many of Notre Dame's games. Schwartz is a fine passer as well as the flashiest climax runner on major college gridirons. Macaluso's rangy, powerful build makes him an ideal line plunger as well as a great defensive back.

The forwards, flanked by two great ends in Wesley Fesler of Ohio State and Frank Baker of Northwestern, have all the qualifications for offensive mobility and defensive power. From end to end the line averages 191 pounds, dominated by the 215-pound Fred Sington of Alabama and the 235-pound Glenn Edwards of Washington State at the tackle positions.

Fesler can kick, pass and run with the ball, if necessary, in addition to sharing the job of catching aerials with Baker. Edwards is a stonewall on defense, remarkably fast for his size. Sington is the greatest tackle the South has produced in years, fast and a terror at blocking punts. Most of Alabama's power plays this season were generated through his side of the line.

The center trio leaves little to be desired. Bert Metzger of Notre Dame is the smallest all-America guard in history, scaling a bare 154 pounds, but he is exceptionally powerful, agile and fast. He shines on offense, doing a good share of the blocking after breaking through opposing forwards.

"Red" Woodworth of Northwestern combines color and spectacular ability in the other guard position. Sans headguard and socks, the redhead is conspicuous in every melee.

With Big Ben Ticknor of Harvard at center, the middle of the all-America line has extraordinary range. Ticknor, roving behind a six-man line on defense, has a gift for breaking up passes and being in the right spot. He made life miserable for Yale's runners two years in a row. He has remarkable endurance.

Sington led all the tackles with 360 votes, but Edwards barely beat out Van Bibber, 176 to 161. Similarly, in the voting for guards, Metzger led all contenders with 239 votes, but Woodworth had a scant margin over John Baker of Southern California, 164 to 158. Until Ticknor and Macaluso put on strong finishes in the balloting, the East's chances of having any representatives whatever on the first team appeared slim. The Harvard center finally won from Mel Hein of Washington State by the decisive margin of 217 to 137. Macaluso, however, defeated Savoldi by the slim margin of 118 to 103, with Elmer Schwartz of Washington State a close third at 95.

The sympathetic vote for "Hard-luck Hank" Bruder, Northwestern captain, almost installed him on the first team in place of Schwartz. The latter emerged the winner in this contest, 116 to 110, to sustain the judgment of more hard-headed experts.

BOOTH WINS

Albie Booth of Yale presented a problem to the critics. He received substantial votes for quarterback as well as halfback. The preference for placing him in the latter role resulted in his total of ninety-seven votes and a margin of six over John Suther of Alabama in the contest for a place on the second team.

Suther's third team running-mate turned up in Fred Stennett of St. Mary's, a triple-threat star, who pulled seventy votes. Here again, the count was close.

Votes for other backfield aces included Kitzmiller of Oregon, sixty-five; Marty Brill of Notre Dame, sixty-one; Louis Weller of Haskell, fifty-eight; Orville Mohler of Southern California, fifty; Tuffy Ellingsen of Washington State, thirty-four; Cy Leland of Texas Christian, thirty-two; Frank Christensen of Utah, thirty.

All told, the Notre Dame backfield of Carideo, Schwartz, Savoldi and Brill received a staggering total of votes in the nation-wide indorsement of Rockne's brilliant system. They aggregated 668, an average of 167 each.

Three of Southern California's star carriers, Pinckert, Duffield and Mohler, also received wide support while votes were cast for all four stars of Washington State's backfield—Schwartz, Ellingsen, Lainhart and Tonkin.

Players receiving honorable mention were as follows:

RABBIT PUNCHES

NEW YEAR'S NEXT

WHEW! What a thriller! What a spectacle!

You can't beat these Notre Dame-Southern California games for class. And spell it with a capital C.

But now that it's all over we can scan the distant horizon and focus our lamps on the New Year's Day tussle between Washington State and Alabama.

Both are undefeated teams with nary a tie to mar even so slightly the championship escutcheons gained in their respective sections.

Both came through a hard nine-game schedule, Alabama rolling up 247 points to opponents' 13 while Washington State accumulated 218 to its rivals' 32.

Tennessee and Vanderbilt got across the Alabama line for a touchdown apiece while Southern California, Idaho and Oregon State did likewise to Washington State.

The only other points gained against Washington State were made in the opening game of the season when the Cougars overwhelmed the College of Idaho, 47 to 12, and these digits were manufactured at the expense of the subs.

The season's record shows that both teams have a hard running attack which they mix well with passes, and that they were the leading defensive outfits of their conferences.

That this game will add thrills to gridiron history goes without saying. It is Washington State's first appearance here in a New Year's Day game since 1916 when the Cougars defeated Brown University, 14 to 0, in the first of the current holiday classics. On the other hand it will be Alabama's third visit, the southerners having defeated the University of Washington, 20 to 19 in that super thriller of 1926 and tying Stanford 7 to 7 in 1927.

THE ALABAMA FLAT FEET

SEVERAL of those old-time Washington State stars are local or near-by residents of this city.

Ray Loomis, star end of the team that beat Brown, is a Glendale citizen with eastern book publishing connections. Ray was the local representative for Washington State while the Cougars were in the process of being invited by Pasadena to represent the West on New Year's Day.

Bull Durham, quarterback on the 1915 team, is a lieutenant-commander in the Navy and stationed at San Pedro. Walt Herreid, guard, is coach at San Diego State College.

Mr. Loomis has promised to supply information on others of that old Cougar team, but so far has not come forward with the data.

In the absence of other material on the Cougars of old I have some dope on the flat-footed Alabamans.

It seems there are several of these gentlemen on the team, and ye informant points out such infirmities are cause for rejection in the Army but not on Wallace Wade's football team. Here's the dope:

"Johnny Cain, Monk Campbell, John Henry Suther and Ralph McWright all run on their heels. But every one of them is a speedster and has demonstrated his ball-carrying ability to the rueful satisfaction of Vanderbilt, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee and other southern opponents.

"John Henry Suther, the Flying Dutchman, is one of the outstanding halfbacks of the year. He has flashed in every game this season and has shown his heels to such fleet backs as Shipwreck Kelly, Red Bethea and Austin Downs, all of whom are renowned for their speed afoot.

"Johnny Cain, the sophomore sensation, pounds through the line or around the flanks with equal ease. Cain is not so elusive as Suther, but he runs with more power. When tackled, he digs in and drives for some kind of gain. Only once this year has he been thrown for a loss, by Georgia.

"The gait of Monk Campbell can best be likened to that of a dray horse, but conference football players will vouch for his speed and deceptiveness. Ralph McWright, the fourth member of this archless quartet, is the blocking back, but he has showed his fleetness on several occasions in intercepting passes or leading interference.

"Alabama's backfield may be flat-footed, but a Southern Conference title is evidence that, like the old gray mare, they get there just the same."

APSIT'S NOMINATION SECONDED

THE following screed about Marger Apsit, the Trojans' great inside halfback, is from Mr. Floyd Healey, giant of The Times forces in San Francisco. It heartily seconds what Mr. Healey considers the belated nomination of Apsit for the all-American, as follows:

"Dear Brother Lowry: I have read with great interest the nomination of Marger Apsit, Trojan inside half, to Mr. William Mellors Henry's all-America. I have great faith in Mr William Mellors Henry's ability to judge with on the turgid terrain of touchdowns. I think Mr. William Mellors Henry is eminently correct. In fact, I can prove it.

"If you'll look back in your files carefully enough, you'll find where your humble correspondent predicted that same thing some months before Brother Apsit meant anything more on the Trojan campus than a name on the matriculation ante.

"Your humble correspondent discovered Brother Apsit assiduously smashing interference among a lot of iron pots in his home town in Illinois. Your humble correspondent added that to the fact Brother Apsit learned his football in your humble correspondent's high school and that alone makes any pigskin puddler a prospective all-American.

"Please tell Brother William Mellors Henry the light sometimes comes late to the experts, but if they're any good, it comes, brother, it comes. I am glad to welcome Mr. William Mellors Henry to the fold and have great confidence in his future. He is a sterling young man with great capabilities. If he could only go back to his fortieth birthday or thereabouts and start over again I could make a really good picker out of him.

"Yours in modesty, as ever.

"FLOYD J. HEALEY."

RACING DRIVERS TANGLE TODAY

100-Lap Race Scheduled for Ascot Legion Track

Speed—the like of which has never been seen at the track since it was built seven years ago—is expected to be offered fans this afternoon in wholesale quantities when Ralph De Palma, Ernie Triplett, Francis Quinn, Bill Cummings, and the rest of the top-notchers of the auto-racing game drive in a 100-lap race at the Legion Ascot Speedway.

Local followers of the sport were treated to a wild afternoon of thrills and spills two weeks ago but, according to the critics, the competition on that occasion was nothing to compare with what should be in store when the pilots line up today.

For one thing, De Palma, who was expected to star, did not have his car in shape for that last race. The Italian had arrived in town only a few days previously and was forced to revamp his motor in a hurry to conform with local regulations. Consequently he was able to come home only fifth in the century grind. This afternoon the gray-haired veteran intends to show his followers just what he can do with his Miller special in the proper shape. The mount was given a thorough rejuvenating during the past week and has proved fast in trial spins.

Some of the other invaders from the East, including Herman Schurch, Billy Winn and Bill Cummings, were also competing at Ascot for the first time this season when they drove two weeks ago and did not have an opportunity to show at their best. Schurch, the Hollywood youngster, and Winn, a veteran campaigner of eastern tracks, are teamed up in a formidable combine that should cause the rest of the field some trouble when they get going. Schurch owns the Clements Special No. 49 that Winn manipulates, having purchased the mount in Indianapolis this year.

Ernie Triplett and Francis Quinn, who hooked up in a sizzling duel for first place in the last 100-lap affair, are expected to be prepared to finish their "grudge" this afternoon. Railbirds claim that there is little difference in the speed of Billy Arnold's No. 40, which Triplett drives, and the No. 3 Gabbart Special which took Quinn to the Pacific Southwest championship.

Triplett got the better of Quinn the last time out and the latter is not backward about admitting that he intends proving his superiority on this occasion.

At least forty pilots will be enrolled for today's fireworks and the dopesters have been having a task trying to pick the favorites. However, one of those who will attract plenty of attention will be Bill Cummings, the lanky Philadelphian who broke into the game here by winning the Italian Helmet Dash two weeks ago. Drivers rarely finish in the money in their first appearances at the tricky Ascot course, but Cummings proved an exception by stepping out in his No. 19 Frontenac and capturing the fastest race on schedule.

The program will start at 2:30 with the qualifying listed to begin at 12 o'clock sharp.

ROCKNE FOOLS SCRIBES

for Notre Dame and what defeated Southern California, Rockne unhesitantly said, "Superb blocking and interference.

AN OFF-DAY

"Southern California seemed dead on its feet," said Rockne, "but this can be expected at some stage of the season. Notre Dame lacked dash against Northwestern and Army, but recovered it against Southern California. I don't believe that Southern California had the same spark that carried them to hurricane victories over Stanford and California."

"Psychology certainly played a part in the victory," said K. Neel. "Grant Rice was in Chicago a few weeks ago and showed me a card from Dick Hyland, which stated that Southern California would trim the Irish by four touchdowns. That was good for the boys and gave rise to newspaper men quoting me that Southern California would win by four touchdowns."

Rockne also admitted that Tom Lieb, Jimmy Phelan and other coaches helped the psychology angle along by picking the Trojans to win.

Notre Dame's great coach, who saw his undefeated 1930 eleven hang up its tenth straight victory, gives all the credit to his boys.

"You've got to hand it to Carideo," said Rockne, "he felt out the Trojans and noted every weakness. When he found that he couldn't go around Arbelbide's end and noted that Wilcox and Sparling were missing from the other end, he went after Joslin. Carideo also noted that the Trojans were not covering deep flat territory on first down and immediately took advantage of that information to pass."

GREAT ON OFFENSE

When asked to make a comparison between the 1930 Irish machine and the great team of 1924, Knute was adverse to do so.

"I always think of that light 1924 team as a thing of beauty, rhythm and perfection of motion," said Rockne, "but I do believe that the 1930 team is as great if not the greatest offensive team of them all."

When asked what difference Joe Savoldi would have made in the line-up, Rockne stated that he had averaged 11 yards a play until he left school, but that he did not like to take a thing away from O'Connor, who played a great game.

Rockne admitted that Jim Musick's fumble on the 19-yard line, which was recovered by Culver, Irish tackle, was the turning point of the game.

"A break like that," pointed out Knute, "gives the team getting the break a great incentive, peps them up in spirit and adds to their morale. The opposing team feels an equal drop in morale."

"Culver," continued Rockne, "played a great game. He is the most improved man on the squad over a year ago. He is smarter and better all around."

SECRET OF BLOCKING

"The secret of Notre Dame's blocking and tackling," said Rockne in answer to that question, "lies all with the boy who does the tackling and the blocking. We stress such fundamentals at Notre Dame and the boys try to outdo each other. Speed in getting the interference in front of the ball carrier is also stressed at Notre Dame. That is the secret of Notre Dame's interference. I have always told my guards that 'no guard ever ran too fast.' We simply practice in getting the boys out in front of the ball packer, who is a secondary consideration."

"Some coaches," explained Rockne, "believe in power, Notre Dame believes in speed. Which is right, I don't know. Next year I may be beaten by a team featuring power."

Rockne picked Garrett Arbelbide, Trojan end, and Erny Pinckert, all-American halfback, as Southern California's best players. He was hesitant about naming Notre Dame's best, but selected little Bertie Metzger, 133-pound chunk of dynamite, as the best lineman, and Carideo and Brill as the best in the backfield.

"O'Connor's 80-yard run to a touchdown was the best play of the day," said Rockne and explained the details. Capt. Conley took Hall, the Trojan tackle, while Metzger took Joslin. O'Brien and Culver in addition to Yarr went down and picked off men, O'Brien being the final interferer as O'Connor kept on to a touchdown.

Rockne pointed out that both O'Connor and O'Brien had taken a fling at track, the former Los Angeles high school star being a fine performer on the cinders, while O'Connor took track less seriously.

MOHLER PRAISED

"Mohler," said Rockne, "is going to be a wonder. He needs poise and experience, but he had me worried every minute he was in the game for fear he would break away."

Knute, a sportsman and gentleman himself, paid Howard Jones a tribute.

"He is one of the finest sportsmen and coaches I know," said Rockne.

Rockne is going to New York where he will coach a team of ex-Notre Dame stars on Jimmy Walker's charity program. He will then return to Los Angeles for a game on December 27, between a team of former Irish stars and a team of Pacific Coast and southern stars mentored by Jimmy Phelan, Washington coach and former Notre Dame quarterback.

"Since I couldn't bring him this time," said Knute, "I will have Savoldi with me for the charity game as well as all the seniors on the 1930 Notre Dame team, including Carideo, Brill, Conley, O'Brien, Metzger, Kasais and Culver."

In conclusion, Knute said of Los Angeles, "I like to play here. I like your enthusiasm and your fairness."

CAL-CHRISTIAN DRUBS VALENCIA, 43 TO 26

In their second practice tilt of the season, the California Christian College basketball quintet trounced the Valencia College five by a score of 43 to 26, on the Panthers' floor last night. Thompson, with 19 points, was high-point man on Coach Ralph Welch's winning combination.

TURF WINNER

Edgar Wallace, famous English author and playwright, made 2500 pounds at the three Newmarket race track meetings this year.

"I say, Arblemusic, how do you keep from bashing your head in those center rushes?" "Nothing simpler, Pinkerfield, I always wear one of Logan's Knapp-Felt hats under my helmet."

There's an idea in that dialogue for you, Mister Man. All American success comes from Knapp-Felted heads. Your hat is on the shelf now. Come and get it.

Notre Dame Great, but Troy Far Below Form

Gamblers' Line Play Ruined Trojans' Chances

Football coach, Washington State College, Pacific Coast Conference champions.

"Dead on their feet."

That frequently used expression, I believe, sums up Southern California's performance yesterday against Notre Dame. DARB HOLLINGBERY

I do not mean to take away any glory from Notre Dame. They were, in fact, one of the most effective elevens I ever saw, but I'm certain that on any other day the Trojans would have made matters much more interesting.

All day long Southern California's tackles were fading back or being pushed back, and this, combined with Notre Dame's sweeping interference, can be blamed as the main cause of defeat.

When the tackles went backward and left all the work for the ends, and Notre Dame's interference, usually three or four men, cut into the end, took him completely out of the picture and allowed the ball carrier to make yards consistently.

DIDN'T RUSH PASSER

Furthermore, the Trojans weren't rushing the passer on Notre Dame's aerial ventures. The man throwing the ball was given ample time to complete a good toss. As in other instances the linesmen, instead of charging forward, allowed themselves to be shoved backward. Most of the fans probably noticed that nearly every Trojan attempt to complete a forward pass was hurried, because Notre Dame's forward wall was crashing forward, trying to tackle the man with the ball. This ruined Southern California's hopes for victory in the air.

Notre Dame's line was solid, far too powerful yesterday for the local competition.

Those Notre Dame passes, most of which were completed, soared above the heads of the secondary defense, whose attempts to knock them down seemed feeble.

The all-around generalship of Frank Carideo probably is responsible for this. When Southern California's secondary played close to the line, Carideo called passing plays and with the secondary back he shot his ball-packers through the line. He was the outstanding man on the field, to my way of thinking. He fulfilled his quarterback duties in a way they should be filled.

I've seen teams against the Trojans several times but never have I seen them so much in apparent ease as they were yesterday. When Notre Dame's first offensive drive opened, the Trojans appeared to be dazed from the way Carideo and his mates clicked.

Erny Pinckert was one man on whom I had my eyes all day. He wasn't up to par. He couldn't have been with his injured hip in the condition it was.

HALL BEST TROJAN

But of all the Trojans probably was Hall, the tackle. He managed to check a few Notre Dame drives but paid the penalty when he was ...

It seemed to me that no matter who was tackled or where, little Bert Metzger, guard, and Al Culver, ... were right in the pile. Culver particularly was brilliant and deserved a cheer for his great performance.

Johnny O'Brien, your local prophet wasn't fooled so easily by the Trojan drive. I saw him slip through the interference two or three times to bring down the man with the ball.

The best running play, of course, was O'Connor's 80-yard run through the line. His team mates carried him 20 yards past the line of scrimmage and from that point he added the balance of the distance by himself. A change of pace and cutback helped him elude the two men in addition to tackle him.

The final result was a disappointment to me. I had hoped to be treated for the undisputed national championship on New Year's Day when my Washington State Cougars, a fine team, meets Alabama at Pasadena. A Trojan victory over Notre Dame would have set at rest all doubts as to national supremacy.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD MADE AT ELSINORE

LAKE ELSINORE, Dec. 6.—One new world's record was established here today by C. J. Ruhland, driving Oshin in the opening heats of the national midwinter speedboat regatta. Ruhland's mark was 43.263 miles per hour for ten miles in an event for Class P motors. Miss Lorette Turnbull, formerly a Monrovia high school girl, now a Citrus Junior co-ed, driving Sunkist Kid, won the national gold cup offered by the College Humor Magazine from a field of high school and junior college pilots.

T. G. Ferguson, premier outboard driver of the country, took top honors in the hard fight for the Commodore Macrae trophy for the second year in succession.

Races will be continued all day today.

GRID GOSSIP

BY BRAVEN DYER

NOW that the Trojans have concluded their 1930 gridiron schedule it might be interesting to look into the future and see what the 1931 program will offer. What follows is entirely unofficial, but Troy's games for next year will be made known within the next few days inasmuch as the Pacific Coast Conference meeting begins tomorrow at the Biltmore.

ERNY PINCKERT

JOHN BAKER.

There was little to satisfy in this year's schedule and present plans call for a much stiffer program. However, the difficulties and pitfalls connected with schedule making are many and whether the Trojans can get just what they want in the way of a bang-up program remains to be seen.

Right now six games are down in black and white with dates affixed. Four more are to be added, with the possibility of the schedule calling for eleven games.

Here's the way the tentative, unofficial schedule looks:

September 26—U.C.L.A. or St. Mary's (maybe.)
October 3—Oregon State at Coliseum.
October 10—Washington State at Coliseum.
October 17—Open to all guessers.
October 24 — California at Berkeley.
October 31 — Oregon "U." (maybe.)
November 7—Stanford at Coliseum.
November 14—Open for light entertainment.
November 21—Notre Dame at South Bend.
November 28—I'm in the dark here.
December 5—Washington at Coliseum.
December 12 — Intersectional game, maybe Georgia.

All of which is a pretty good start in the right direction. U.C.L.A. doesn't want the opening date, but may have to take it or leave it as Howard Jones says he won't put 'em in between California and Stanford, nor between Stanford and Notre Dame.

St. Mary's may get the opening date if the Bruins pass it up, and there is also talk of inviting a Texas team to start off the season. Washington State may be shifted down to November 28, but this is unlikely. The Cougars will make a corking early season foe.

October 17 may go to a Big Ten team if said team can be lured to Los Angeles. Oregon will get the October 31 date provided authorities at Eugene agree to take on a fairly tough foe the Saturday before.

The Trojans were considering giving Leo Calland and Idaho a date until the Vandals made a very sour showing against U.C.L.A. Leo says he is getting some fine help from his frosh and will have a good team next year, so he may land the November 14 date. This would give the Trojans eight conference games.

Washington plays down here again to make the four-way schedule work out properly in the years to come. Beginning in 1932 the teams alternate and there will be no more mix-ups.

Intersectionally speaking, Georgia would make a fine bet. The Southerners had practically a sophomore team this year and loon, as one of the most powerful elevens below the Mason-Dixon line next season. Georgia defeated Yale and New York University this year, but bowed to Tulane and Alabama.

A gentleman very close to the powers that be at U.C.L.A. tells me the real reason why the Bruins won't take the opening date with the Trojans. "U.C.L.A. plays Northwestern in the Midwest October 17, and wants to go back there with a clean slate, which won't be the case if Spaulding takes the opening date with Jones." That's his story and it sounds very plausible.

Ted Beckett, the belligerent Bear who plays guard for California, can thank Howard Jones for his position on the North American Newspaper Alliance all-American. After Jones had made his recommendations the first team was wired back to him for approval. Beckett wasn't on it. Jones got kinda het up and fired back a hot telegram, which resulted in Beckett being picked on the first eleven. And Jones did this even though he doesn't think very highly of Beckett's bullying tactics on the field.

With the arrival last week of Buck Bailey, line coach at Washington State, local golfers who pride themselves on ability to mock a golf ball are warned to hibernate for the winter. Mistah Bailey is the greatest driver in all the great Northwest. He belts the ball so vigorously that frequently it is far out of sight when it lands. Bailey is open to engagements against any of the local pill pulverizers.

The old order changeth. It was necessary to be a halfback or end to gain recognition in the old days. But lo and behold, Johnny Baker and Erny Pinckert are the outstanding all-Americans for Southern California. You never hear Baker's name over the radio except when he kicks off and he rarely appears in the play-by-play. Pinckert is not primarily a ball-carrying back. The irony of it is that Bert Heiser was just as good as Baker and that Lloyd Thomas did everything that Pinckert does. Erny has color, however, where Lloyd was so quiet he made the sphinx sound like Bob Shuler on one of his big nights over the radio.

POOR ROCKNE HAS HARD TIME

another Irishman by the name of Jaskwhich.

As the Notre Dame eleven romped on to the field to start the game with ex-Halfback O'Connor filling the boots of Moon Mullins, the crowd wondered how the substitute was going to perform. O'Connor was probably wondering himself and galloped nervously around trying to calm himself. There was an air of uncertainty.

But not so with Mr. Carideo. He walked over to the nervous substitute, put his arm around him, slapped him on the back and quite obviously wasn't worried in the least. After the kick-off, the Notre Dame boys went into their huddle for the first play and as they walked into position before the shift, Carideo turned around and checked the new fullback to be sure that he knew his function on the play and then called the shift with all the assurance he ever could have shown with Savoldi, Mullins or anybody else playing the position.

BRILL LOOKS GOOD

There isn't time or space to go into the play of the individuals on the Notre Dame squad in detail. Sufficient to say that there never was a finer looking interfering or defensive halfback stepped on to any field than Brill. There surely have been few, if any, stronger or more elusive runners or more accurate passers than Marchy Schwartz.

And the Notre Dame line functioned with an intelligence and power that was beyond criticism. Outstanding, of course, was Feewee Metzger, the welterweight guard, the equal of whose play hasn't been seen in the Coliseum to my recollection. The first play the Trojans shot at him rolled over his 155 pounds for 6 or 7 yards and from that time on the boys had a tough time making an inch over him or anywhere near him.

His interference running was magnificent and he was down under punts so fast that it looked very much as though he might have grabbed hold of the ball and taken a free ride down there with it. He was so slippery at getting through the line on end runs that on many occasions he nailed runners from behind after the ends and tackle had slowed up the interference just a little. A mighty atom—Mr. Metzger.

NEW PLAYS

And, now that we've said so much about the players, it's time to put in a good word for the coach. Baldheaded Knute had provided his team with a flock of plays that nobody had seen or heard of previously. One by one Mr. Carideo plucked them from the pigeon-holes where they had been nursed throughout a lengthy season and sprung them on the unsuspecting Trojans. No team ever had a finer variety of plays than Notre Dame and the manner in which they were picked over and then flung at the battling but bewildered local hopes was a masterpiece. Somebody is going to do a lot of rattling around loose trying to fill Mr. Carideo's shoes next year.

Yes sir. It's a tough life that Mr. Rockne leads. Just imagine having a great unbeaten national championship team like Knute had last year up and graduate and then have two of your star backs like Savoldi and Mullins go on the blink and be left flat with a bunch of ham football players like Rockne had yesterday. It's a shame, I tell you, it's a shame.

FRANK IRVING IS HONORED BY SCHOOL

Frank Irving, son of Mrs. S. G. Irving, 527 Loma Drive, was a member of Lake Forest Academy's unbeaten football team, to receive gold footballs at the school's annual football banquet held November 29 at the Drake Hotel, Chicago, according to word received from Lake Forest, Illinois.

Young Irving, at center, was a power of strength thoughout the season and helped his team-mates in victories over Concordia College, Carroll College Frosh, Crane Junior College, Campion Academy of Prairie du Chien, Wis., Elmhurst College "B" team, Mooseheart High School, and Kentucky Military Institute of Lyndon, Ky.

Irving is well known here, playing center on Clarence Ebers's Belmont High Class "B" team two years ago and varsity center last fall at Belmont under Sid Witherow.

FLY BROTHERS WILL PLAY FOR MONARCHS

The chunky Fly brothers of Winnipeg—Joe and Jim—have been signed to contracts by Manager Jim Hooker of the Hollywood Monarchs' ice hockey team and will play with the outfit for the remainder of the season, it was stated yesterday. They will cavort in the Movie City lineup tomorrow night when the team skates out against Ralph Weaver and his league-leading Maple Leafs in a scheduled Senior League battle.

Joe Fly is a goalie of no little ability while Jim is a defense. Hooker believes the pair will give the Monarchs the defensive strength which they have lacked. The team meets a tough test tomorrow night against the Leafs, who have been winning consistently and who are hugging first place, a half-game ahead of the Los Angeles Bruins.

Don George Tackles Gus Sonnenberg in Return Match for Heavyweight Mat Crow

YOUNG CHALLENGER AGAIN FACES GRAPPLING KING

Bitter Battle Expected as Former Foes Meet Second Time; "Butt" Definitely Barred This Time

BY RALPH HUSTON

Don George, the young Ann Arbor (Mich.) boy who made good in the big city, and in a large way, incidentally, makes his second bid for world's wrestling honors in the Olympic Auditorium Wednesday night when he encounters Gus Sonnenberg, king of the heavyweights, in the feature event of Lou Daro's card.

George met Sonnenberg here a short time ago, and was removed from the ring hors de combat after a head-on collision when both gladiators decided, at the same time, to try a flying tackle. Both of 'em went down, and only Sonnenberg got up. All George got for his pains was a hurried jaunt to the Georgia - street Hospital, where he spent a quiet evening.

GUS SONNENBERG

There has been much excitement about the battle. Sonnenberg's famous tackle was barred because it was said to be a "billy goat butt." So Sonnenberg, in his first match with George, stuck strictly to tackles, planking his shoulder, rather than his head, in any available vulnerable portions of Don's torso.

On agreeing to the return match, Sonnenberg charged that the officials had been so busy watching his tackles, that they had neglected to keep an eye on George, and that nefarious young man promptly took advantage of the situation by butting poor old Gus freely, and at will.

DENIES CHARGE

George indignantly denied the charge, stating that his tackles were among the purest of tackles that ever were shown inside a roped ring, and that to prove it, he would tell "Gus the Goat" with just the same variety in their return engagement.

Sonnenberg then tried to suggest a "gentleman's agreement" not to use the tackle, either in the pure, or alloyed state, but George quite wisely declined. He recollected, he said, a similar "gentleman's agreement," in a match between Sonnenberg, and young Bob (Bibber) McCoy, who, also, is something of a tackler. But Gus, George said, forgot all about that agreement, and butted or tackled young Robert so industriously that he won the match.

Wednesday's fracas promises to be even more exciting than was the first set-to between the champion and the young challenger. It is doubtful, however, whether they can provide a more exciting finish than did that head-on collision, which looked the Olympic to its very foundations.

In his last two appearances, Sonnenberg has looked more like a wrestler than he ever did before. He has been using the tackle only as a threat, and has relied upon more or less scientific grappling to down his opponents. But inasmuch as he has tried so industriously to have the tackle barred, and has failed, it is entirely probable that he will use this much-discussed hold to the best of his ability.

BUSY EVENING

The referee no doubt will be a busy, very busy individual trying to differentiate between the tackles, and butts, for a butt, in our fair state, means the loss of a fall, and there will be much shouting, and waving of fists, if either gladiator loses a fall by this sort of a disqualification.

Daro has arranged an attractive pair of preliminaries to the title fray. Henri De Glane, the popular Frenchman, and Dan Koloff, the sulky Balkan lion, will engage in the second affair of the evening. The opener offers a return start of that young veteran, Nick Lutze, in action against the always-trying Tom De Laun.

OLYMPIC BARGE IS GIVEN OVERHAULING

HERMOSA BEACH, Dec. 6.—Getting ready for 1931, the big Olympic fishing barge was towed to San Pedro recently and put into dry dock, where the big vessel was scraped clean of barnacles, repainted inside and out and generally overhauled. Capt. J. M. Andersen, skipper of the Olympic, estimates that more than 1000 pounds of barnacles was removed from the ship's bottom by harbor workers.

While the Olympic was off the job, her sister ship, the Kohala, did double duty taking care of the swarms of winter deep-sea angling. Mackerel, sand dabs, bonito and blue perch lead the catches.

MENLO JAYSEE TAKES PLAY-OFF

Bakersfield Boys, 12-0, to Fast Northern Team

STANFORD STADIUM, Dec. 6. (AP)—Weaving his way through an open field for half a dozen long runs, ranging from 15 to 50 yards, Frenchy Lacombe, elusive Menlo Junior College halfback, led his eleven to a 12-to-0 victory over Bakersfield Junior College here today.

By the victory, Menlo entered the final of the California Coast Conference football race and will meet Compton J. C. in a game next Saturday.

Lacombe scored the first Menlo touchdown in the second quarter on a 59-yard dash around right end and accounted for the second touchdown in the next period when he raced 19 yards to a score.

In between the touchdowns he reeled off numerous long gains including a 22 and a 30-yard run.

Fullback Bill Van Osdel, Bakersfield fullback, was outstanding for the losers. The visitors never seriously threatened the Menlo goal line, although recovered fumbles twice carried them within the Menlo 30-yard line.

Long Beach in 20-0 Win Over Whittier Team

Rallying in the second half, the Long Beach Poly Jackrabbits scored three touchdowns to defeat the Whittier Panthers, 20-0, in a semi-final play-off game for the Southern California C.I.F. football championship at Whittier yesterday.

Coach Orian Landreth's Poly eleven is the defending Southland champions, defeating Santa Barbara in the finals last year. Long Beach will meet Coach Lloyd Waller's Redondo Seahawks in the finals next Saturday. The game will be played in the Coliseum.

No scoring was done in the first half, the first Jackrabbits' score coming in the third period, when Barton Smith, star Long Beach end, intercepted a Whittier pass on his own 4-yard line and galloped ninety-six yards for the score. The conversion was missed.

In the fourth quarter Long Beach recovered a fumble on the Whittier 32-yard line and marched down for the score, "Red" Franklin scoring from the 24-yard line. Barton Smith converted.

Soon after, Poly took the ball from midfield straight down to the Whittier goal line with Cecil Storey going over from the 2-yard line. Smith again converted.

Don Douglas's Panthers threatened to score only once in the game and that was in the third quarter when Smith intercepted a Whittier pass after Johnny Arrambide had brought the ball into scoring position on the 9-yard stripe.

Long Beach had the edge on first downs, making twelve to the Panthers' eight.

Duke Honored by Hawaiians

Duke P. Kahanamoku, world-famous swimmer whose sprint marks stood for more than a decade, has been honored by the city of Honolulu. According to word received here by L. A. Henry of the L.A.A.C., the club the famous Duke represented in his record-breaking races, he has been appointed superintendent of the Honolulu Hale, seat of the city and county government of Honolulu. The appointment was made by Mayor-elect George Fred Wright.

The selection of Kahanamoku for the position met with immediate approval as Hawaiian officials have long felt that the Territory was indebted to the Duke as the first person to "put Hawaii on the map" as far as publicity away from the Territory was concerned.

BOXING VICTIM OF OVERDOSE

Doyle Says Too Many Poor Fighters Hurt Game

BY FRANK ROCHE

Boxing is another victim of overproduction. At any rate that's the opinion of Jack Doyle, dean of west coast promoters and one of the best-known boxing men in the world. Doyle in testifying yesterday before the State board of inquiry, headed by Allan Bixby, which is delving into the boxing situation, gave that as one of the reasons that the sport has hit bad days.

"Boxing, like oil, wheat and other things, is being overproduced. We have too many fighters, who can't fight. Too many matches. Too many managers and too many promoters," Doyle declared in an emphatic way when asked by Leon French, attorney for the board, what he thought was the matter with the game.

Doyle believes there should be a weeding-out process. He pointed out that there was a fight almost every night in the week in Southern California.

He believes that the commission and the promoters should be brought in closer contact with each other. He suggested that the promoters and the commission meet at least once every month to talk things over.

The trouble with the referee situation, according to Promotor Doyle, is that anyone can get a license. The same thing applies to managers and promoters, he stated.

"I ran bouts in the old four-round days for years and we never had a scandal," he said with a rather proud twist. "If the bout on was not going just right we tossed them out and gave the fans an extra one," he pointed out.

Doyle told the board that the gambling situation was somewhat overexaggerated in this section of the State. Personally, he said, he has never bet as much as a thin dime on a bout he had anything to do with in all the years he has been connected with the game.

Doyle believes the referee situation is pretty well straightened out. He stated that Lieut. Jack Kennedy and Abe Roth were as competent officials as he had ever seen. The promoter now selects his own referees instead of having them appointed by the commission.

The board of inquiry will hold its next session Thursday at the Alexandria Hotel. Doyle will again be one of the witnesses.

Al Espinosa, Diegel Clash in Bay City

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente professional, and Al Espinosa of Chicago swept into the finals of the national open match-play golf championship, with semifinal victories on the Lakeside links of the San Francisco Olympic Club today.

Diegel eliminated George Von Elm of Detroit 1 up, while Espinosa defeated Joe Ezar of Chicago by a margin of 3 and 2.

Diegel went into an early lead in his match with Von Elm, winning the second hole and the sixth to be 2 up at the turn. Von Elm cut the lead to 1 by taking the eleventh, but Diegel won the twelfth when Von Elm's approach to the green went into some trees. The next three holes were halved at par, and Von Elm came back to win the sixteenth and seventeenth with par 5's to tie the match.

Diegel took the eighteenth with a par 4 to Von Elm's 5, however, and took the match.

Espinosa had an easier time of it with Ezar. He won the third hole with a par 3, the eighth with a birdie 2 when Ezar's putt knocked his ball into the cup and the ninth with a par 4 to hold a lead of 3 up at the turn.

After the next three holes were halved Ezar won his only hole of the match with a par 3 on the thirteenth, but Espinosa won the fifteenth and halved the sixteenth to win the match.

Espinosa and Diegel will meet tomorrow for the championship.

WEST MARYLAND COPS

BALTIMORE, Dec. 6. (AP)—Little Western Maryland's unbeaten football team put on a fourth-period offensive today, 65 yards of which was for a touchdown, and won the State championship by defeating the University of Maryland, 7 to 0. It was Western Maryland's twenty-seventh game without a defeat.

PAULIE WALKER TOPS BOUT BILL

New York Welter Again Heads Olympic Card

Gothamite Meets Mike Payan in Feature Event

Indian Gets Chance to Make First Flight in Go

BY KAY OWE

Paulie Walker—two-fisted and even with the boards in the race for welterweight honors—comes back to the Olympic Tuesday night, making it two weeks in a row.

JACK DOYLE

The New York Italian meets Indian Mike Payan, the Yaqui-Mexican, who is known as the "Bert Colima" of San Diego, in the 10-round main event.

Payan is the biggest card to the south, occupying the same niche among the 147-pounders as Sammy Jackson does in Los Angeles and Young Corbett in the northern part of the State.

The Mexican rated only so-so as a lightweight, but has come on at the heavier weight. He is a legitimate welter.

San Diego promoters had Payan matched with Jackson for December 12, but the bout automatically came off the boards when the Negro fouled Walker in their bout last Tuesday night here.

They tell great stories of Payan's prowess in the southern neck of the State. They claim he would have whipped the highly touted Jackson.

INDIAN FINDS SELF

In the last six months Payan began to find himself. He recently went East and piled up a string of victories. He is a combination boxer and puncher.

Walker is still a bit of a question. Some thought he was ahead of Jackson and others figured he was tiring under the black boy's driving when the bout was stopped in the eighth round.

But the New York Italian showed that he was a hard-hitting welter—both hands and plenty of it. He was tiring rapidly in the Jackson affair, but the low blow delivered by Sammy early in the bout might have been the cause.

The Walker-Jackson battle was a toss-up when halted. It has been argued pro and con which would have outfinished the other. It was hard going all the way.

Walker is sure to box Young Corbett in January if he keeps from defeat between now and then. The New Yorker is built almost like Corbett from tip to toe.

Payan and Walker will share the spotlight with the eight-round semi-wind-up, which features Billy Papke, Jr., and Jimmy Hanna. Neither has been defeated in the Olympic.

Hanna has won a half-dozen or more semi-wind-ups at the Doyle club and Papke has knocked out four straight. The quartet of kayoes the son of the ex-middleweight has put away are Tony Cadena, Bud Baker, Sig Ecklund and Billy Wagner.

He will find Hanna a different class of light-heavyweight. But Papke is coming on rapidly. His father intends to challenge the field for him next year.

Papke—born on the day the King of England was crowned—is of the opinion he will wear royal robes before he has finished with the career. Two days after his son was born Papke, Sr., knocked out Jimmy Sullivan, middleweight champion of Europe. That was nineteen years ago.

HAS FIGHTING BLOOD

The boy was born with a natural fighting instinct, and he has the greatest asset of them all—a liking for the fight itself. In his last fight with Wagner the boy was in trouble for a minute, but came out of it to score a knockout. This is the real proof of a fighter.

Papke chose to fight Hanna over several other lesser lights because he wants to build himself up.

Colgate Noses Out Violets

NEW YORK, Dec. 6. (AP)—By the slim margin of an extra point after a touchdown, scored by the place-kicking toe of the all-American fullback, Leonard Macaluso, Colgate's football team nosed out a 7-6 victory over New York University in their post-season charity game today.

The New York eleven scored a touchdown in the final two minutes of play, but a placement kick for the extra point was blocked by Johnny Orsi, Colgate end, who had scored the Colgate touchdown in the opening period on a pass from Capt. Les Hart.

Twenty thousand fans, whose ticket money went to aid the unemployed, saw Colgate's powerful team wind up its season with a record of nine victories and only one defeat, a 14-7 setback by Michigan State early in the season.

BELL, GRIGRY MEET AT WILMINGTON BOWL

Joe Bell and "Red" Grigry, rugged Long Beach welterweights, meet in the eight-round main event at the Wilmington Bowl next Wednesday night.

The rival 150-pounders fought a hectic six-rounder at the harbor club two weeks ago with Grigry getting an unpopular decision.

Johnny Gonzales, clever Wilmington featherweight, faces Wendell Long, rugged Los Angeles youngster, in the six-round semi-wind-up. Other bouts carded are Thor Olsen vs. Sailor Jimmy Lucas, bantamweights, six rounds; Frankie Boldt vs. Eddie Lozzano, lightweights, six rounds; Roy White vs. Tony Cruze, junior welterweights, four rounds.

GEORGIA COPS GRID GAME

Bulldogs Held for First Half but Stage Drive in Last Section of Tilt to Win, 13-0

BY DILLON GRAHAM
Associated Press Sports Writer

ATLANTA, Dec. 6. (AP)—Buffeted around all season, the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets displayed unsuspected strength in their final game here today to hold a raging Georgia Bulldog eleven to a 13-to-0 score in their annual game on Grant Field.

Stopped for nearly half the game by a valiant Georgia Tech stand and the wet and slippery condition of the field the Bulldogs clicked effectively behind their dual aces, Austie Downes and Jack Roberts, in the closing minutes of the first half and hammered across a touchdown with Downes scoring on an end run of 10 yards.

Georgia's second touchdown came midway in the last period as Tasaboulas recovered a Tech fumble on Tech's 47-yard line and the Bulldogs began another tremendous march which ended as Downes flipped a pass over the goal line to Smith.

Late in the game, with substitutes manning most of the positions, Tech made its greatest bid of the contest as passes and off-tackle slants carried it 65 yards to the Georgia 5-yard line, but Georgia stiffened and took the ball on downs.

Tech, the under-dog in this twenty-sixth meeting of these teams since 1893, played its best defensive brand of ball of the year.

Georgia's victory today gave them possession of the Clark Howell trophy, offered by the editor of the Constitution in 1928 to the team winning two out of the next three games. Tech won in 1928, while Georgia won in 1929.

CARNEGIE TECH ON TOP

Tartans Break Jinx by Beating Washington and Jefferson, 26 to 0

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Dec. 6. (AP)—Harry McCurdy convinced the skeptics as to his quarterback abilities today by his spark-plug role in Carnegie Tech's 26-to-0 gridiron conquest of a former Tartan jinx, Washington and Jefferson.

Ever since McCurdy was withdrawn from Tech's losing game with New York University there had been much talk about a sophomore signal caller, Stuart Dueger, and Dueger started today. But McCurdy finished and furnished the fireworks, accounting for three of Tech's four touchdowns. On the second play he directed after his insertion in the second period, McCurdy shot an aerial to Halfback Kavel, who raced over for the initial counter, the play bettering forty yards. Then as Tech stampeded W. and J. in the fourth period for three more scores, McCurdy worked a pass play for better than fifty yards and counted another by running back an intercepted aerial twenty-six yards.

A sixty-yard advance, in which every Tech back did his bit, netted the touchdown which opened the productive final session. Fullback Karcis banged his way through guard for the last four yards.

Capt. Dreshar made good in his first two placement efforts but his third was blocked and the fourth one was low.

Proceeds of the game were given to a fund for unemployed.

SHEIKS GET SOCCER TEST

Hollywood, City Loop Leader, Faces Tough Battle in Game With Magyars Today

The Hollywood Sheiks, leaders in the city league soccer campaign, will be put to severe test at Loyola field today when they collide with the Magyars at 3 p.m.

This game looms as one of the best of the entire season and dopesters predict a bitter battle to the final whistle.

Today's program at Loyola is probably the best of the first-round set of games. The Vikings and Pasadena A.C.C., two more strong clubs, open the bill at 1 p.m. The opener should be another nip-and-tuck affair, like the Hollywood-Magyar game, the outcome will be always in doubt.

Another attractive double-header will be played at Tournament Park today. The Los Angeles A.C. Mercuries, now in second place, meet Bobby Cook's Scots at 3 p.m. The Sons of St. George play the Victoria eleven in the opener. Both games should be closely contested.

IRISH TURNED IN BEST GAME OF YEAR---ROCKNE

Knute K. Rockne, the magician of South Bend, was too busy accepting congratulations yesterday afternoon after the game to talk much, but he did manage to tell a flock of struggling reporters that his team had treated Los Angeles fans to the greatest ball game they had played all year.

"I can't say anything more than that," declared "Rock," amid handshakes. "I asked them, before the game, to do the best they could, and they played perfectly. A coach can't ask more than that."

Other statements included:

Coach Howard Jones—"We were beaten by a better football team. It's the greatest Notre Dame eleven I've ever seen. Rockne should be proud of his boys. They were well drilled, they blocked well, and they weren't bad on forward passes, either."

Capt. Tom Conley—"I'm the happiest man in the world. In every game we played this year we thought we would get beaten before we went out on the field. Winning the Southern California game was the climax of the season for us. It broke our hearts to know that "Moon" Mullins could not play before his home-town folks, so we went out to win the ball game for him.

"'Bucky' O'Connor was the star of the game. After playing right half all season, he was shifted to fullback by Rockne at Tucson last Wednesday. As he and 'Moon' Mullins are very close friends, he did his best for his old pal."

Marshal Duffield, acting captain for the Trojans—"Notre Dame is the greatest ball club I've ever seen. They are big, tall and fast men. It looked like we were a bunch of green kids playing against a great, experienced squad. Schwartz is a great back."

Kerr, Lee and Heath, Hollywood Star Favorites, Perform in Winter Loop Twin Bill Today

It'll look like old times for Hollywood fans out at Wrigley field today when Johnny Kerr, Dud Lee and Mickey Heath cavort around the field for the Shell Oilers in a Winter League double-header against pace-setting Philadelphia Royal Giants.

BOYS, WE'RE GOING TO HAVE A SHAM BATTLE — STAGED TO ENTERTAIN THE PARENTS OF THE CADETS! BLACKIE, YOU'RE TO COMMAND THE DEFENDING ARMY, WHILE CECIL CAPTAINS THE ATTACKING FORCE!

NORTH OF THIS STATE BOUNDARY-LINE IS MARYLAND — SOUTH IS VIRGINIA! THE BLUES UNDER CECIL WILL TRY TO INVADE THE TERRITORY OF THE BLACKS UNDER BLACKIE!

I WISH YOU BOTH A LOT OF LUCK — AND THE BOY WHO WINS CAN BE MY GUEST AT DINNER THIS EVENING!

I'M PRACTICALLY THERE ALREADY!

BLACKIE, BECAUSE OF YOUR MILITARY EXPERIENCE I AM GIVING YOU A MUCH SMALLER FORCE WITH WHICH TO DEFEND THE BOUNDARY-LINE — YOU WILL HAVE TO RESORT TO STRATEGY! NOW GO TO YOUR MEN!

HOLD 'EM BACK, BOYS — AND FIRE AT WILL!

GOSH, I HAVEN'T SEEN HIM YET, BUT I JUST KNOCKED OVER JOHNNY!

HOW GOES THE BATTLE, LIEUT-ENANT?

NOT SO HOT, CAPTAIN — THE ONLY HOPE WE HAVE LEFT IS TO SHORT-CIRCUIT THEIR AMMUNITION! THEY'RE STILL BRINGING IT IN! WE MUST DESTROY THEIR RAILROAD!

WE MUST PUT THEIR RAILROAD OUT OF COMMISSION BUT WE CAN'T SPARE THE MEN! WE MUST STOP THOSE TRAINS!

I HAVE IT! SELECT A SQUAD OF YOUR BEST MEN — LAUNCH AN ATTACK ON THE RAILROAD AND TEAR UP ALL THE TICKETS!

SNAP!

CAPTAIN, THE ENEMY IS TEN FEET INSIDE THE LINE AND IT'S NEARLY TIME FOR THE COLONEL TO BLOW HIS WHISTLE ENDING THE BATTLE! VIRGINIA WILL BE TAKEN!

I MUST USE STRATEGY I MUST!

THIS IS OUR LAST HOPE — EACH OF YOU FELLOWS ARM YOURSELVES WITH PICKS AND SHOVELS AND DO JUST AS I SAY! THEY MUSN'T STAY WITHIN OUR LINE!

BLACKIE, YOU WERE GREAT! I COULDN'T FOLLOW EVERY MOVE YOU MADE BECAUSE OF THE SMOKE SCREENS THAT YOU USED! BUT THE MARYLAND BOYS DIDN'T STAY INSIDE THE VIRGINIA LINE. ANYWAY!

BLACKIE, I'M REALLY GLAD YOU WON — HONEST I AM!

ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR!

THERE GOES THE PHONE! PARDON ME A MOMENT!

COLONEL COOK, THIS IS THE OFFICE OF THE STATE SURVEYOR! SOMEBODY MOVED THE STATE LINE BACK TEN FEET! DO YOU KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT IT!

SNOOPY IN DO-DO LAND

By Aunt Dolly

Snoop rubbed his bewildered little eyes, as the glittering creature advanced toward him. She was more like a dancing light than a human being, as she spun from place to place. At times the rabbit could see her smiling, hear her voice, then she would disappear like a moonbeam into the darkness about him. Snoop was too frightened to speak. The tiny little house was rocking like a ship on the sea, dropping its nose into a cloud, rising above the forest, only to return—to the spot where Becky stood, legs knocking against each other, in the enchanted garden.

"Hey!" the dog called, through chattering teeth; "give me back my companion." The strange glittering creature answered him by standing by the window, making it bright as day. Finally Snoop could stand no more of it; he was beside himself with fear.

"Please, whoever you are," he cried in his boldest tones, "I wish you would stand still; I can't see you at all. What is more, I have lost my Ampi."

A light pleasant laugh answered him, as the spiral of light moved through the cottage. It helped him immensely as he was able to take a good look at the whirling creature before him. Then his whiskers bristled with astonishment.

"Why!" he shouted in reply; "you are nothing but a girl playing tricks on me. To think I was afraid of you."

The twinkling light spun around and around the rabbit.

"Catch me," taunted his strange visitor. "I dare you, Snoopy Long Ears, to touch a hair on my head."

"Humph!" The rabbit looked unhappy, as much of the laughter in his eyes faded. "Why?" he asked, remembering the adventures that had befallen them, "why should you dare me to touch you? What will happen?"

"Do it and find out," cried the jolly little visitor." "It won't hurt you; that I promise, so try and catch me if you can."

The taunt was too much for the rabbit as the gay light, whirling before him was so fascinating he could not help touching it with his front paw. Instantly, the second he did so, the four windows in the cottage went sailing through the sky, the door fell from its hinges, and the sky shone blue as a river above him.

"We will have a nice ride," said the little girl. "My name is Lysa, Lysa-Lee, and I think you are the nicest playmate in my enchanted woods. You spoke of the Ampi. Look below you, Snoopy Long-Ears, and tell me what you see."

Suffering from dizziness, Snoop crawled to the edge of the floor, that was now completely without walls, and there, beneath them, lay a strange and lovely valley. There were green hills, and green valleys, tall mountains with emerald-colored trees, and any number of scaly creatures basking beneath a greenish sun.

"Why," shouted Snoop in astonishment, "if they are not Ampis; every last one of them has two tails apiece, and are ticking off the time."

"Right," cried Lysa. "I hope our cottage keeps in the air. I have heard they do not like visitors." But even as she spoke, the tiny house without walls, roof or windows, went dipping toward the emerald valley . . .

LUCKY POT

By Riley-Melancon

That pot certainly was lucky, no denying it, it was. Why, any other pot on the shelf would have told you so, at once and positively. I mean, of course, the third pot from the left, the largest one could not miss seeing if you looked in that direction. There was not a utensil in the kitchen which did not envy that pot, it was so lucky.

Imagine, if you please, a pot that never had to hold any cooking, which is the same as saying it never became dirty and had to be scraped clean. Of all things, pots hate this scraping most, and they envied the pot its freedom from it. And then, again, imagine a pot that could talk, that could walk, that was able to do ever so many wonderful things. You, too, would have admitted it was lucky.

But let me tell you, that pot didn't think it was lucky. I mean exactly that, it didn't. It thought it was one of the most unfortunate pots in existence, it positively did. Doesn't that sound funny? A pot with so many advantages thinking it was unfortunate! Well, listen. It had an enemy, an enemy that made its life most unhappy. It's a sad thing to think of, but its enemy took away all the pleasure it might have had with its advantages.

When the pot was made, it was given all those abilities, but permitted to keep them only as long as it was untouched by fire. So now you know what its enemy was. Forever and always, the pot had to watch out for the fire. The minute it should be touched by it, it would change into a common, ordinary pot that must most of the time stand over a hot stove, and this the pot was afraid of, so afraid, in fact, that it nearly worried itself to death.

All the pots hated the fire as much as this one, but none of them dreamed that it feared it so much, or that it was in constant danger of losing its privileges. The pot had never told them so. I don't know why, but it hadn't. Perhaps it liked them to think it was happy and carefree. I say, the others did not know that the fire was the great enemy of the lucky pot.

But somebody must have whispered to the fire what would happen if it touched it. The fire was very desirous of getting the lucky pot in its control, for it did not believe that any pots should have privileges at all. Positively, it didn't.

"I must touch the lucky pot, I just must," the fire said to itself every single time it was started in the big kitchen stove.

Each chance it got, it sent a shower of sparks flying in the direction of the pot shelf. No one ever lifted a cover of the stove without its doing this. But the lucky pot was pretty nimble, and as it was always on the lookout for this very thing, it succeeded in not being touched by the sparks.

"I simply must touch that pot," the fire resolved every day.

One night the woman who had charge of the stove forgot to replace one of the covers, and left the fire burning. The fire soon realized its opportunity and seized it. A shower of sparks was sent flying in the kitchen. Never before had the fire come so near to touching the pot. My word upon it, the pot had a narrow escape that time.

The fire was obstinate, and in spite of its first failure, continued sending out sparks to chase the pot. Soon the kitchen itself was burning. The people of the house ran in with buckets of water, but the fire had a good start on them, and the pot thought that now its enemy would come in contact with it. Fortunately, the door was open, and it was able to run into the yard. It hid behind a large bush. Soon it began dozing, feeling quite safe.

What a shock it received, then, to awake and find the grass on fire! It was a terrible shock, as you may imagine. The pot started running, but the fire followed rapidly through the grasses. It seemed that it surely would catch up with the pot.

On ran the pot, sobbing as it went at its impending fate, and of a sudden it lost its footing, and fell. It had a long fall, then splash! it struck water. Soon it reached the bottom of the deep well into which it had stumbled.

"Now I'm safe from the fire," the lucky pot thought. "I'll be very happy here, I'm sure."

No denying it, that pot certainly was lucky.

Can Be Yours

for One New Subscription

It's different! Made to last! No experience required! Hours of fun! Comes packed ready to fly — get yours now.

The Playboy Folding Glider is shot straight up 100 or 150 feet by a special rubber. This is possible because in the folded position it goes up like an arrow. The air holds the wings folded until the glider reaches the pinnacle, when they open. It will then make one loop and gradually circle to the earth.

As the Playboy Glider does not depend upon a small propeller and lightness to lift it into the air, it is made very sturdy. The wooden nose protects it if shot head-on into a wall. If a wing hits any obstruction, it simply folds back and after freeing itself the wing opens and continues its flight.

Secure one new one-month subscription for the Los Angeles Times and receive your Playboy Glider.

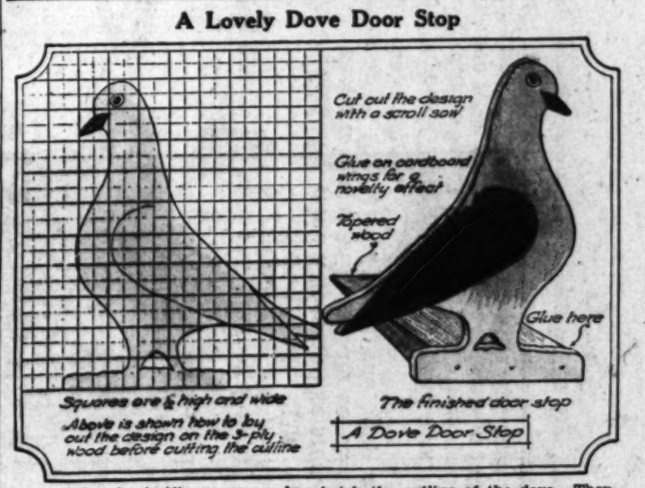
SOMETHING TO DO

A Lovely Dove Door Stop



One of the nicest gifts you can make that is distinctive and a little out of the ordinary is a novelty door stop. It is handy around any home and, when properly painted and finished, presents an attractive appearance.

The drawing here shows one whose upright is cut out to resemble a dove. Other designs of animals, flowers and other things can be used and almost any current magazine will give suggestions if you look through its pages.

Two pieces of wood are required. One is tapered from ¼ of an inch thick at one end to about ⅝ of an inch thick at the other. This wedge should be 4 inches wide and 6 inches long. The other piece is thin material such as 3-ply wood (this will not split easily,) or the new tough stiff presdwood, made from wood fibers under immense pressure. Thin white pine can also be used. Lay out the squares as the drawing shows upon this wood, then sketch the outline of the dove. Then cut out with a coping or scroll saw along this line, leaving the base at the bottom. Fasten the two pieces together as shown with glue and small brads, which will hold the parts together until the glue has dried. It is important that glue be used here because the stop will get some hard knocks in use. For a more natural effect, you can also cut out stiff paper or cardboard wings and glue one on each side of the dove.

This done, paint the bird in appropriate colors. Gray for the wings, black or yellow for the bill and ivory or cream for the body will give a nice effect. Let a red dot of paint be the eye and paint a thin line of black or gray around it. You can also put a thin line of yellow along the bill. Paint the wedge a plain color and then glue some felt to the bottom of it to prevent marring the floor.

MAKING NOVEL CHRISTMAS CARDS

How to make home-made Christmas cards is told below by a member of our hobby club:

"During my roamings in many parts of the world, I was fortunate enough to make a wonderful collection of snap-shots. I took most of them myself, the others I bought at the souvenir stores. From these I made several lovely Christmas cards. The first one that I am going to tell you how to make was inspired by a sight which I saw while holidaying in a fishing village in the North of Scotland.

"One morning on my way for an early swim, I stopped, thrilled by the sheer beauty of the scene in front of me. Through a pearly mist gleamed the first golden and crimson glory of dawn. A fleet of about fifty fishing boats with flapping sails of brown was slowly and majestically gliding out of the small harbor, headed for the open sea. Lined along the sea wall were all the families of the fishermen, waving a cheery farewell to their men.

"In the village story I bought a beautifully colored picture postcard of this scene. I pasted the card onto the dark paper (the kind which is used for scrap albums). I took a piece of pearly-hued georgette, cut it just at little larger than the card, mounted it on gold snapshot corners (you can get these at any drug store for a few cents) and pasted it over the picture postcard.

"The finished card was a most realistic picture of a fishing fleet at dawn with the mist effect created by the georgette," concluded Miss Brown. The members cheered with delight at the novelty of this idea presented to them by their teacher.—(Sheila McIvor.

THE KITCHENETTE

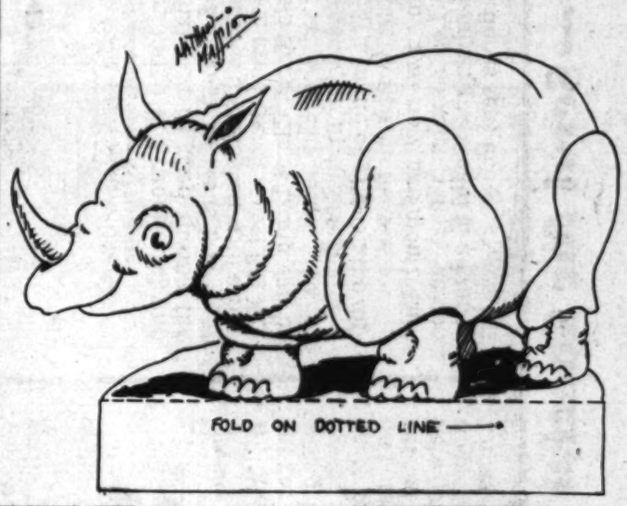
Cheese Straws

One-half pound grated yellow American cheese; one-half pound butter; two cups flour; one teaspoonful baking powder.

Sift flour once before measuring. Put flour, baking powder, grated cheese and butter together in a bowl and mix thoroughly with the hands to a smooth paste. Chill on ice for several hours, then remove to a board and roll thin as for pie crust. Cut into even strips and bake in a hot oven for eight minutes. This makes approximately four dozen medium-sized straws.

COMIC ZOO

PASTE THE RHINOCEROS ON CARD-BOARD, CUT IT OUT, AND COLOR IT. ANOTHER ANIMAL WILL APPEAR IN THE JUNIOR SOON. WATCH FOR IT.



SUNNY COUNTRY TWINS

By Margaret Kastowal, Los Angeles

Mother looked about the living-room disapprovingly.

"I wish you children would be more careful about putting things away. There is your sweater and cap and all of your books and your skates. Joe, your coat is going to get all wrinkled hanging over a chair like that. Father and I don't enjoy sitting in a living-room all cluttered with things."

Joan was making a cap for her new doll and Joe was lying in front of the fire reading "Ivanhoe."

"All right, Mother," they both said slowly, but neither of them moved.

A telephone call came and when Mother had answered it she announced, "Miss Foster is coming over."

"Miss Foster," gasped the children. This lady was a very good friend of Mother's, and she was also the children's teacher at school.

The twins sprang up and began to put their things away, but Mother stopped them.

"Do you think Miss Foster is better than we are, do you like her better?" she asked them.

"Of course not!" the children cried indignantly.

"Then if the living-room was good enough this way for us it is good enough for Miss Foster this way, isn't it?"

And she wouldn't allow them to touch a single thing, and when Miss Foster left they felt confused and unhappy and very much ashamed.

ADVENTURES OF JIMMY MOUSE

By Evelyn Jamteson, Corona

Once upon a time there was a mouse who had a red tail and four white whiskers. Jimmy had two brothers, Mickey and Neckey, and not any sisters. But I suppose you would like to know how Jimmy got his red tail. So I will tell you.

One day Jimmy was greatly excited over something. He got up very early that morning, and said to his mother, "I want a red tail. Will you please tell me how I can get one?"

"If you want a red tail, this is the way to get it. You must go to Mr. Green's house and that is three miles away."

Jimmy was very happy at this idea. He said, "I will start at once." And he kissed his mother and brothers good-by. He took some dinner and left.

He went over the bramberry patch and through the field, 'till he came to the old well where Molly Bell Burr lived. He called on her and told her where he was going. She laughed at him and said he had better go home. He didn't like this, so he ran on. Finally he came to Jack Pumpkin's house. He did not laugh at Jimmy. He told Jimmy that a very big animal and a bad animal lived there, that could eat up Jimmy. He became very frightened, and asked Jack if he would go with him. Jack said, "We'll go as far as Mr. Green's house, then I will have to go home." Jimmy was very pleased at this, and immediately they both set forth on their journey, for it was not very far to Mr. Green's house.

Mr. Green was very cross, so he did not like mice. He set traps and had a big Persian cat which was cross, too. They were soon there and Jack had to leave poor Jimmy. Jimmy was much frightened and did not even know what the creature looked like, nor did he know how to get into the house. Soon he thought he would gnaw a hole in the corner. He began, but night soon overtook him. Then he wished he were home with his mother and two brothers in his cosy little bed.

Jimmy was very sad at this but just then he saw a little hole and thought it would make a good place to spend the night. It was very warm down this hole and Jimmy was soon asleep.

The next morning Jimmy woke up very early and wondered very much where he was. Then he remembered and thought he had better hurry back in the house so as to get there before Mr. Green awoke. So Jimmy scrambled in the house not looking much where he was going. He ran right under Mr. Green's desk, and there he stayed for a while, for on top of his desk was a Persian cat. Jimmy was too scared to move, but all of a sudden, the cat pounced down and spilled the red ink right on Jimmy's tail. What was happening he did not know, but anyway, he had a red tail.

A LITTLE BIT of OLD CALIFORNIA LEFT OVER

If you wish to see California as it was in the old days, when the mission bells called the neophytes home from their labors for the celebration of the holy offices in Fray Serra's mud-walled cathedrals of the wilderness, go to Pala on some fiesta day. Here, as the soft-tongued bells call from the rock-throned campanile, isolated in the Indians' campo santo, there come the sons and daughters of Fray Serra's first charges to bend the devout knee before images such as the older Californians knew, and to participate, later, in those sports, punctuated with laughter, which always seem to have been a part of every festival day of the old days, no matter how holy. Some closeups of Pala and participants in the recent fiesta day there are presented on this page.

What HAUNTING SOMETHING

WHAT is it that so peculiarly distinguishes certain stars who are waxing popular on the screen today? Not alone their own individuality—striking though that may be—but an eerie echo from somewhere, too. Many players now coming forward suggest—not always outrightly, to be sure—the favored luminaries of yesteryear. In this instance, there is, at times, a reminiscent note of Lillian Gish about the personality of Helen Twelvetrees. There are moments when Maureen O'Sullivan conjures the wistful whimsy of Mae Marsh. June Collyer somehow recalls the beauteous Katherine MacDonald. You will note that "haunting note of appeal" in the case of various other players now beginning to appear prominently in pictures. And you will find that it is often due to some facet of resemblance to a cherished sparkler of gleaming cinema history.

"ADIOS" ATTRACTS AS TALE of OLD CALIFORNIA

Latest Richard Barthelmess film is unpretentious western drama

Beautifully effective is the final scene of Mary Astor and Barthelmess, floating along the canal outside Mexico City.

Arthur Stone (right) offers an interesting characterization as El Puma's servant.

Marian Nixon and James Rennie provide the incidental romance.

By WHITNEY WILLIAMS

"ADIOS" will have a particular appeal for local audiences. Much of the action occurs in the Los Angeles of eighty years ago, when it was but a small pueblo, and the difference between its appearance then and now is interesting. A rattling entertaining story revolves about this setting.

Richard Barthelmess portrays the leading figure—first, Pancho Delfino, later, El Puma, the bandit—but it is a far cry from the star's last film, "The Dawn Patrol." "Adios," his present picture, ranks little more than an ordinary western, though it must be admitted that there are scenes of a most lively nature that elevate it from a mere program production.

California of 1850 is presented, shortly after the United States absorbed the Mexican state into the Union. The plot and action are slow-moving, as though in keeping with the time, and nothing of a very original nature turns up in the story. Probably the most thrilling action transpires in the closing reel, when Barthelmess is racing for the Mexican border, pursued by a group of vigilantes. At every mission he changes horses that are waiting for him, and so rides out of the picture. A letter received by the leader of this party, in love with his sister, relates that Barthelmess, the bandit El Puma, reached the border safely and is happily married to Mary Astor, who journeyed south to Ensenada to meet him.

Settings and costumes, of course, are colorfully picturesque and add a note of romance to the feature. At no time, however, is Barthelmess quite convincing in the role of Californian, although his acting could not be improved upon from a technical standpoint. The outstanding characterization, to my mind, is Arthur Stone's, in the role of the fierce old family retainer, Juan. Possibly this is true because he looks the part. At any rate, he gives an excellent account of himself in every scene.

Mary Astor and Marian Nixon play the leading feminine parts, Miss Astor as Pancho's sweetheart, Miss Nixon as his sister. The latter in particular scores for an appealing performance. As leading lady, Miss Astor has small footage.

Certain scenes and sequences stand out with memorable effect, notably, the cattle stampede through the settlement of Red Gulch—Barthelmess' way of delivering 1,500 head of steers after he has been nearly killed by Fred Kohler, the land commissioner—the holdup of the Bella Union bar, in Los Angeles, by El Puma and his men, and finally the above-mentioned ride for life. All these are especially well done and lend in bolstering up an interest that occasionally lags.

Robert Edeson, in the role of Barthelmess' uncle, performs well. So, too, does James Rennie, head of the rangers, and Erville Alderson, the district judge. Others not already mentioned include Barbara Bedford and Mathilda Comont. "Adios" was adapted by Bradley King from the story by Lanier Bartlett and Virginia Stivers Bartlett and directed by Frank Lloyd, whose unquestioned ability with open-air films is evident in the more spectacular portions of the picture. First National produced.

"The Lovable Fragrance"

By GRACE KINGSLEY

"IMAGINE having a theater for both plays and films right in your own home! Ramon Novarro has and he can put on a play, present a visiting artist or show a picture right there, instead of venturing forth to attend a performance," exclaimed Stella.

"And with the blessed certainty," put in Jose Crespo, who was our escort, "of never, never having to see 'Abie's Irish Rose' or anything like that!"

Jose is the actor who is starring in all the Spanish versions of Jack Gilbert's pictures. He formerly played in Benavente's Theater in Madrid, and was considered one of the ablest young Thespians in Europe.

We were on our way over to Ramon's to hear the famous Danish prima donna and concert artist, Povla Frijsh, sing in Ramon's little theater.

And a gem of a theater it proved to be. It is at the rear of his home in Los Angeles—of course, Ramon, being Mexican, doesn't live in a Spanish house, but in a Colonial one!—and has a separate entrance all its own. Not only is the theater beautiful in all its appointments, but its lighting system is excellent.

WE FOUND many guests already assembled, including Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Straus, Malcolm St. Clair, Elsie Janis, Kenneth Thomson and his lovely wife, Edna West, F. W. Murnau, Mrs. Tillie Chatterton, Ruth Chatterton's mother; Martin Broones, Charlotte Greenwood, Herbert Stothart, John Roche, Max Ree, Jacques Feyder, John Martin, Mrs. Ferdinand Pinney Earle, Bodil Rosing, Robert Law, aviator; Harry Carr, Marie Dressler, Arthur MacArthur, Eleanor Packer, Mrs. Hennion Robinson, Florence Barnes, the famous aviatrix; Mario Ramirez, Robert Long, Ernest Wehl, Noel Vanderhoff, Walter Straus and others.

Mme. Frijsh proved to be a quiet, charming little lady, unassuming in method, but with a glorious voice to hold us spellbound. She gave an amazingly varied program in Danish, Spanish, French and German.

On our programs were printed the words of her songs, though she conveyed to us the sense of the drama and lyric visions they inspired.

Ramon, personally, in his charming Spanish way, cordially welcomed us.

"It's wonderful," Mr. Crespo remarked, "to be able to sit with an audience that thoroughly enjoys such a treat as this."

Marie Dressler was one of the most enthusiastic. She, herself, is a fine musician, poet and artist, which you might hardly imagine from the broad humor of her acting.

After the concert, Mrs. Tillie Chatterton invited all Ramon's guests over to her home in Beverly Hills for a buffet supper.

Never was there a more cordial hostess than Mrs. Chatterton, whom Edna West aided in receiving.

WE CHATTED with Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Thomson, and Mrs. Thomson told us about Jetta Goudal's wedding—how Jetta had intended being married on a certain day, but how, when the Thomsons invited her to go to the theater with them on that day, she obligingly and cheerfully consented, and postponed her wedding till the next day!

Young Walter Straus, son of Oscar Straus, isn't to return to Europe, we learned from his parents, but has secured a job for himself in the art department at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. He is only eighteen.

He was feeling very happy that evening because he is to remain in the United States.

RATHER hasty directions had been given some of the guests as to the identity of Ramon's co-host for the supper, as Mrs. Broones came over and said to me with his wife: "Whose house is this? Some of the boys would be glad to know!"

We talked to Mrs. [illegible] and found that her husband is to return from Europe abroad with Pauline Earle, her ex-husband, in two or three years ago. She is happy at the prospect.

Mrs. Chatterton told us Ruth had hoped to visit time Ramon's guests [illegible] that she had felt that she must keep a previous engagement.

Mrs. Chatterton was chatting with Robert [illegible] young aviator, simply adoring, and often gave us his plans. She joked us that she was never afraid and hoped [illegible] to New York—if she [illegible] Ruth to travel that way.

Ramon and Jose had [illegible] esting argument about talking pictures after which Ramon sang some of the [illegible] ing Spanish songs for [illegible] were encored numerous Doctors urge it not only for sleeplessness, but for all nervous and rundown conditions. They recommend it, too, for nervous, underweight children. Thousands of busy people take it during the day to relieve fatigue and restore vitality. Widely different from powdered, sugary, chocolate, malt or cocoa "mixtures", its scientific standing is unquestioned.

A few weeks' use will make an amazing difference in the way you feel. Your whole appearance will show the result of restful sleep and vitality restored this natural way.

Believe or not what people claim for Ovaltine—but try it. Try it without delay. Start tonight. Just 'phone your druggist or grocer now—ask for a can of Ovaltine. 78s

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Many people have asked us, "Does Ovaltine contain any drugs?" It is such a wonderful "night-cap" they feel it "simply must" contain something in the nature of a drug. In short, it works so well they sometimes "wonder" about it. So we wish to go on record here in public print, that Ovaltine has never at any time contained any sleep-producing drug of any kind whatsoever. It is made entirely from food and nothing but food. The government would not permit us to make such a statement in public print unless it could be proved beyond a doubt.

NORTH STAR BLANKETS
ALL WOOL

It isn't so easy to tell the North Star Blanket story. If you keep to the truth, you must use superlatives, since everything that goes into their making is superlatively fine. Way back in the days of the Civil War, the founders of the North Star Woolen Mill thought that was the way to make blankets, started doing it, and have been undeviatingly at it in this way ever since. What do we now have? A line of blankets of surpassing loveliness for every possible use to which a blanket may be put. Yes, they are truly very, very beautiful. On Sale in Your Local Store. CALIFORNIA MISSION

THE first page in a series showing the missions of California as they were before Man and Time had joined hands for their erasement or alteration. From the series of paintings of the "Franciscan Missions of California," by Edwin Deakin, 1838-1923, pioneer California artist, now being shown at the Los Angeles Museum through the courtesy of the artist's daughters. Coming to California in 1871, Mr. Deakin's "interest," says the introduction to the museum's catalogue, "was immediately taken by the old missions, and he at once commenced to make trips to them to sketch and study." He continued this work at intervals, and, in 1899, completed the large set of paintings now being shown here. The paintings will be reproduced in "The Times'" rotogravure section in the order in which the missions were dedicated. The date of the dedication of each mission and the location will be given in each case.

Jean Swartz is featuring coats this month in her Fashion Salons on Hollywood Boulevard, near Gower, and on Wilshire Boulevard, in Beverly Hills, and is showing extremely smart and original creations for all occasions, especially exquisite evening gowns for the holiday festivities. One of her loveliest coat creations is worn here by Charlotte Merriam, fashioned of grey suede cloth, trimmed with self-tone Krimmer fur.

Beckman's Exclusive Fur Shop of West Seventh Street is featuring the black and white effects —so sought for this season—and carried out in this attractive short jacket of galapin worn by Dorothy Jordan, the youthful Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, whose latest appearance is in the picture "Min and Bill" now showing at Carthay Circle Theatre. Showing a curved-in waistline, the jacket assumes an old-fashioned aspect.

Dorothy Mackaill, First National Star, selected this striking coat of henna velvet trimmed luxuriously with red fox fur. Soft velvet hat with ornament of old gold and onyx, which lends individual touch to the lines of the hat.

Dorothy Mackaill has a flair for the ultra in fashions, and, following Doraldina's famous "Fashions in Cosmetics" idea, is wearing with this lovely formal evening gown of silver embossed metal cloth, Doraldina's Evenglow "Allura" and Powder Supreme in the same shade. Miss Mackaill always uses Doraldina Cleansing Cream, followed by Doraldina Skin Tonic, before applying her make-up of "Allura" and powder.

Charming indeed is our Dorothy Mackaill, who poses in this unusual pajama ensemble of hand painted velvet; coat of black velvet lined with garnet crepe. Turkish influence is expressed in line and colors of this lovely costume which is appropriate either for the boudoir or one's drawing room for afternoon or evening.

Obesity Fraud

Not Many Now

Time was when there was a great cry against obesity frauds. Methods either harmful or useless. That cry has led many to the method which is right and scientific.

But now frauds are few. All things dangerous or harmful are short-lived.

Marmola prescription tablets have been sold for 24 years—millions of boxes—during all this furore of folly. Users have told others the results, and the sale has grown and grown. Now extra fat is out—slender figures are the vogue. And Marmola because of a factor in Marmola.

Some years ago medical research discovered a great cause of excess fat. It is in a gland which largely controls nutrition. When that gland is weak, too much food turns to fuel and energy, too much turns to fat.

Now physicians the world over know the lacking element to the over-fat. The factor they employ is embodied in Marmola, the world-famous medical laboratory product to fit the average case.

The new situation, shown by new forms, new beauty, new vim everywhere, is largely due to that factor. Not to physicians only, but to the thousands of druggists who employ the same principle.

You can trust a help so timely proved and endorsed. It is now a standard remedy for obesity. No starvation, no exercise. Just supplying a lacking factor.

You should try Marmola if you want to reduce weigh. Combat the weakened glandular condition. Do this because so many have found there new beauty, new health, new energy. Do this because it presents, in the opinion of the treatment of today. Go get a box now. Price $1.00. The complete formula is in the box.

THE SEAL OF SUPERIORITY IS IMITATION

Look for the label on the waistband of Faultless Nobelt Pajamas. . . . Pajamas with thread-elastic imitations of the Nobelt are being offered in some stores

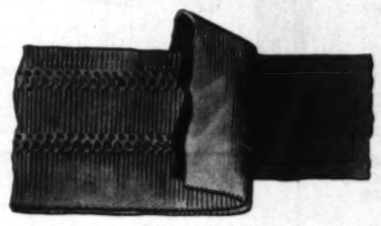
...LESS SLEEPING COMFORT . . . perfect fit . . . complete convenience . . . guaranteed lasting life—these are the qualities which distinguish Faultless Nobelt Pajamas. In place of the old-fashioned, awkward drawstring, Faultless Pajamas are equipped with a flat and flexible waistband of live sheet-rubber—the Nobelt—encased in soft webbing. So gentle is the pressure of the Nobelt that it can scarcely be detected by the wearer, yet it subtly yields—breathes—with every motion, keeping pajama trousers accurately and permanently in place. It is guaranteed never to lose its resilience.

Comfort of the sort offered by Faultless Pajamas was unknown before invention of the Nobelt. Its sweeping popularity has resulted in imitations. The Nobelt, however, is protected by patent, so that no men's pajama manufacturer in the United States except Faultless can use it. The diagram at the right explains briefly the inferiority of these imitations. Look for the Nobelt label on the waistband. It is your protection.

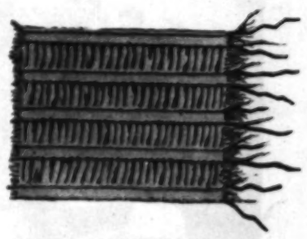
A Christmas gift that no man fails to appreciate

Faultless Pajamas, as Christmas gifts, offer you an opportunity both to express fully your individual taste, and to send your friends gifts of rare, lasting usefulness. . . . Haberdashers' and men's wear departments everywhere carry full stocks of Faultless Nobelts. You will find models in every combination of material, color and design—to suit every purse. . . . The Faultless Manufacturing Company, Faultless Square, Baltimore, Md. Los Angeles Sales Office, 720 Haas Building (7th and Broadway); New York City Sales Office, 452 Fifth Avenue (at 40th Street); Chicago Sales Office, 209 South State Street.

The Nobelt feature is covered by a broad guarantee. If your Nobelt waistband should lose its resilience, we will replace the entire garment without formality or delay. A guarantee slip to this effect will be found in every pair of Faultless Nobelt Pajamas.



Construction of the Faultless Nobelt waistband: a broad, flat band of live sheet-rubber, encased in resilient webbing. The sheet-rubber gives equal resilience to the entire band and is under no tension until you put on the garment. This results in the gentle, even pressure that can scarcely be felt by the wearer, and prevents loss of elasticity.



Construction of waistband made from ordinary elastic: note that the only resilience is supplied by a few rubber threads. To supply sufficient tension, these rubber threads must be stretched about 100% when in the waistband, which subjects them to early deterioration, and causes them to press into the flesh, leaving marks upon the skin.

"....give us a shortening like that" said 10 famous California cooking authorities

"AND we'll admit it's perfect!"

They listed the ideal points of all shortenings—these ten cooking notables.

The lists called for perfection. And, though they were polite about it, they thought it scarcely possible. One single shortening to have all the merits!

Then—they tried Parfay! The new-type blended shortening! It answered every requirement! All ten experts tested it. All ten pronounced it perfect.

They noted Parfay's purity, its whiteness, absence of flavor and the fact that it keeps indefinitely.

They tried Parfay for cake making and loved the way it creamed. They fried, and applauded the high smoke point.

They made pies with ever increasing professional enthusiasm—and ate them with unprofessional zeal! For Parfay has that rare quality of making old-fashioned flaky crusts ... light, fluffy biscuits.

They approved the pound package—a new, slim shape, to slip easily into the ice-box.

Because we know Parfay can ... disappoint, we are telling dealers to refund its price if ever it is asked for. Your market man will have Parfay. In the package and in 2, 3 and 6 pound tins. Try it—now.

Farm and Garden

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of agricultural production are gladly received. Address all letters to editorial department, Farm and Garden Magazine.

Where Money Talks

IF ALL the cars of oranges and lemons and grapefruit shipped out of California in the record-breaking season of 1930 could be placed end to end, they would reach somewhere a long way off—that's certain. We haven't heard the statistical version in that particular form, but we'll bet some sharp on figures even now is wearing out lead pencils "doping" it out. We don't really care how far those cars would reach and sometimes when a deluge of that sort of stuff pours into our sanctum, we're almost inclined to agree with the fellow who said that if all of that kind of statisticians were placed end to end, it would be a good thing.

What we are interested in is the fact that at a time when we hear so much depressing talk about hard times, California should have broken all its own phenomenal past records for monetary returns on citrus fruit. Money talks louder than anything else right now, we all admit, and that $135,000,000 plus which the California Fruit Growers' Exchange names as the Golden State's take-in on its greatest specialty crop is a lot of money. It is $16,000,000 more than we grossed last year, and it is $5,000,000 more than was realized in the "banner year" of 1927.

The Times recently presented some other figures of actual returns from agricultural activities that are likewise calculated to stop the pessimistic talker in midair. Los Angeles country's crop return alone has run up to around $80,000,000 for the present year, according to reliable estimates. That is some $4,000,000 short of the 1927 figure, but for that we can almost entirely blame the subdividers who have taken so much good land out of production for the making of residence lots. Orange county, with $44,000,000, is a couple of millions ahead of any other year; San Bernardino, with $40,500,000, has beaten all past records; Riverside, with nearly $27,000,000, and Ventura, with $25,000,000, have practically tied their best previous totals. The total for the five counties is comfortably well ahead of that for any previous year. There is reason to believe, too, that other counties of the southern part of the State will, when their figures are in, show equally good results for the year now ending.

Industrial and business losses we have experienced—no use beating around the bush about that. The whole world has suffered, and is suffering, from industrial depression, and it is not in the cards that we should have escaped. But we can take comfort in the knowledge that not only has the United States suffered least of all countries, and California least of all States in the Union, but that Southern California is at this minute the Agricultural White Spot of the entire globe. It isn't merely a case of our being less badly off than other areas that aren't doing so well—we are better off in point of agricultural return in this "bum" year of universal depression than we have ever been before. We have done so nicely, in fact, that our gains in agriculture are rather neatly offsetting much of the loss occasioned by the distressing, though not disastrous, slump in other lines.

We're due to snap out of it all one of these days soon, and it is apparent that agriculture is going to lead the way. Agriculture's record is certainly to be commended to the pessimists, for there is nothing in the figures for this year's big returns in agricultural production in which any gloom bug can find his peculiar kind of comfort.

Let's hear more about our achievements, less about our failures; more about our gains, less about our losses! Mere talk never made prosperity, but an optimistic viewpoint, when there is sound reason for one, will get us farther, and get us there quicker, than will the plaintive wailings of those who are eternally looking for the worst. We have something to cheer about! Let's cheer!

Why Not a Racket?

SPEAKING of racketeers and their successful effort to levy toll against farm produce coming into the great eastern terminals, T. C. Tucker, manager of the California Almond Growers' Exchange, says:

"Frankly, there does seem to be in the system (the racket system) an indication that orderly marketing can be made a practicality and is not theoretical. Surely if our criminal classes can organize and enforce the collection of what amounts to a stabilized price, our legitimate trades under government protection could do the same."

Which suggests an imaginative scene, a directors' meeting of the almond growers some years hence. The secretary is reading the minutes:

"Moved, seconded and passed that the secretary-manager be instructed to purchase, at market price, 200 pineapple bombs. Moved, seconded and passed, that the secretary-manager be instructed to have John Doe, an independent operator, put on the spot on or before the time when the new crop comes in. Moved, seconded and passed that pressure be brought to bear on the Umpty Railroad for a secret freight rebate amounting to 25 per cent of the regular schedule."

But enough of imagined scenes. Quite possibly there is something in what Mr. Tucker says, although he would be the first to admit that the criminals have ways and means that the growers never will have.

"Of course," Mr. Tucker adds, "the worst racket to which our farm products are subjected has been going on since the dawn of barter and trade in the form of speculative buying and selling."

But that is the world's way, and the only means at the hand of the grower to combat its depressive influence is to control the output of his own product, just as the great manufacturers control their own output. Until that day, speculative buying and selling, which are part and parcel of our society's attitude toward any desirable commodity, will have to be borne.

The New Mexico

THE new attitude of the Mexican government toward its people and their problems may be seen in the report of the investigation being made in the southern republic of two serious fruit pests, the Mexican fruit fly and the pink bollworm of cotton. Dr. E. Coppel Rivas, in charge of the work, disclosed the extent of the survey in a recent visit to this State. Knowing the extent of the infestation, the Mexicans may take intelligent steps toward doing away with these robbers of natural wealth.

Already the neighbor republic has prohibited transportation of infested fruit into the northwestern Mexican States. Train inspection similar to that which California inaugurated against the Mediterranean fruit fly has been put into force, and despite the difficulty of educating the populace to the necessity of seizing and refusing admission to infested fruit, the measure is said to be succeeding.

Strict quarantine at Mexican ports has been in effect for four years and is an indispensable part of the program.

A fair cry, all this, from the time when the United States considered revolution-torn Mexico as a hotbed for pest breeding and the Mexican border as a focal point for the fight against entry of pests into the United States.

It is pleasant to know that Mexico has turned from internecine warfare to the war which must ever go on against insects, among whose ranks are the greatest enemies mankind will ever meet on the field of battle.

Ban Is Lifted

Truck transportation of citrus and other fruits in the regulated area of Florida, suspended since the spring of 1929, has been resumed. The prohibition against such shipment was necessitated by the Mediterranean fruit fly quarantine. Certain restrictive orders still apply to the trucking.

Arizona Crops Good

October growing conditions in Arizona were very good, reports M. R. Wells, United States agricultural statistician for that State. Excellent crops of fall hay, alfalfa, fruit and corn were reported, the last-named having an average yield of thirty-three bushels, or a total production of 1,388,000 bushels, as against twenty-eight bushels average last year, and 26.7 for a ten-year average. Milo maize, hegira and feterita did exceptionally well also under the very favorable climatic conditions. On a grain yield basis the present outlook for them is 2,400,000 bushels, including, as do the corn figures, that portion used for silage, forage and feeding in the field. Cotton will be harvested from 212,000 acres in the State this season, with an outlook of 165,000 bales, including 28,000 of Pima. Picking is well advanced, with 37 per cent of the season's crop through the gins on November 1.

Among those groups which will have a part in the sixty-third convention of California fruit growers, farmers and live-stock men, to be held in Los Angeles December 17, 18, and 19, are:

State Association of County Agricultural Commissioners; California Farm Bureau Federation; California State Grange; California Farmers' Union; California commodity marketing associations and exchanges; California farm press; California packers and canners; California commission merchants, buyers, brokers and dealers; Dried Fruit Association of California; Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce; California State Chamber of Commerce; chambers of commerce of Southern California cities; college of agriculture of the University of California; California State Board of Agriculture; United States Department of Agriculture; Federal Farm Board.

In addition to the convention proper, a number of associated meetings are scheduled on the program, including a "round table" conference. Invitations are also being sent to the directors of agriculture in the eleven western States.

The four keynote subjects of this year's gathering are marketing, standardization, trade practices and quarantine. A general organization committee, headed by Dr. George P. Clements, manager of the agricultural department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, with W. C. Jacobsen, chief of the the bureau of quarantine and pest control of the State Department of Agriculture, as secretary, is now forming strong committees in the various counties for the purpose of securing maximum attendance from all sections of the State.

"Out of each preceding convention," says Director Hecke of the California Department of Agriculture, "have come definite aids to California's agriculture. Most of the activities of the State department and many of the agricultural laws trace their origin back to some of our conventions. In this year's gathering in Los Angeles, we are tackling some of the biggest problems facing the State's farming industry. We expect some very definite results as a result of this convention."

Mr. Russell now has 1100 young turkeys. Last year he raised 650 turkeys for the market; 500 were sold for breeding stock before Thanksgiving, the remaining 150 going to the butcher.

Mr. Russell was reared on a ranch, and has always taken a special interest in turkeys. His neighbors say that he knows most of what is to be known about breeding these birds. He has built a small and very modern house, which is equipped ideally for bachelor quarters. Everything is run by electricity and his equipment includes an electric refrigerator, range, and other appliances. He has three electrically operated incubators and five electric brooders. He specializes on breeding stock and eggs.

He has put out a wind-break of tamarix trees, and three acres of alfalfa. He has four brooder houses, 16x20, for his young stock, but does not use poultry houses for his general stock.

Last year, 18,571 lots of contraband fruits, plants and plant products in the possession of automobile travelers entering this State, were intercepted by the border service, and were rejected as representing material which was prohibited admittance into California by Federal or State quarantine orders or regulations. In addition, 562 lots of living insects were intercepted, the majority of these being removed from bedding, tents and other camping equipment. One hundred and seventy-four living alfalfa weevils were intercepted in camping equipment carried by thirty-eight different automobiles. Living cotton boll weevils were taken on several occasions.

The Oriental fruit moth, a pest of deciduous fruits, is now established in eastern States, where it is occasioning serious losses to peach and other fruit crops. It has been intercepted on several occasions in fruits brought into California by travelers from

The Department of Agriculture has recognized the importance and need of securing the friendly co-operation of the traveler in this important protective work. All inspector is trained to meet and handle the to keep themselves clean and neat. Every spector is trained to meet and handle the traveler with every courtesy. All inspectors must show their ability to carry on this type of inspection in a manner to avoid any justifiable criticism of their conduct. Courtesy is a prime requisite.

A Hen Hospital

Expert Gives Plans for Helping Birds Regain Health

Necessary evils and inconveniences exist on the poultry farm as well as elsewhere, and a hospital for sick hens should be one of them, declares Prof. J. E. Dougherty of the University of California. Good management requires that sick birds be separated from well ones, because of the danger of spreading infectious disease.

Healthy birds will torment and abuse the sick, the professor says, and will not allow them to get enough to eat or drink. If ailing birds are to be treated and given a chance to recover, their hospital quarters should promote recovery in so far as environment can do so.

"The hospital may be a simple shed-roof house with a well-drained concrete floor which can be hosed and kept sanitary. A large open front will admit abundant sunlight for the promotion of health, but "Very satisfactory and comparatively inexpensive hospital coops can be made from the all-metal exhibition coops used at poultry shows by providing them with one-inch mesh wire bottoms having shallow pans or trays below. This mesh will keep the birds away from the droppings, and the sliding trays will facilitate cleaning.

"Plans for the construction of this poultry hospital are given in detail in Bulletin 476 of the University of California college of agriculture which may be obtained free from the college of agriculture at Berkeley or Davis, or from any county farm adviser."

The open shed poultry "house" of Imperial Valley has been gone one better in Southern Arizona, where many flocks are literally without a roof over their heads. This has aroused the interest of the United States Department of Agriculture, which has been studying the matter. Comparative tests indicate that no effect upon average egg production or feed cost can be noticed by the change from the usual method of housing. Dr. M. A. Jull of the department believes the method only suitable for sections of very light rainfall and no extremely cold weather. The tests were carried on at Glendale, Ariz., where the department has an experiment station. The check group of hens was housed in the type of building recommended for that climate. Laying was ever so slightly greater in the housed group, as was hatchability, but the unhoused had the "edge" as to mortality.

State Poultry Group

Southern California poultrymen had a big part in the recent formation of the State poultry department of the California Farm Bureau Federation. The southerners were well represented at the annual convention of the federation, held at Asilomar, November 10 to 13, and actively presented the claims of the poultrymen to State grouping. W. C. Childers, Santa Ana, was elected the first president of the department.

The poultrymen will have the help of the California Farm Bureau Federation and the American Farm Bureau Federation in putting their program into effect. One of the things the new department will take up will be an attempt to secure a higher tariff on dried eggs. Another is the fostering of a State law compelling the labeling of products made of foreign eggs.

Another part of the program will be the securing of a State law compelling the registration of the formulae of proprietary poultry remedies with the State Bureau of Chemistry, so that poultrymen may be protected from fraudulent claims made by manufacturers as an inducement to purchase.

John Howard, first president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and now a member of the Federal Farm Board, addressed the poultrymen and other farmers at the federation convention, cautioning them to confine production to the needs of the American market, and thus help to stave off slumps in price due to overproduction.

Effective methods of swarm control of bees involve the use of young queens and plenty of room for the bees.

We're All One Great West

California the Intermountain States' Best Market and They in Turn Buy Heavily From Us

By O. A. Fitzgerald

[No keener analysis of the trend of things in our Southland has come to our attention than is incorporated in the following discussion of the interrelationship and economic interdependence of California and the intermountain States. The writer, a professor at the University of Idaho, sees the time when our population will be so great that the ability of neighbor States to provide us with food and raw materials for manufacturing will actually constitute a limiting factor in our continued development, a time when the great producing area at our continental threshold will have come to rely upon us not only for the specialty products so much in demand in the modern fare, but for the manufactured goods that are today coming in large measure from the more remote East. Here is an article to make people think.—Editor.]

PEOPLE in cities may have their backyard gardens, but they can't produce all the butter, eggs, vegetables and meat they need. Often even the States they live in can't do it. Such, it would seem, is going to be the case with California, if it keeps on adding population at the rate it has in the past decade. At the speed Southern California is growing it is going to be up to the intermountain area and other interior districts producing raw materials and agricultural commodities to recognize and meet their share of the responsibility in providing the foodstuffs that cannot be entirely supplied at home. Actually, these interior producing areas occupy a crucial role in the future of the entire Pacific Coast. They must supply a lot of the very essential food and raw materials that the cities and manufacturing centers need.

Vision butter from intermountain farms going to Los Angeles by airplane. Contemplate special trains from the grassy valleys of the interior States rushing fresh milk on passenger train schedule to these same points. Such things are not as visionary as they may sound. Milk trains are quite common throughout the East, some of them running 300 and 400 miles over night to carry milk to cities. Because of the tremendous growth of Southern California and consequent readjustments in its agriculture these things are already being contemplated to supply the populous centers in this new western empire.

This dependability of Southern California's millions has already proved very satisfactory to farmers throughout the interior States. During the past year, when national agriculture has been in the throes of depression and the silver linings have been harder to find than usual, many have commented on the wholesome condition of intermountain agriculture. It is said by many that Southern Idaho is the brightest spot in the national agricultural scene. (Southern Californians may question this.) But in all justice it should be noted that the fine condition of Southern Idaho farming is due almost entirely to the fact that Southern California looks to it as a major source of supply for butter, cheese, poultry, meat, potatoes and many other staple products which are not produced in sufficient quantities at home.

Idaho farm products, especially in the dairy field, play such an important part in Los Angeles' life that a Southern California air express company is investigating the feasibility of establishing special airplane service for butter. This firm is studying the proposition now. Refrigerator planes would be employed. The time saved in transit would be seven days and, according to present estimates, would mean a saving over present costs. Moreover, it would enable Southern Californians to get butter from the interior districts as fresh as from creameries right at home.

Their Big Market

California's people certainly have shown the right attitude toward producers of agricultural commodities in the intermountain region. The idea slowly has been gaining foothold in the farm belts west of the Rockies, inspired largely by the profits Idaho and Utah have gained from proper cultivation of California buying power, that Southern California and the Pacific Coast is the big market. In the past the tendency has been to try and crash the markets of the Middle West and East.

Soon after his return from a Coast trip, R. E. Shepherd, president of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce, made this statement. "The markets of the Pacific Coast, particularly those of California, are the best for Idaho, by reason of the lesser distance and the growing demand. Much of the land of California is capable of higher use than for the production of ordinary crops; hence they are large buyers of butter, cheese, potatoes, apples, hogs, mutton, beef, poultry, eggs and grain. The growth in population of California is, therefore, an advantage to Idaho."

Every visitor from the intermountain district to Southern California returns impressed with the shift of its agriculture to a specialty basis, which strengthens the growing belief that each year California will need more foodstuffs from its neighbor States. An Idahoan remarked recently that he didn't see how California could "live on oranges, avocados and golf courses."

One of the first signs of the dependency of Southern California on interior producers was apparent in the dairy industry. As Los Angeles and its suburban cities thrived, the demands for fresh milk grew. This meant that the production of many herds was diverted from creameries to the whole milk trade. But people did not slow down in butter eating and it was necessary for California to go outside the State for more butter. Because of its nearness, the intermountain district received first call. This trend in California, more than anything else, explains the tremendous expansion in dairy in the intermountain district during the last ten years.

The trend did not end with butter, however. With land and hay mounting in price steadily, California dairymen found that it was unprofitable to maintain nonproducing animals. Thus the extent to which they could develop young stock was curtailed. Again eyes were turned toward the intermountain district, where cheaper land and feeds made it possible to produce young stock at reasonable cost. As a result of this, intermountain dairymen have developed quite a source of revenue from growing heifers for California dairymen.

Want Dairy Products

Californians appear to have a tremendous appetite for dairy products—and dairy farmers of the intermountain district smile. California's dairy industry is nothing to be ignored, but it is inadequate. More than 75,000,000 pounds of butter is manufactured within the State annually. Yet to give Californians all the butter they want it is necessary to ship more than 30,000,000 pounds additional from outside the State. The manager of one of the large co-operative creameries in Southern Idaho, which markets practically its entire output in Los Angeles and vicinity, says that market has the largest per capita butter demand of any region in the country.

Stop California butter and cheese purchases and the dairy industry of the interior would collapse. The last figures indicated that Los Angeles imported more than 80 per cent of its butter from outside the State. The San Francisco market obtains nearly 30 per cent of its butter from interior producing districts. Further indications of the dependence of Southern California people upon interior dairy farmers are found in a summary of Idaho butter shipments taken in Los Angeles. In 1927, Idaho shipped enough butter to Los Angeles so that every man, woman and child could have had ten pounds. Enough cheese went to the same district for every person to have four pounds. That year Los Angeles paid Idaho farmers $12,400,000 for dairy products alone. Although no corresponding figures have been compiled for later years, it is reasonable to assume that the shipments of the Idaho dairy products to the Southern California markets have been increasing rather than diminishing.

Last year, 1929, Idaho shipped to California approximately 16,000,000 pounds of butter and 7,000,000 pounds of cheese, according to Roy D. Smith, manager of the Jerome co-operative creamery. "The population of California is increasing very rapidly and their wants for food supplies are necessarily increasing proportionately," says Mr. Smith. "Production of dairy products in California is, on the other hand, tending toward a decrease. This line-up naturally gives us in this territory a logical market for our products. Because of excessive freight rates, it is my opinion that the western producer will never be able to compete with the middle western producer on the eastern markets. For the same reason our location gives us an advantage over the Middle West or eastern producer with respect to the Coast markets."

Although the dairy industry has been the shining star in the picture, to date it does not monopolize the stage. Every year California sends out somewhere between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 for staple food-

OLD METHODS TOO SLOW IN POWER AGE

By Angus Fuller

IN THE year 1865, a small boy leaned over the front board of his father's prairie schooner on the California trail. By stretching, he was just able to poke the oxen with the goad. He laughed to see them strain.

That boy is a white-haired grandfather now. His ranch is on the route of one of the United States air mail lines. Each night he looks after a beacon that may light a plane in distress. The duty gives him a keen pleasure. He still likes to see things go.

As a people we like to see things go. That is one reason why our farmers produce from two to five times as much per man as the farmers in most other countries.

The word "power" brings to mind an extension of our strength. Our use of power in all its forms enables our farmers to have a great deal of food left over after they feed themselves. That is the economic difference between a peasant and a farmer.

This brings us to new problems of overproduction or underconsumption—two sides of the same difficulty. For a long time to come we will be able to produce more than we sell at a profit. We cannot wait for time to cure that problem.

It has been estimated that 20,000,000 acres of land in the United States on which horse feed was formerly produced are now used to produce food for human beings. The value of land increases up to a certain point over a long period, regardless of temporary drops or sectional distress. Wages increase along with the overhead in interest and the like. The margin of profit per unit of production in all lines tends to decrease. Our national taste is more critical each year; to satisfy it our farmers base their sales campaign on guaranteed quality.

We use our various forms of power to increase our production per man. It is not merely a way to avoid work. The best use of power is only one of the essentials of farming at a profit, but it alone calls for increased use of rural brains.

Any growing plant, be it an onion or an orange tree, has its personal needs as to

Disabled War Veteran Builds Up Modern Hatchery

ONTARIO—Some disabled World War veterans have gone down and out, pitiable victims who, surviving the battle, still pay the toll of war. Others, better able physically or mentally to cope with a world which too soon forgets its heroes, have succeeded, despite great obstacles, in finding peace and a measure of success.

Such a one is J. J. Cox, who came to Southern California in search of health following the war. He had been a school teacher in Texas, but his condition was such that he could not continue. The Veterans' Bureau placed him in the University of California at Los Angeles, where he received two and a half years of training in business education. He was then transferred to Chaffey Junior College in this city, where he took up poultry husbandry.

He located at 1047 East D street here, and on finishing his training, received a certificate of graduation from the United States government and started, little more than nine years ago, a long fight against odds to build a poultry-breeding establishment.

It was a small beginning, but conscientious painstaking work made of it a success, and Mr. Cox now has about 2000 pullets, more than 4000 breeding hens, 300 cocks, and what he declares, with pardonable pride, is the largest hatchery in San Bernardino county, with a capacity of more than 65,000 eggs.

Carefully selected hens go into the breeding plant, with males from high record production lines, secured by selection of pullets at the Chaffey Trapnest Station, the highest producers being segregated as a small breeding pen the year following the contest, and this breeding pen being cared for by the trapnest station.

The Cox Hatchery is a modern reinforced concrete building containing brooder room, office, incubator room and egg room. Sanitary storage brooders have been installed, and there are also brooder houses for the older chicks. Seven mammoth incubators occupy the incubator room.

The eggs, prior to being placed in the incubators, are kept in trays in table combination racks mounted on casters and are kept in the egg room until the night previous to setting, when they are transferred to the incubator room. When the hatchery is being operated at maximum capacity, 20,000 eggs are set at one time.

Not content with building this quite complete and satisfactory plant, Mr. Cox turned his mind to the invention of a gas brooder, which he put on the market. Besides all this, he designed and constructed all the buildings which constitute the plant.

View of the incubator room and brooder room at Cox's hatchery, Ontario, planned, constructed and operated by a disabled World War veteran.

A lot of worthwhile co-operative work has been done by California turkey growers this year, declares W. E. Newlon, poultry specialist of the University of California Agricultural Extension Service. Among the instances quoted by Mr. Newlon are: Steps in Fresno county to organize a pool and secure a competent grader; membership campaign in Madera county designed to furnish support for a receiving station at Madera; sale of about 25,000 Tehama county turkeys through a co-operative this year; "turkey tours" in Honey Lake Valley, Lassen county, and the Victorville district of San Bernardino county; organization of a preliminary turkey growers' department in the Riverside County Farm Bureau, to function until sufficient numbers have been obtained to make it an official department; taking of an annual turkey survey in San Bernardino county; flock accreditation work by seven breeders in San Luis Obispo county, representing 1500 turkeys of which at least 500 will be accredited.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES IN THE SOUTHWEST

Riverside "Open house" and field demonstrations were the order of the day recently at the local citrus experiment station of the University of California, the purpose being to acquaint representatives of nearly all of the counties of Southern California with the activities of the institution. Citrus growers from Tulare, Imperial, Riverside, San Bernardino, Orange, Los Angeles, San Diego and more remote counties were present, and there were even some from as far away as Egypt and South Africa. L. D. Batchelor, director of the station, told of the work done there, not only with citrus fruits, but with grapes, dates, sugar beets, tomatoes, figs, walnuts, truck crops, and many other Southland crops. A. D. Shamel, of the United States Department of Agriculture, told of the work being done in bud selection of citrus fruits, leading the group through the experimental plots devoted to this activity. Dr. H. J. Webber of the station staff, outlined his work with rootstocks. He also had an interesting experimental plot to show how the quality of rootstock affects the tree.

Meloland Flax has been a subject of experiment for some time at Meloland. It has grown well and reports from Washington claim for it a higher iodine content than has been found in any grown elsewhere in the entire United States. Oil content is also favorable. Yield has been good, the highest test having shown thirty-two bushels to the acre. The best varieties here are said to be Abyssanian, Rio or Long Punjab, Giza and Redwing.

Phoenix, Ariz. Navel oranges from Arizona, whose entry into California has hitherto been prevented because of the presence on the fruit of the navel orange worm (Myelois Venipars) are now allowed to go into that State, according to an announcement by Director G. H. Hecke of the California Department of Agriculture. The revoking of the quarantine was based on investigations conducted by A. C. Fleury, Senior Quarantine Officer of the California State Bureau of Quarantine and Pest Control. Mr. Fleury's investigations, just completed, are said to have shown that the insect found on Arizona navels is of no economic significance as a pest. The worm, he says, attacks only split oranges, which are culled out in the grading processes, and does not bore into the good fruit.

Visalia Light pruning, light cultivation, and heavy irrigation have been found to be most profitable practices in the peach orchards of Tulare county, declares Assistant Farm Adviser W. E. Gilfillan of the local extension service office. Mr. Gilfillan has completed records on seventy-one orchards covering three years. Average cost of production was $21.65 per ton, and the average yield, 8.39 tons. Cost of production in 5-year-old orchards was $22.96 per ton. By varieties, the cost of production per ton was as follows: Tuscan, $39.20; Freestone, $22.18; Midsummer, $20.89; Phillips, $20.65.

San Fernando The San Fernando Canning Company has closed down for the season after a most profitable year. More than $250,000 was paid out in wages to workers, and $200,000 was paid to growers for apricots, peaches, tomatoes, spinach and other fruits and vegetables. More than 7000 tons of tomatoes were packed during the season, the highest day's run being 160,000 cans. The largest week's pay roll was $19,000. Officials state that about 16,000,000 tins of all products were canned. For the first time in the history of canning, the plant put up dried lima beans. The beans were brought to the plant in the dried State and then soaked in water overnight. After this they were processed in cans and sealed.

Reseda This fall the largest lettuce crop in the history of San Fernando Valley was grown. The harvest was taken from more than 3000 acres in time to ship into Middle West and East for storage for Thanksgiving and Christmas trade. To pack and ice the crop, there were ten packing sheds in the valley, each employing around, twenty-five persons, while in the fields hundreds were at work cutting the plants and conveying them to the packing sheds. One concern used a fleet of twenty trucks. All growers reported the crop to be of excellent quality. All figures are not as yet available, but it is believed that fully 2000 cars of lettuce were shipped out. In each car were 320 crates. At the time of the harvest, growers were receiving $1 and $1.25 a crate. Even at an average of $1, it is fair to estimate the valley's lettuce harvest this fall at $640,000.

Lindsay An exhibit at the National Orange Show at San Bernardino by the citrus districts of Tulare county may be sponsored by the board of trade of the county and the chambers of commerce of the citrus communities. Report to this effect was made at a recent meeting of the directors of the Lindsay chamber. The proposal met with favor locally.

San Ysidro Work on Rodriques Dam, under construction on the south fork of the Tiajuana River in Lower California, has been suspended indefinitely. It is estimated that about $3,000,000 has been spent on the project already. It was intended that the dam should furnish water to irrigate 10,000 acres in Tiajuana Valley, where it is known that avocados, citrus fruits and winter vegetables may be successfully grown.

Brawley One of the interesting things developed by Francis Heiny, local grower, is a sweet lemon. It resembles an orange in shape and has much the taste of sweetened lime juice. Its skin has a fragrance which reminds one of rose geraniums.

The recent cold snap which visited Imperial Valley, though somewhat hard on the pea crop, was one of the best possible helps to the early lettuce. This had been advanced so fast by the warm fall that it was in readiness for cold weather to make it tighten up into firm heads. It is predicted that this year's lettuce will be the best and the earliest crop in Imperial's history.

Dr. H. J. Webber of the Citrus Experiment Station, Riverside, explains to a group of growers that the "scrub" tree inherits its characteristics from a "scrub" root. The picture was taken at a recent field day at the station.

Mesa, Ariz. Elias Habeeb has completed arrangements to plant 1000 acres in cantaloupes and watermelons northeast of Mesa. He says he believes he has discovered a spot that will ripen his melons three weeks in advance of Imperial Valley in California. For the past five winters he has been making a careful study of temperatures during the winter months. During this period the lowest February temperature recorded has been 35 degrees. An experimental planting which he made last March had cantaloupes ready for harvest on June 10, which averaged 12 per cent sugar content, according to the records of the State inspection service. This year he plans to put in his seed about February 1, planting watermelons and cantaloupes half and half. Mr. Habeeb came to Arizona several years ago from West Virginia, and purchased a small citrus orchard, nine miles northeast of Mesa. Gradually he has added to his holdings until he has acquired 2100 acres of land in one block. This land has been leveled and more than half of it is improved with irrigation ditches, many of which are concrete lined. His success or failure in melon growing next spring will determine whether he goes in for citrus or stays in the melon game. He has twenty acres of tomatoes that will ripen at Christmas, from present indications, and 150 acres in peas, cucumbers, beans and squash, from which he is shipping both to the local and eastern markets.

Whittier Dalton A. Field, manager of the Whittier District Fruit Exchange, who has just returned from a trip covering over 10,000 miles and touching over thirty leading markets of the country, reports that the citrus industry of California has had a remarkable year in view of the fact that many other States are now making serious inroads into various markets. Mr. Field believes that he has gathered facts of value to the growers and marketers of this District. With a few minor corrections in the growing and marketing of the coming crop, Mr. Field believes, a profitable year looms ahead even though a long crop is on hand. Mr. Field was accompanied on the trip by three packing-house managers of this district, Lou Brundige, Cecil Bell and John Shanker.

El Centro Additional cuts in freight rates from Imperial Valley to the eastern seaboard have been announced by the Southern Pacific. These reductions apply to Baltimore, New York and Philadelphia shipments. The rate is 94 1-4 cents per hundred pounds. The minimum weight per car is 20,000 pounds and they must go through Houston or Galveston.

Interest is centering in Imperial Valley in the buying of pure-bred dairy stock. Prices are lower in the Middle West and very excellent animals are said to be available in the Northwest. A meeting of dairymen was held at the courthouse here recently and much interest was evinced in importing dairy animals. At least one car will be brought in, probably from the Northwest.

North Hollywood Plans for what is said to be San Fernando Valley's first commercial mushroom-growing plant have been completed and work is soon to start on the erection of a double building of 2288 square feet on Magnolia street by A. H. Franklin. According to Mr. Franklin, similar mushroom-growing establishments have prospered in Whittier and Gardena. The main precaution to be observed in mushroom culture is to keep the beds at a certain temperature, and this is to be provided for in the construction of the new double building, Mr. Franklin says.

Have a Look at the Seed Stocks, Pest Killers and Implements

ACTIVITY in the garden is at its lowest ebb at this time, but there are several duties in connection with the upkeep of the small farm home which may be taken care of. The most important of these is the annual inventory of seeds, pest-control materials and implements.

At the end of the planting year, one always has quite a large amount of seed in full and broken packages or, if a system of keeping seed in metal containers has been devised, there will be small amounts in various lots which should be gone over and checked.

The basis of cleaning up the seed supply should be on the age of the seed. It is taken for granted that the gardener carefully notes on the package or metal container, in which he keeps the seed, the date on which it was purchased. It can be considered a year old at the time of purchase and the age limits which have been placed on various vegetable seeds by test, follow: string beans, 3 to 4 years; garden beets, 6 to 8 years; carrots, 2 to 3 years; sweet corn, 2 to 3 years; cucumbers, 3 to 5 years; lettuce, 4 to 6 years; cantaloupes, 4 to 6 years; onions, 2 years; radishes, 3 to 6 years; spinach, 3 to 5 years; squash, 4 to 6 years; tomatoes, 3 to 5 years; turnips, 4 to 6 years, and watermelons, 3 to 5 years.

These tests have been made time and time again by seed experts both in experimental and commercial work, and are no doubt accurate as far as longevity is concerned. If one purchases seed through a reliable firm, too, he can be quite sure as to its age. However, I have always used minimums, and even then I plant plenty of seed, for such practice is not costly and it always places one on the safe side. Fresh seeds are always good garden insurance. It doesn't pay to take a chance on poor seed or on stocks of unknown age.

In cleaning up the seed stock, it is always a good plan to get an idea of needs for the coming year, and to make these purchases early. A good gardener plans his plantings several months in advance of the planting season so that he may prepare his soil for the particular crop to be planted. This sort of preparation should be under way now for spring planting, and if one has his plots assigned to the various vegetables, the table on this page of amounts of seed needed will be a handy reference.

Pest control is also a problem in the garden and one of the secrets of successful control is a quickly available supply of fungicides and insecticides. These should be purchased soon for the coming year's growing season, and should include commercial preparations which have as their basis such materials as calcium arsenate and nicotine sulphate. These materials are most commonly used in both spray and dust preparations for the control of several common vegetable pests. Fungicides such as Bordeaux mixture and sulphur should also be a part of the insecticide supply, while some hydrated lime and sodium fluosilicate (the latter for sweet corn ear worms) should also be purchased. It is also well to purchase a piece of whale oil soap to be used in making up sprays.

Of course, the equipment for applying these materials should also be purchased if it is not already a part of the garden equipment. One should have both the hand sprayer and duster. At this time such equipment should be gone over thoroughly to see that it is in good working order, and should be cleaned up for the next season's use.

As far as implements are concerned, it is very seldom that these must be replaced. However, it is a good idea to go over them once a year to see if all the working parts are in order and if there is need for any replacements. The wheel hoe is a fairly expensive implement and should be given good care. At least once a year the cast iron metal parts should be painted with special paints which can be secured for this purpose and the cutting surface and blades cleaned of any rust, and oiled. Good care will add several years of life to the average garden tool.

The Seed Flat

During the early months of the year, the gardener will no doubt want to plant a good deal of seed in flats for later transplanting. While it is too early to start this sort of work, now is the proper time to prepare the soil for these flats.

One of the best places to secure this soil is from your compost piles, that is, if disease-free materials have been kept from it. The first requisite of seed flat soil should be freedom from disease.

In commercial planting, sterilization by steam is the general practice, but this is not possible for the ordinary home or small garden practice. Another thing that should be avoided is soil which is liable to have seeds in it.

Perhaps the best way to obtain good soil in the seed flat in the average home garden is to secure a three-part mixture, one-third compost; another third from the ash pile where refuse has been burned, particularly if it has considerable soil mixed with the ash, and the third part from the garden—a spot that is known to be free of disease. This material should be thoroughly mixed, and then spread about two inches deep over a corner of the yard or garden to become thoroughly arid. Early in the year it can be taken up and placed in the flats to be planted.

The flats and seed boxes can also be made up at this time if they are not a part of the present garden equipment. It is a good job for rainy Saturday afternoons. Generally a box two to three inches deep with outside dimensions 11¼ by 16 or 16 by 23 inches is the best size. These should be made out of redwood. The end pieces should be made of ⅝-inch wood with one-fourth inch stuff sufficient for sides and bottoms. Between the bottom boards spaces from one-fourth to three-eighths inches wide should be left for drainage, and also to take up the "swelling" that generally takes place when drywood is subjected to the wetting that a seed flat receives.

Drainage in the seed flats is very important and some gardeners also bore four or five holes in the bottom of the flats in addition to the cracks left between boards. These holes should be made with a quarter-inch bit, and can be covered with a broken piece of flower pot which is generally concave in shape so that the soil will not wash through.

Another handy thing to have on seed flats, if they are not to be placed in a hotbed or cold frame close together, is a cleat on each end so that they may be easily lifted. Many fine flats of plants have been lost by careless handling.

Some gardeners use a one-eighth or quarter-inch mesh galvanized wire on the bottom of the seed flats rather than redwood board. This is used particularly in cold frames. However, wire should not be used on flats as large as 16 by 23 inches, as it has a tendency to sag and break.

It Helps a Lot

Home Garden Brings Both Food and Content to Family

By Leo E. H. Koch

During these days of depression and unemployment a small plot of ground, well laid out, will go far in solving the economic problem. The city dweller, as a rule, is the one who suffers most from the lack of work. With high rents, heavy grocery bills, and other expenses incidental to city life, the wages one earns are often spent before they are received.

A family living in the country and owning from one to two and a half acres of land, with a vegetable garden, a few fruit trees, some chickens and, perhaps, a cow or a goat, will not lack for something to eat and something to do.

A variety of fruit trees set out, such as peaches, plums, oranges, grapefruit, quince, crab apples (for jelly,) walnuts, apricots and a few rows of loganberries, dewberries or Youngberries, and, maybe, a few grape vines, will not only provide an abundance of fresh fruits in season, but will allow some to be preserved and put away to be eaten during the winter months when fresh fruits are scarce and expensive.

A small flock of chickens, raised both for meat and eggs, go far in solving the food problem for the family table. The vegetable garden, wherein one can grow onions, lettuce, radishes, beets, cabbage, cauliflower, Swiss chard, beans, squash, cucumbers, melons, rhubarb, etc., goes far in reducing the family's living expenses. One could also have a few hives of bees.

Outside of the food question, a man who owns a small plot of land outside the city receives dividends on his money investment in the shape of health and contentment. His nerves are not so apt to be frayed out by the constant hustle and bustle, the din of the traffic, the probable stomach trouble caused by hastily consumed and half-digested meals, and the thousand and one other things that go to make up city life. Instead, he has peace and contentment brought about by contact with old mother Nature, the joy of tired muscles and a sound and unbroken sleep as a reward for digging and delving in the soil.

SOME GOOD USES FOR OLD ALFALFA LAND

By F. H. Ernst
Assistant Farm Advisor, Los Angeles County

THE problem of using old alfalfa land advantageously in the Antelope Valley and other similar areas is one to which much more thought could well be given. Alfalfa land should be plowed up as the stand becomes thin and as weeds like foxtail crowd in, taking the place of the alfalfa plant. It is then best to use the land for some other crop at least a year and, better still, for two or three years before reseeding back into alfalfa. If this crop is reseeded immediately after the previous crop is plowed up, the stand is not as vigorous and the tonnage is considerably less than where crop rotation is practiced. Alfalfa stands following a cultivated crop seem to hold up better.

The question, therefore, frequently comes up as to what crops can be grown to the best advantage. There is also the question of relative profits to be made from these crops and of the special equipment necessary to handle them. The question of feasibility of such fill-in crops can best be answered in terms of yields or results from field trials which have been carried on by the extension service as well as by the farmers themselves for quite a period of years. There is an abundance of experience to fall back on for general recommendations. This experience should certainly be made use of by the newcomer in such areas since there is nothing to be gained by trying to do the impossible. In fact, here as elsewhere, failures are often due to the tendency to try new things on a commercial scale even though field trials may have shown them to be less profitable and, at best, poorly adapted to a district.

The particular crops which are most commonly used in connection with old alfalfa fields include all of the small grains for hay, and also for grain; the sorghums, particularly the milos; Sudan grass and Irish potatoes. These crops all may be commonly seen throughout various parts of the alfalfa area in the summer time. They fit into an alfalfa rotation scheme and can be grown to good advantage for a year or two with excellent results.

Wheat, barley and oats usually produce from two and one-half to four tons of hay, and by allowing the land to lie idle after this crop has been harvested, it is possible to effect an excellent clean-up of weeds.

Irish potatoes do very well in the Antelope Valley and have been known to produce yields of 200 sacks to the acre. The potatoes produced in the valley are almost of high quality, free from wireworm damage, scab and rhizoctonia, all of which are common and all of which cause heavy losses in the lower parts of Los Angeles county in areas where they are usually grown. Irish potatoes are usually planted about the middle of June and harvested as a main crop during late September and October. The Idaho Russet is probably the best variety for the Valley, and since good seed is available, only the best should be planted. Certified seed of this variety may be obtained. The importance of good seed free from virus diseases cannot be overemphasized in order to get the best results. Potatoes leave the land in excellent condition for reseeding to alfalfa. The water requirements for this crop are moderately high, but less than for alfalfa, amounting to about three acre feet for the season. Returns are usually very good and should compare favorably with those from alfalfa.

Sudan grass makes excellent pasture and is seeded easily and cheaply. This field on the Antelope Valley ranch of Miss L. G. Weld was irrigated once a month throughout the summer. Harvesting of dwarf milo, used by Antelope Valley folk for feeding turkeys and chickens, is pictured in the upper photo.

These fit in well in Antelope Valley's crop-rotation scheme when land is to be given a "rest" from alfalfa. At the top is Melilotus officinalis, an excellent biennial pasture grass, as grown on the ranch of Miss L. G. Weld, west of Lancaster. The potatoes came from a 200-sack-to-the-acre crop produced on old alfalfa land owned by George A. Miller in the Tierra Bonita district. Irrigated White Federation wheat, a splendid crop, is pictured at the bottom of the group. It was on the W. F. Rabe ranch near Del Sur.

The grain sorghums have reasonably good possibilities, especially in combination with the production of poultry or turkeys. Practically all of the common varieties have been tried. These trials show that the best results are obtained with the dwarf milos because this variety requires a shorter season and, under good conditions, produces the biggest crop. The double dwarf is somewhat shorter than the dwarf milo and is also equally desirable. The crop should be planted reasonably early after the frost hazard is over to give the crop time enough to mature before the fall frosts occur. Yields of grain will average from one to two tons per acre.

Blackbirds have proven to be troublesome in the valley just as is the case in other places, often causing severe losses. The shotgun method is the most common one for control. One or two rows of White Egyptian corn is sometimes planted on the outside because the birds prefer this variety to the dwarf milo. Very good supplies of milo seed may be obtained through the Imperial County Farm Bureau Office at El Centro, where considerable seed improvement work has been carried on for a number of years.

Sudan grass was tried in the Antelope Valley for hay last year and the results were extremely satisfactory, four good cuttings having been produced. The crop may be used for pasturage or for the production of hay, although the trade discriminates somewhat against it. This would prove serious during a year of abundant hay supplies. It may be in order to mention that the use of sorghums as well as Sudan grass is sometimes considered as harmful to the soil. It has been definitely proven that this effect is but temporary and is not very noticeable on old alfalfa land, especially if the sorghum stalks are plowed in in the fall so that the material may decompose before the new crop is seeded. Ordinarily, where the land is used again at once, this effect is overcome by the use of 150 to 200 pounds per acre of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia.

Quite a number of other crops have been tried and have shown considerable promise but the results to date hardly warrant their extensive planting. Cotton has been planted quite a number of times and the growth has usually been excellent. The crops of cotton that have actually been produced have, however, been somewhat less in amounts than those grown in the San Joaquin Valley. Better methods and better varieties, however, may eventually overcome difficulties along this line and place cotton in the forefront for annual cropping purposes. Sweet potatoes will likewise grow and produce medium size crops, but here again the experience to date indicates that the yields will not measure up to those obtained in the lower part of Los Angeles county.

In a plant groups around a pool, I should certainly reserve background space for a Buddleia Asiatica. During the winter, when few things do flower and when a bit of fragrance is most welcome, this variety of Buddleia is a sheer joy. Its gray-green leaves, with the silvery fuzz on the underside, are effective in themselves, and the long sprays of tiny white flowers, laden with perfume suggestive of the orange-blossom, add greatly to the garden or to the bouquet for the house. The plant is a rampant grower and can be liberally cut without damaging it. It needs severe pruning back after the flowering season is over and, if used for background work, can be handled properly without making a bad effect to the rest of the picture.

If you are going in for tropic effects, you will want one of the exotic banana plants. A great many use the Musa ensete, or Abyssinian banana, an ornamental variety, but the fruiting or edible variety, Orinoca, is often recommended as the best, for it is more enduring. In any case, it requires a rich soil and lots of water. With banana, as a natural accompaniment, would come the Caladium Esculentum, or Elephant Ear, which wants shade in addition to rich soil and moisture, at least for part of the day. Then, too, there is the Papyrus antiquorum, the plant from which the ancients made paper, and which gives a wonderful touch to a tropic planting. Some of the more delicate bamboos can be used suitably, also.

These plants I've mentioned have all been of rather tall-growing sorts and some of them will surely be wanted, but the intermediate growths are important. There's a charming thing, Nandina domestica, sometimes called the sacred bamboo, which is a pleasing green during the warm months, but which takes on a crimson coloring like the maple leaves back east when the winter comes on. This glowing touch of color surely is attractive in most plant groups. Among the smaller, evergreen shrubs, the old Myrtus communis is splendid, with the newer type, the Myrtus communis compacta, still better. It has fine, deep green, glossy foliage and a delicate creamy blossom. The dainty Diosma, widely known as Breath of Heaven, with its feathery, rich green foliage and minute white flowers, is another treasure for this kind of planting.

A spot of brilliant color is attained by planting the Spirea Anthony Waterer, a plant of rather dwarfish habit, literally massed with crimson heads of bloom in late spring. Growing much larger, but a valuable plant in many respects, is the Grevillea thelemannia, which has a needle-like green leaf and puffs of crimson flowers of odd form. It is a free bloomer and is one of the plants you can depend upon for color in winter. The Veronicas are good, too, especially if you live near the coast, and of them all, I think Veronica decusata, with the purple blooms, or Imperialis, with its large reddish-purple spikes of bloom, are best. These should have a shady location.

The dwarf variety of pomegranate, Punica granatum nana, is worth having. It is evergreen and a lovely rich green as to leaf, while it bears gay red flowers during one part of the year and the softer brownish-crimson miniature fruits practically the rest of the year. It is choice enough to be given a rather isolated and prominent place.

In the Erica or heather (more properly, heath) group there are many possibilities for color. The early winter bloomer, Melanthera, is a vigorous grower and needs to be given plenty of room, while Mediterranea, is far more compact of form and for such plantings as we are considering, more satisfactory, I think. All the Ericas need excellent drainage and should be set where they do not get irrigation as often as the other plants mentioned. They actually thrive on neglect. Another Erica which I like immensely is the Persoluta rosea. This comes along later that the Melanthera and has a delightful color. If you want white sprays of heather, they can be had from Persoluta alba. The tall spikes of tubular flowers which characterize one group of the Ericas are most familiar to us in the variety President Felix Faure, a lovely deep rose color. This type can be had in lavender, apricot, pink, red and white, the varieties being too numerous to mention.

If you crave a bit of breath-taking loveliness in early spring, plant the azalea Mollis, or some of the other azaleas which we have learned to adapt to our conditions, setting them close to the margin of the pool where their beauty can be reflected in the water. These need a shady place and one that can be enriched with peat and leaf mold—but they can be so very charming if just a bit of extra care is taken!

A very glassy-leafed plant of dark blue-green, which is a splendid foil for other plants is the Mahonia, or Oregon Grape. The yellow racemes of bloom in March and April aren't important, but the purple berries that follow are, from a decorative standpoint. Somewhere, in such a planting, I should find a place for a plant of Rosemary, the old-fashioned herb of great-grandmother's garden, and for some lavender. These would do best where they are not kept too moist and where drainage is good.

There is always a need for the sprawly, rather prostrate forms in such plantings. For the sunny spot, it would be hard to beat the Cistus maculata or Rock Rose, and for the shadier location, the Hypericum moserianum, or Gold Flower. In the most exposed sections and where the plants will get the least attention, put Lantana delicatissima, the trailing variety soft lavender flowers. By exposed, I do not mean exposure to frosts. The plant is sensitive to frosts that are at all severe, but it will withstand exposure to sun and a minimum of moisture.

Thanks to the work of modern hybridists, the Montbretia has come into a new glory. This bulb plant from South Africa was considered very interesting upon its introduction, but it was soon eclipsed by the greater charm of other bulb flowers and gradually was relegated to the discard in many gardens. Those who haven't kept pace with the up-to-date novelties in this flower have a treat in store if they'll investigate and—invest in a few bulbs. The flowers have taken on greatly increased size and refinement of form and the colors are exceedingly rich. Montbretias should be treated just as you would gladioli, only the corms should be set about two inches deep and about six inches apart.

Unless you know what the modern montbretia is like you've no conception of how handsome it has become under the magic touch of the hybridist. Always an easy subject to grow, the plant is certain to become immensely popular, once the gardener rediscovers it. These blossoms are from three to four inches across.

Have a look at the seed stocks you have on hand and discard the lot if there is any doubt as to their vitality. Before they are planted the soil really should be spaded to a depth of twelve inches, for they send down long roots. Some of the handsomest of these irises bears the highly unsuitable name of Zwanenberg, but don't let the name stop you from buying it. It is an odd, tawny flower, yellow, shading into an olive brown. I like better such names as Iso-No-Nami, a rose and blue over white; Koko-No-Iro, a royal purple with a white center. They seem so much more appropriate, but when they give us a lovely orange-buff with a name like Valencia, I'm ready to overlook the name for the sake of the flower's beauty.

Every pond should have a few blooms of the water iris, Pseudacoris gigantea. These will come along ahead of your lilies, and they are tremendously effective. The blooms are a soft yellow and grow on tall erect stems, with great blades of green foliage to set them off. Put them into pots, first, pots with rich, fertilized soil, and set them so that the crown is just above the soil. The pot should be plunged in the pool, submerged to the rim only, and it is best to let it rest on a couple of rocks or bricks in such fashion as to permit drainage from the hole in the bottom of the pot.

Of course, there are other types of iris that I have not mentioned; the Oncocyclus, of which Iris Susiana, or the Mourning Iris, is an example; the Regelia, closely related, but much easier to grow here than the Oncocyclus—and it is possible to get such varieties as the native of Turkestan, Hoogiana, and of Russian Turkestan, Stolonifera, in this group. The latter, especially, is a marvelously lovely thing. Last year, at the Redlands flower show, during that city's Week of Flowers, and again at the Pasadena Spring Flower Show, I stood before this variety utterly enchanted by it. And there is the Evansia group of crested irises, of which Iris Japonica, sometimes called Fimbriata, is the most charming, to my mind. The Sibericas, too, should be mentioned.

There is a plant I'm impelled to mention here, although it isn't a real iris. It is a close relation and it is wholly delightful and a generous grower here. I refer to Morea iridioides, from the Cape Country of South Africa. It looks very much like the flat type of iris, has delicate color—a creaminess accented with deep gold. It is thoroughly worth growing, and very happy around pools particularly where it has considerable shade during the summer months.

food and drink. Usually it is an adaptable individual, yet it has its preferences. It must take what is in reach of its roots and leaves. Every circumstance of soil, every passage of hoe or cultivator, even the passing breeze has its effect.

Farmers have always been artists in ministering to their plants. It is a most intimate relationship. There can be no cheating. We now do it, or try to do it, on a large scale and at a profit. Observation, work and management are still prime requisites, but in addition we need a new mechanical training. Brains are our best crop. We are trying to cultivate them in our county and union schools, in 4-H clubs and among adult farmers through government agents and the farm press. We hire these men and agencies to teach us.

The state of farming has been likened to that of the weather in that a great deal has been said about it, but apparently little is done. We need not go back to the covered wagon to disprove this. It is only thirty years since Benjamin Holt built his first "caterpillar" to use in the tules of the San Joaquin. What the children on our farms today may live to see calls for strong imagination.

It has been said that California is perhaps the only spot where one may see all the people of the United States in one place. This is as true of California farms as it is of Los Angeles. For that reason we can take a national pride in what we are doing here in agriculture.

Our Farming's Unique

Farming here is a problem and a progress. What we have done even so far is unique. In methods of production and marketing we are a laboratory for the world.

We have turned our chief disadvantage from the farmer's point of view, the lack of moisture in our arid parts, into our greatest advantage by the use of irrigation. The comparatively mild, dry climate in combination with irrigation, gives us a more complete control of our specialty crops than is had by any other section of the country. It enables us to produce crops of a high and uniform degree of quality. This close control to the end of quality is the fundamental reason why we can ship such vast quantities of foods across the continent. It is the basis on which all the advertising and merchandising of our products is built.

The kindly sun is the main source of power. Its light furnishes the energy which is used by the protoplasm of plants It lifts through soil and plants four or more thousand tons of water to each acre of alfalfa. It is fortunate that we do not have to pay this power bill.

Electricity runs most of our pumps; gas engines help and, with wind mills, supply water for thousands of households and for lonely watering troughs. Lately the Diesel engine, best known for low cost marine power, has come to the land to help run our pumping plants. It is largely due to our irrigation pumps that electricity is more widely used on our farms than in any other region of like area.

Electricity is our most perfect medium for that close control of the processes in the plants in which we prepare our crops for market and as such continues the efforts toward quality begun in the irrigated fields. Poultrymen use it to hatch their eggs and it is used at the big Limoneira ranch in Ventura county to hatch the eggs of lady bugs being packed ten to a capsule and shipped to farmers whose crops are infested with aphis. We are even experimenting in using electricity to heat the soil of truck gardens to stimulate early growth.

Old Dobbin and the stubborn mule are not obsolete. They haul our grapes and fruits to the roadside trucks and are often used to supplement the tractor power in the rush seasons. They have a definite place, especially on our farms adjacent to rough grazing lands on which they may pasture at low expense.

Tillage tools are better adapted to California conditions every day. Look at the multiple-row planters and cultivators for truck crops and the methods being tried to reduce the bulk of alfalfa hay. The next generation will see a great deal more of creative work on these lines by young farmers trained in mechanics.

We use more tractor power than horse power. Each section has one or several makes best adapted for its conditions, each farm may choose the proper size. They are all descended from the railway locomotive. The first ones were huge affairs used in the grain fields of the West and Northwest.

One sees small tractors busily cultivating a five-acre grove or leveling the soil for the orange pickers; a "skinner" may be cultivating a great grove in the foothills with a larger machine. Another is building levees to hold the irrigation water on level land. It may have an attachment that builds up the cross levees in the corners after the wheels pass over them, so that it is now unnecessary for a man with a horse and scraper to do this most tiresome job. On one side of a ditch a giant tractor may be leaving a broad black strip of fresh plowed earth behind it as it moves and on the other side perhaps a company of smaller ones armed with mowing sickles are laying low a field of alfalfa.

Large or small, the cost of each power hour drops rapidly in proportion as the amount of work done rises.

Men have built up business by the use of this principle. In the Imperial Valley a certain man was forced into bankruptcy after the war through no fault of his own. He worked out till he could finance a new tractor and then began contracting plowing. He did a first-class job and kept his machine busy as near twenty-four hours a day as possible. Last year he kept several machines of various sizes working day and night—the bigger ones plowed from July to Christmas. They are helping him to pay for a large farm.

California contains many farms of ten acres or less and many larger "family-size" farms. We also have many ranches containing hundreds or even thousands of acres. In addition, it is the usual practice in the Imperial Valley and in some other areas for a concern to lease several thousand acres of alfalfa sod from the owners and operate these as one great truck farm, by the use of a great deal of machinery.

We have succeeded to a degree unprecedented in agricultural annals in giving the small grower the same chance as the big one to harvest and market his fruit, nut, field and truck crops to the best advantage.

We're Specialists

Oddly enough we do it through specialisation, a process that lends itself so readily to large-scale farming. We select the conditions of soil and climate best suited to the production of a certain crop or crops. In that area nearly every acre of every farm is devoted to them. There is an extreme variation in the size of the holdings, but in marketing we are striving to treat the whole area and all the districts devoted to that crop, as one farm. That is the purpose of our growing and marketing organizations, whether composed of private concerns or co-operative organizations. Specialization allows a concentration of man and machine power that is impossible to a general farming section. Cultivation practices are improved and standardized.

In harvest time thousands of seasonal laborers gather the crops which trucks carry to cannery, dry yard or packing shed. There they undergo preparations and processes that call for the close supervision of men who are experts in their lines, followed by

A Labor Saver

Home-Made Equipment Simplifies Planting of Bulbs

By George B. Bowers

Bent on the saving of labor in a planting activity that has always involved no little work, R. H. Wight, manager of a bulb farm at Bonsall, seven miles east of Pala, in San Diego county, has improvised a bulb planter on a light subsoiler. He described the machine to me so that other bulb growers might benefit by the use of this device for making bulb setting easier.

The machine said to have been successfully used for two years, plants properly three rows, opens the furrows, subsoils and closes them neatly, ready for irrigation. It is built upon a light subsoiler, available at any implement dealer's.

A seed box is built on top of the machine, containing three openings, one for each row to be planted. Behind the seed box sit three men who drop the bulbs upright at proper intervals into a tube that ends at the rear of a furrower attached to a chisel which extends three inches below. The size of the tube depends upon the size of the bulbs planted. The furrower is a U-shaped shovel attached to the chisel. Pipes in front of the planter are attached to the chisel frame and deliver the bulbs into the furrow in an upright position, where they are secured by the earth that falls back into the furrow.

The covering is accomplished by two outside wings, 9x12 inches, attached to the chisel frames. These are turned slightly inward. Two others, center of rear, are V-shaped. Each is attached to a chisel.

This machine takes the place of no less than sixteen laborers working by hand, Mr. Wight says, and does a better job than they could do. Moreover, he declares the dropping of the bulbs into the tubes is not difficult. A tractor provides steady pulling power for the outfit.

Grow Own Fuel

CALIPATRIA.—While the days are balmy at this season on the desert, the nights and mornings are decidedly chilly, and they become more so as winter approaches. For some crops, especially lettuce, this is an ideal condition, but it is not exactly conducive to human comfort, especially in the rural districts where so many ranch houses are of a rather flimsy type, notwithstanding the progress that has been made in recent years in this respect.

The matter of fuel was a serious problem with the early settlers. Neither gas nor electricity were available to the ranchers, there was little or no wood, and kerosene and gasoline had to be depended upon for cooking and heating purposes. This fuel, shipped long distances by primitive transportation methods, was costly, almost prohibitively so. But a solution was at hand—the planting of trees.

Trees, including shade, ornamental and fruit, grow rapidly on the desert, and it was not long after tree planting became popular that nearly every rancher had his wood pile for winter use. However, they clung, and still cling to kerosene and gasolene for summer use.

The custom in the beginning was to plant trees along the irrigation canals, where they made an unusually rapid growth, often furnishing an abundance of firewood in a year, and fence posts and saw logs in from three to five years. Later on, many farmers planted smalls tracts to trees for fuel purposes, usually to eucalyptus, and these have sometimes proved more profitable than if the land had been used for hay, grain or vegetable crops, for there has always been a brisk demand and a good price for wood.

He is a shiftless rancher who has not growing about his place eucalyptus and cottonwood trees for summer shade, the trimmings from which, along with an occasional windfall, furnish ample winter fuel. Thriving wood yards, where home-grown wood is sold, are now operated in all Imperial Valley towns.

Don't Stop With One Kind of Iris; There Are Many Lovely Ones

WHEN we have selected a generous list of irises for our gardens, we have by no means availed ourselves of the beauty and variety they offer us if that list is made up of the Germanica type alone, though that is the one which is most familiar. These irises, with their erect standards and graceful falls, with the bearding along the centers of the falls, fill our gardens with indescribable tints and a faint breath of fragrance, but they do not complete the picture.

For instance, you could not get any of this group to feel happy in a very moist location, or with their feet actually in the water, but there are irises which can be so used, and they will add a great measure of charm to any pool. Then there are other types, with characteristically flat sorts of blossoms, in enchanting colors, which we like because they are different, and fit in particular places with exactly the right effect. Most of these are in the beardless or Apogon group.

This is a very good time to set the water iris Pseudacoris into your pool, so that it will be ready to bloom for you early next spring, and to put out the lovely Spuria iris, Ochraleuca, at the margin, with a liberal accompaniment of the fascinating Japanese irises. You can use some of the English irises, some of the American type of Apogons, and some of the Dutch varieties in this sort of situation, for they all thrive on ample moisture and can do with a bit of shade. The Spanish irises, on the other hand, are intolerant of either dampness or shade; they want plenty of drainage and a place in full sun. The distinctions between these various types are a bit confusing to the average amateur gardener, but if you will tell your nurseryman or grower what you want in the way of effect, he will be glad to select for you the particular kinds best suited to your purposes.

The Spanish irises are particularly adapted to cultivation here, and since the bulbs (this type is a bulb, not a fleshy root kind) can be placed three inches apart, a good many can be grown in a small space. They should be set about three inches deep, too, quite a different procedure from that employed with the bearded type that have fleshy roots or rhizomes. Some people plant these in the same bed where they set their tulips and daffodils, the irises continuing the succession of bloom. These Spanish irises are smaller than the bearded Germanicas, and many of the other beardless varieties. They do not have the upright standards that characterize our more familiar Germanicas, but they are not the same in form as the flat Japanese irises. Once you identify them, you'll have no difficulty in recognizing them thereafter. They really should have been planted earlier, for best results the first season, but they can still be put into the ground.

A thoroughly charming iris of distinctive form is the delicate Iris japonica, often called fimbriata. Its blooms come in sprays, very pale orchid in color, set off with violet markings and a rich golden center. The petals are notched irregularly and the tiny standards are fringed. It grows luxuriantly in a moist and shaded situation and as a shrubbery border.

It is a highly suitable time to plant Dutch irises. These, also, are bulbous and beardless, larger in form but of much the same general characteristics as the Spanish. They like a rich soil, planty of well-rotted fertilizer, and more moisture than the Spanish, with partial shade if possible. They should be planted about three inches deep and about eight or nine inches apart. You will find an intensity of color in such varieties as Tingitana, a dark blue, Imperator, not so dark, but really spectacular, and Wedgewood, a very soft but thoroughly definite color.

The American type of beardless iris has one very great recommendation to us; its foliage, which is blade-like, remains green throughout our winters. It can be happy in pretty damp ground and in partial shade and is to be recommended for conspicuous foreground plantings and around pools, since it is never unsightly. The flowers are flat and fairly large. In Dorothea Williamson you get a rich velvety purple; in Hexagona, a clear, bright blue, and in Purpurea, a wonderful shade best described as "raisin." In this group is included the gem named Fulva, a wild iris from the Southern States boasting a strange terra cotta shade that is unlike that in any other known variety. This group should have shallow planting, so that the crown of the plant lies at the surface, exposed.

The Spurias, in form almost identical with the Dutch and Spanish irises, with slender swordlike leaves that die down in winter, are delightful—and should be planted now by all means. The deep gold of Aurea, the softer glow of Monnieri, the white of Ochraleuca, and the creamy tone of Ochraleuca Sulphurea, are splendid accompaniments to plantings of the American types, with their more pronounced colors. Incidentally, almost all these beardless irises are fine for cut flower purposes, keeping far better than the Germanicas. Also, they tend to grow much taller, especially some of the varieties.

Every year the Japanese irises grow more popular with us. They have a distinctive form that is most interesting, and wonderful color effects. These are generally referred to as the Kaempferi. To grow them successfully, one needs to know that they require a great deal of water during the blooming season, but get along on very little for the rest of the year. Be sure to place them where this matter of moisture

Shrubs and Small Trees That Will Frame the Pool or Rockery

REQUESTS have come to this department for an article on suitable shrub plantings for pools and rockeries. While I have written a good deal about plants for such situations, other than shrubs or small trees, I have rather neglected the latter group except for incidental mention. Since there is another article in this issue that deals with irises which may be used for pool and pool-margin planting, this seems a good time to discuss the shrubs and small trees. From now on through February, all such plantings should be made and, in some cases, the sooner the better. It is certainly a good time to give thought to what you are going to plant and where.

A good many people complain because their pools are not clear. Oxygenating plants should be used, and water snails, gold-fish and the like, all contribute their share toward the task of keep down the algae (green scum) that forms. But one thing your pool certainly needs is plenty of sun in the winter months and partial shade in the summer. The logical answer would seem to be a deciduous tree, one that will accommodatingly furnish you with ample shade in the summer and shed its leaves to let the sun at the pool during the winter. There are many trees suitable for this purpose. The main thing is to choose one that is rather small. A big tree rather dwarfs a little pool. Of course, if you've a very large pool, you can use large trees without impairing the effect.

Personally, I rather favor the placing of a pool where a large tree at a distance provides the dense part of the shade during the necessary period, and the use of delicate trees in immediate proximity to the pool. One of weeping characteristics seems particularly appropriate. I know of no other tree that more exactly meets my own ideals of such a planting than does the Chinese Elm. I like the pittisporum phillyraeoides in this situation, too, but it is a shrub and takes a long while to reach any such proportions as the tree I mention makes within a year or two.

One thing that pool-plantings certainly do want is color—not too much, but enough to light up the picture at practically all seasons. One of the loveliest subjects possible to choose for this purpose in early spring is the Cydonia japonica or flowering quince. Never very large, the tree is literally a mass of scarlet blooms before many of the other flowering fruits and shrubs begin their season. A background plant which is delightful if it is placed where other subjects carry on planting beauty when its own particular season is past, is the Tamarix indica, with its almost diaphanous plumes of tiny soft rose flowers in the spring. Off-season, it is rather rusty and drab looking, but flanked with an evergreen shrub of some kind, it is never conspicuous enough to be ugly. The Weigelia is another handsome flowering shrub that does well for background planting or in a situation which calls for a subject that grows to consider-

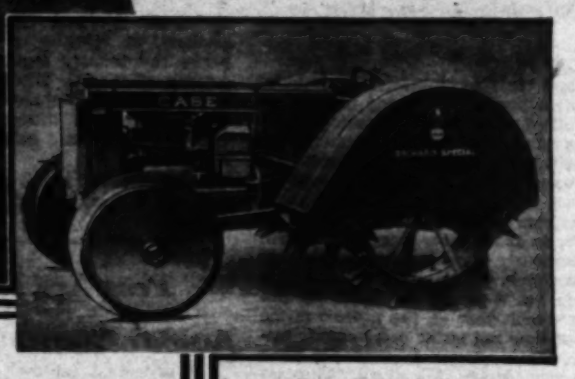
You Get Something Entirely New in this Orchard Tractor



YOU HAVE probably watched many orchard tractors. Perhaps you own one yourself. But unless you have already seen the new Case Model "CO" at work, you can have no idea of the many practical advantages this modern tractor offers you.

This is a tractor right after your own idea. It is built to the needs of the orchard—not five years ago, but today. It is light so as not to pack the ground—weighing but slightly more than two draft horses. It is only 48 inches high—for efficient work close to trees. It has disk wheels in front and full skirted fenders over the rear wheels to protect the limbs and hold down the dust. Low hanging branches are gently lifted up by these fenders which slope downward.

In narrow headlands, rounding corners, or for close work when zig-zagging rows, two differential foot brakes enable you to make short, quick turns. Think what it means to be able to turn around the last tree in the row and go down the other side without delay. These brakes are also an effective steering aid in loose soil. Because of the swinging drawbar you can turn under full load.

The Model "CO" opens up new possibilities in handling the various orchard jobs faster, easier, and more profitably. Its dependable power is equally effective for drawbar, power take-off and belt work.

Send today for new booklet fully describing this new tractor—or see it at the nearest Case dealer. He will also be glad to show you what's new in orchard tools and other farm machines.

Don't Stop With One Kind of Iris; There Are Many Lovely Ones

WHEN we have selected a generous list of irises for our gardens, we have by no means satisfied ourselves that we have all the best. Each year brings out new varieties, and we must keep abreast of the times if we are to have the most beautiful irises.

The garden that Miss Helen Heckert and A. Osgyani created at the former's Inglewood home. Above, Mr. Osgyani's favorite outdoor sport—digging worms for his mallard ducks.

Current Kind Tips to Informal All-Year-Round Gardening

By Alice Keen

When people who work their regular eight hours in the city will spend hours and hours mornings and evenings building lily ponds and cacti gardens, they can be called "real gardeners!" Most of us are content to sink into the softest chair available and breathe a huge sigh of relief after a day of toil. This is the story of two chemists who work rather long hours, but who still find time, or make time, to do a lot of gardening.

It takes about every spare moment Miss Helen Heckert and A. Osgyani have away from a chemical laboratory to care for some interesting ornamental and vegetable plantings. Mr. Osgyani usually arises at hours that would seem impossible to most of us in order to properly care for the cucumber watermelon, and squash vines he enjoys growing. It takes a real enthusiast to do that. Miss Heckert works both early and late keeping up her end of the enterprise.

The two are employed at the same establishment. Being chemists, they perhaps think of their garden loam in terms of phosphorus, calcium, or nitrate, and, of course, H_2O, but they enjoy cultivating it just the same. For five years now they have been planting and caring for the gardens that surround the Heckert home in Inglewood near Belleview and Freeman avenues. Mr. and Mrs. Heckert confine their interest in the two large city lots to three avocado trees, leaving the rest to the care of their daughter and Mr. Osgyani. That the place is well cared for is evident to everyone who passes that way.

The laying out of the flower garden has been no easy matter. The two gardeners brought the lava rocks that help lend a rustic atmosphere to their pool from volcanic formations near Fillmore. Mr. Osgyani did all of the cement work, although Miss Heckert cares for the planting now that it is finished. Perched upon the rocks are a number of gnomes in varied positions. Surrounding the pool are aquatic border plants that continue over to a lattice-covered garden seat. Mounting the lattice work are yellow and red rose bushes that add color and shade to the restful spot. Beds of petunias, violas in blue and yellow, zinnias, campanula and lobelia add further to the attractiveness of the flower area. To one side of the pool is a rustic fountain made to resemble a noisy cataract in miniature. Within the pool are water lilies, water hyacinth and water canna (Thalia dealbata) bearing tall spikes of purple flowers above the dark green foliage.

A cactus garden forms an interesting adjunct to the ornamental part of the grdens, its specimens having come from Mexico, Death Valley, Arizona, South America and New Mexico, and each having been collected either by the owners or their friends.

Behind the flower gardens are the vegetable plantings, which add substantially to the household larder. These are cared for by Mr. Osgyani, who takes as much pride in his farming ability as he does in his laboratory prowess. Fully one hundred banana squash and an equal number of watermelons have been harvested and with them the Heckert family has enjoyed string beans, corn, carrots and onions, all fresh from the soil.

A part of each day's labor is devoted to the care of about twenty mallard ducks, which are the special pets of Mr. Osgyani. One who comes upon him unexpectedly is apt to find him shoveling up the soil in the pens so that the ducks may grab the worms. Every Sunday he spends a part of his day in thus amusing his feathered friends. He also cuts up banana squash into fine pieces for them, a dish that they greatly relish.

Two hundred chickens supply the household with meat and eggs. A brooder has been used with success in the raising of the chicks. Two large cats and a terrier dog complete the livestock population of the place. Felix, one of the cats, is a champion gopher catcher, bringing home a gopher or two every day.

Peach, apricot, orange and avocado trees grow thriftily along the side of the driveway and to the rear of the house. Several of the avocados are of the Lyon variety, trees that grow up straight and tall, with little side branching near the base. Avocados are also used in the landscaping of the Spanish stucco house.

Sunland Youngberry Grower Lets the Suckers Grow

SUNLAND.—Believing that he has discovered the secret of bigger and earlier Youngberries, S. H. Garner of Sunland is cashing in on the experiment which led to this discovery. Not only were his 1930 berries earlier than last year by some two weeks, but he was picking Youngberries the last of July, four weeks after the close of the berry season in other localities, and weeks after the main crop had been gone from his seven-acre tract here.

Pruning, in the opinion of Mr. Garner, is the secret of his bigger and later berries. Perhaps, though, one should say the omission of pruning or suckering. Nearly every grower suckers his berry vines two or three times every season, believing that the strength of this extra growth is thus turned into the berries. But no sooner has one set of suckers been pulled from the parent vine than another immediately starts, growing with great rapidity, the young shoots often being as big around as one's thumb and when a few inches high looking not unlike a stalk of tender asparagus. So rapidly do these suckers grow that it is often necessary to remove them three times during the berry season.

This year, however, Mr. Garner decided to let the suckers, which are nature's provision for next year's berry wood, grow. He believed that less sap and vitality would be taken from the parent vine by allowing the first suckers to grow than by removing them and thereby making way for another "crop" which would still further drain the vines.

As the main crop of berries reached its peak, new blooms set on, and after an interval of several days after the main crop of berries was gone, the second crop began to ripen, thus prolonging the berry season several weeks. While this crop was not as heavy as the main crop of berries, the fruits were extra large and kept the pickers busy several weeks longer.

Mr. Garner had on display two baskets of Youngberries taken from one cluster of the second crop which for size and flavor just "beat all." It took just twenty-five berries, he reports, to make a heaping pyramid of one basket which weighed twelve ounces net, or just a fraction under half an ounce to the berry. The berries measured 1¼ inches long, 3¾ inches in circumference and 4¾ inches around lengthwise, he reports.

While practically a newcomer on the commercial market, this being its third season, the Youngberry has found the consumer calling for "more" in no uncertain terms, and Mr. Garner believes he will be able to answer that call by more than doubling the length of the Youngberry season due to his method of handling the vines.

Mr. Garner had thirty-five pickers most of the season on his seven acres of Youngberries and two and one-half of blackberries. The rain and hail which visited this district early last spring damaged the Youngberry crop about 40 per cent, as the vines were in full bloom at that time. Despite this fact, the crop was very heavy.

Although the Youngberry is an average shipper, Mr. Garner disposed of his crop to Los Angeles and local markets and also sold a goodly share from a roadside stand on the highway. That the Youngberry is rapidly becoming a favorite, he says, is evidenced from the fact that fifteen roadside sales of Youngberries were made to one of blackberries.

Mr. Garner has also done well with Burbank sweet rhubarb, the stalks of which, he says, measured twenty-eight inches in length, not including the leaf, or forty-four inches with the leaf.

Vine Will Be Saved if Flower Buys Good

CALIPATRIA.—R. A. Wade, representing an Idaho seed house, is conducting a pea seed propagating experiment on the R. W. Ware ranch a few miles north of town. If it proves successful, it may mean a new and important source of income for North Enders. The growers of the small French pea, used almost exclusively for canning purposes, are sometimes hard pressed for seed, as it must be grown by the seed houses a year in advance. Peas seeded here in November can be harvested in April and planted by the Middle West farmer in May.

In the vicinity of Sheboygan, Wis., and in other sections of that State where the soil has a considerable admixture of red clay, there are many pea canning factories and the farmers are devoting their energies to growing this vegetable. The pea grown there is small and has a delicate and pleasing flavor which it does not contain when grown in other soil.

It will be interesting to note what effect valley soil, sunshine and water will have upon the famous Wisconsin pea when grown here and replanted back to its native soil.

New Machines Cut off Hours in Plowing and Cultivating

Faster and faster goes agriculture. New and improved machinery enables the farmer to accomplish more in less time, which is the modern economic way. A special equipment now makes it possible to cultivate forty acres of lima beans in a day on the Frank Russell farm at Oxnard.

This cultivator is built for its own particular task. It carries nine standards with shovels supported by a main frame which is carried on six wheels. It cultivates eight rows at a time. A ten horsepower tractor supplies more than enough power for the machine, and only one man is needed to operate the equipment, besides the tractor operator.

This isn't the only new machine that saves time and speeds up the process of farming on this ranch. The new pulverizing plow goes over the ground just once and the earth is ready for sowing.

In this late model plow, revolving beaters are substituted for a moldboard. These beaters are operated by means of a power take-off from the tractor. They pulverize the soil as it leaves the plowshare so thoroughly that any further preparation, such as disking and harrowing, is unnecessary.

The plow calls for about 20 per cent more power than for an ordinary plow, and it is figured that disking and harrowing would consume more power than that, so there is actual saving in power expenditure. There is also a great saving in man hours.

State and private inspectors. General farms often prosper in serving these areas of specialized production. According to the statistics of the Giannini Foundation, the cost of producing a pound of walnuts or a box of oranges or other specialty crops on the lowest yielding farms is several times that on those farms which yield the most per acre, in most cases from two to five times. Obviously there can be no profit on the poor farms. Frost sometimes causes a light crop, yet it cannot be blamed for the high costs each year on the poorest farms because it does not strike every county every year. Lack of care accounts for some losses, wrong location for others. The last two can be prevented.

Our costs are high and production must be high to meet them. All the soils in an area that specializes in a certain crop may not be suited to that crop, but the district as a whole almost invariably is. We found it out by the trial and error method in the first place. Now no one thinks of guessing in regard to any commercial planting. He gets the advice of experts, association men and his county agent and growers, or else makes careful experiments. When based on production and marketing demands the development of new lands such as the vegetable lands of the coastal valleys may be very successful. We still guess too much, however, as to the proper acreage of new plantings. More statistics that are correct and up to date would help to guard against overplanting, undesirable to the new planter and the established growers, alike, and a tremendous strain on our marketing organizations.

From necessity and from choice we are trying to increase the use of power and imagination, of mechanical aids and co-operative effort, to make a better farm living and a better rural life. Our efforts are of world-wide interest.

I differ from those widely experienced men who predict a specialized rural culture. In California, at least, I think we will specialize only in production and in marketing our products. Who can tell where Redlands or Whittier or Orange end and where the country begins? In the open country where the difference in the surroundings is more apparent, we tap the universal current of thought that flows by radio, telephone and auto past our farmhouse doors.

In a cultural sense we have no farm picture. It is merely part of the American scene.

Peas Are Rolling

Imperial's "North End" Scene of Great Seasonal Activity

CALIPATRIA.—With the fall pea shipping season in full swing, Calipatria is a busy town these days and the entire "North End" of Imperial Valley is a busy district. According to the county agricultural office, 9000 acres of fall peas were planted in the valley this season and of this planting, more than 5000 acres of crop are growing in this area and will be shipped almost entirely from Calipatria—largely to Eastern markets. As a result the "North End," is humming with activity.

Laborers are flocking in here from near and far. They come by stage, rail and auto, all hoping to get work, and they are getting it, for many helpers are needed to gather, pack and ship the peas. At the opening of the season pickers were paid 2 cents per pound, but with a drop in the market, the rate of pay was recently reduced half a cent. Even at this price, however, good wages are earned.

It is no unusual thing to see cars carrying full camping equipment and containing five or six young fellows, parked by the dozen along Main street, the license numbers indicating places of origin as far separated as Kansas City and Vancouver, B. C. Many of the pickers are from Salinas Valley, where the fall pea harvest recently closed. Some of these are Americans, grown girls and boys, and whole families from grandpa down to toddling infants, but the majority are Portuguese and Filipinos, with a sprinkling of Chinese and Japanese. Leaders among the various groups take contracts from growers and put their followers to work.

Of course a goodly number are local Mexicans and their wives. These, as well as the pickers from a distance, live on ditch banks and along the highways in tents, or a combination of tent and arrow weed ramada. Many of the women have nursing babies, cared for by older children in parked cars till meal time—for the baby—when a loud halloo is broadcast over the field and re-broadcast by willing voices to the right mamma. This mode of living is no hardship in Imperial Valley at this time of year.

Calipatria has five sheds from which peas are shipped, operated by Wilkinson Bros., Stanslee & Bryant, Corn & Ware, the S. A. Gerrard Company and Warner and O'Neil. Wilkinson Bros. are among the largest growers and shippers of peas in the valley, owning or controlling 4000 acres in the Calipatria district, including some of late planting that will not be harvested till February. They are now shipping ten to a dozen cars a day. The combined output of the other sheds is about the same, making a total daily shipment of 20 to 24 cars. If weather conditions remain favorable, this firm hopes this season to exceed by half a hundred last year's total output of 500 cars.

A ton and a half by express was the first shipment of the season and was sent out by A. Arena & Co. on Oct. 22. The peas were picked on the Bradford ranch southeast of Calipatria. Other express shipments followed daily for a week in larger or smaller quantities as the crop ripened. Carload shipments began about the first of the month.

A ton to the acre is considered a good crop, though much larger yields are reported in some fields. After each picking the land is irrigated and in a few weeks it produces a second crop, though not as large a one as the first.

Experience has shown that the soil in the Calipatria district is well adapted not only to peas, but to lettuce, cucumbers, peppers, melons, and other vegetables as well. The danger from frost is not one to cause growers much concern. Nationally known vegetable growers, such as S. A. Gerrard Co., are acquiring large holdings, growing crops and building packing sheds in this area.

Antelope Valley and it is frankly believed that this crop will be grown extensively on old alfalfa land in the future on account of the increasing scarcity of good watermelon land in the San Fernando and San Gabriel valleys. Most of the land in the lower part of Los Angeles county has become infected with soil diseases, particularly wilt, to which the watermelon is very susceptible. The only cure known is to plant the crop on new lands, and the Antelope Valley offers one answer to this problem. With respect to quality, it is well known that the valley watermelons are excellent and should therefore command a premium over Imperial Valley melons. The returns as indicated by the local experience of growers will compare favorably with that from alfalfa.

Onions are believed to have possibilities, but market conditions to date have not been very encouraging. Indian corn has done well and holds excellent promise for the future. Corn will become a more important annual crop, especially as better varieties are developed for the valley.

Poultry, turkeys, and good dairy calves and sheep must be added as likely candidates for mention in connection with alfalfa rotations. Range, health and market conditions are such that all four of these live-stock enterprises fit into the economic scheme of farming. They permit the use of local feeds and more particularly the use of waste products. This is especially true in feeding of sheep where poor grades of alfalfa hay may be ground up and fed, thereby keeping this hay off the hay markets. This method permits the effective use of feeds that would otherwise be wasted for the production of animal products, for which there is always a demand in Los Angeles.

Alfalfa growers are often loath to grow crops other than alfalfa. The lack of machinery, as for example, potato planters or diggers and the lack of definite information sometimes keep the farmers from making the attempt. Nevertheless, there are excellent possibilities for those who will plant the crops which experience has shown are adapted to the climate and soil conditions. The grower who tries new or doubtful crops on a large scale is often sunk before he starts. The grower who cashes in on the best experience of others has splendid opportunities for making excellent use of his alfalfa land, with returns equal to or better than those received from the production of alfalfa hay itself.

WEALTHY NOBLEMAN'S A DAIRYMAN NOW

cially wobbly until Jimmie Minotto took the helm last year. He and Dick Merchant, rodeo boss, put their heads together for a week or so and broke the records for rodeo attendance, interest and profits.

Jimmie is a rodeo enthusiast in several places. Up at the Prescott Frontier Days each July you'll find the gun-totin' gentry competing for solid gold watches, fancy saddles or some other choice prizes donated by the feller standing over there in the high-heeled boots and wearing the black cropped mustache.

Horseback riding is to this day favorite sport and recreation of the young Arizona dairyman. He says he'd rather go out alone for a gallop over the open country that to golf, fish or swim. Mrs. Minotto, who was a reigning social belle of her set when she was Idamay Swift, is a fancier of good horses and rider, herself.

Mrs. Minotto spends much of her time with the two children, Demetrio and little Idamay, on their Z Triangle Ranch. There she instills in her boy and girl the "aristocratic democracy" which is their inheritance. When the family is in Phoenix, Demetrio frequently is seen in the coveralls of a milkman, working about his dad's dairy, and both Idamays are hail-fellows-well-met with the ranch and dairy workmen. The Z Triangle Ranch is an expansive stretch of beauty in almost the exact geographic center of Arizona, and is a favorite spot with friends of the Minottos who like to visit the open country of the West. The Hassayampa River, famed in legend and story, runs near the ranch. Soon it will be damned and the resulting lake will add its beauty to the scenic grandeur of the country.

Things Happen

Jimmie Minotto is the type of fellow to whom things are always happening. His acquaintances tell yarn after yarn about him, most of which are reasonably true. His life has been anything but humdrum' and dull.

Once his train was caught in a rainstorm, and the engine ploughed into a water-filled gully. A train wreck itself is an event in the lives of most people who experience it, but Count Minotto is the sort who would, and did, dash out hurriedly and save the engineer from drowning, at the risk of his own life.

Jimmie might have manure on his boots this morning and be helping the boys dehorn a cow or two, but tonight might find him at the Biltmore hobnobbing with William Wrigley, Jr. He is Mr. Wrigley's representative in Arizona, where the chewing gum magnate has some $3,000,000 invested.

On another morning you might be told that Jimmie had just caught an airplane for somewhere or other—he sees no reason why a farmer can't go in for aviation so long as it serves his purpose. And then that night you might find him ensconced before the fireplace at Mission Lodge, which adjoins his dairy farm. The lodge is a beautiful old farm home, unpretentious but cozy, with a huge living-room built for comfort and dominated by a life-sized painting of the beautiful Agnes Sorma, who was Jimmie's mother. Jimmie brought her to America and until her death she made her home in Crown King, Ariz.

As a modern farmer who is concerned with rationing milch cows, calving, breeding, registering, pasturing, feed raising and all the myriad details that confront a dairyman, Jimmie Minotto has some very positive ideas on How to Make a Success. Summed up, his thought is that—with average good luck—any farmer is likely to succeed in his profession if he is willing to gamble a little, if he is broad-minded enough to find out the things he doesn't know, and unselfish enough to do some things for the good of the industry and of mankind as a whole. That is the general secret of all business successes, he says, and farming is a business and a mighty intricate one."

A higher order of intelligence and education is the most needed thing in the farming industry, Mr. Minotto believes.

A Three-Way Story

Ranch Neighbors Have Same Aim, But Different Methods

By F. H. Colman

In Antelope Valley three neighbors are achieving success with plots planted to 12-year-old almond orchards. Each has a different problem to solve, each has a different ambition to realize; but they are all held by the bond of love for the soil and growing things.

The first ranch is that of B. A. Maxey, who purchased fifteen acres of a developed ranch near Palmdale in March, 1929. Mr. Maxey has always been an orchardist, having first grown apples in Illinois and, later, in Washington. A little over a year ago he had his initial experience with almond growing. He is 71 years of age, but he and Mrs. Maxey have accomplished wonders in the short time they have had the orchard. They have built a small but comfortable home and already have thriving plantings of strawberries, blackberries and raspberries. Their vegetable garden will soon supply the family needs. Last year they bought 300 chickens and from that stock raised 550. They also have ten old turkeys and had fifty young ones for the Thanksgiving market. Three geese have raised a little flock of twenty-three young, and twelve Pekin ducks have resulted in a flock of 120 ducklings.

The Maxeys intend to make the raising of ducks and geese their specialty. They are leaving the care of the orchard to a large ranch company, which has complete charge of the trees. This leaves them free to devote all of their time to their poultry. They have inclosed two acres of land, including part of their five-acre plot of alfalfa, for their poultry. This inclosed section is divided into five runs, the first for young stock, the second for breeding stock, the third for common stock, a fourth for turkeys, and a fifth for geese.

B. A. Maxey at work in his Antelope Valley orchard. Seventy-one years old, Mr. Maxey is still interested in his lifelong pursuit, fruit growing.

Mr. Maxey has put up three poultry houses this year and bought an electric incubator and several brooders. He has found time to look to the future needs of the family by putting out a little family orchard including apples, persimmons, peaches, cherries and nectarines. In the not far distant future they will have, with their garden, small fruit and poultry, almost all of the necessities of life.

Next door to the Maxeys is the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Hurst and their two small children. They have twenty acres, of which ten are in almonds and ten in pears. Mr. Hurst does all of the tractor and other farm work. He has 1200 turkeys getting ready for market; chickens for table use, a cow and a few wild mallards complete his quota of stock. Around the house he has set out such small fruit as peaches, plums, chestnuts, figs and grapes.

The Hursts came to their ranch two years ago from Chicago, where Mr. Hurst was in the automobile business. They are learning fruit-growing, and are enthusiastic over life in the country. They have built a four-room house with two shady porches; the well-kept lawn, flowers and shrubs make this an attractive home.

Next door to the Hursts are the bachelor quarters of Al C. Russell, who has five and one-half acres of almond orchard. Mr. Russell's chief interest is turkeys and especially breeding stock, in which he specializes. Others care for his orchard, so he may devote all of his time to his turkeys. His specialty is the Giant Bronze, of which he has eighty hens and fifteen toms. He has been raising breeding turkeys for the past eight years in California, but four years ago decided upon the Antelope Valley because of the dryness of the climate there. Each of his 12-year-old almond trees, he

No FEED can equal DRIED Beet PULP

Many feeds are available to dairymen and stockmen but none have the peculiar merits of Dried Beet Pulp—this vegetable feed (the only one available commercially) is not only of high value in itself, but it has the additional unique advantage of improving the other feeds with which it is used.

Improved Health—Increased Profits

Fed with alfalfa hay and with barley or some concentrate, dairymen get increases in milk production of two to five pounds per cow daily. Cattle and Sheep men get quicker gains at lower cost. Best of all, the animals are kept in improved health and condition. There are no "off-feed" days.

PRICES ARE NOW THE LOWEST SINCE THE WAR. If you are not feeding Dried Beet Pulp to your milking cows, your fattening cattle and your sheep—ask your dealer for a trial lot and learn at once the benefits to be obtained.

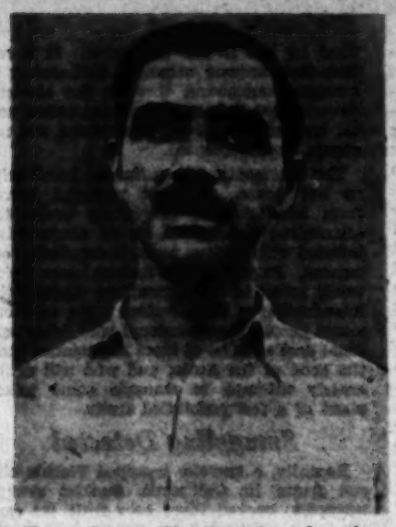
WEALTHY NOBLEMAN'S A DAIRYMAN NOW

By Oren Arnold



Count James Minotto, scion of a titled house of Italy, now an Arizona dairyman, and a good one, pays more attention to the pedigree of his cows than to his own these days.

JIMMIE the Count never saw a cow close-up until he was grown. And the very first cow with which he tried to become intimate almost slung him out of the corral. Despite the fact that he now milks (from an executive's desk) some hundreds of purebreds each day and operates the only certified dairy in his wide region, this Arizonan started life as a wealthy highbrow, not in America at all, but among the aristocracy of Europe.

Some call him "the Count." Some call him "Jimmie." Both are right, for he is Count James Minotto, although the title has about disappeared. He was the son of Count Demetrio Minotto, rich Italian nobleman, and of Agnes Sorma, a famous German actress. Born with a silver spoon in his mouth, it could hardly have been predicted that young James would turn up at 30 with manure on his boots in an Arizona cowpen. But such is circumstance, and "Jimmie" Minotto's story reads as fascinatingly as any Horatio Alger biography.

James Minotto first leaped into prominence in this country during the World War. On a mission to South America at the behest of Manhattan bankers, he became friendly with some prominent Europeans who happened to be German sympathizers. Subsequent events pointed the finger of suspicion at Jimmie, and shortly after his return to the United States he found himself suspected of being a German spy. He was arrested and socked peremptorily into confinement, but through the good offices of his famous father-in-law, Mr. Swift the packer, he was able to convince Federal authorities of his loyalty to his adopted country.

Going back still farther—Jimmie Minotto grew up as a child under careful tutoring, trained for a life of wealth, educated in the genteel art of handling money as a profession. Because of the prominence of his parents about every step he made as a boy was news in Europe. But he was not pampered. He had to learn seven languages thoroughly, and to show some of his father's talent in financial affairs. He turns up, then, as a young business man in the London branch of the Deutsche Bank, at about the time assassination precipitated the big war.

Although a native of Germany, young James hardly dared try to go home from London. In fact, he faced arrest had he not promptly caught a ship for America. His banking relations made it possible for him to move without embarrassment, and because of his familiarity with the governments of the world, his carefully nurtured diplomacy and his ability to speak foreign tongues, New York bankers welcomed him. About the time America entered the big scrap we find him on the mission to South America.

The war ended and business began to slip gradually back into normal channels. It had been a hectic interlude, and those among the wealthy who could do so began taking vacations. Count James Minotto happened to turn up for a loafing spree on an Arizona dude ranch, at Castle Hot Springs.

He'd Try Anything

Picture, then, a personable, dark-skinned, mustachioed young nobleman, graceful of build and faultlessly clad, climbing up onto the corral fence to witness, for the first time, an Arizona rodeo. The ranch management usually arranged one for its dudes.

Count Minotto observed with some awe the bow-legged waddies leap from galloping horses on to steers' horns, wrestle with the steers and throw them. It was new to him, not at all common in the castle yards of Europe—not even a custom among Manhattan bankers. But if it is the accepted thing, said he, in Arizona society, then zounds! He'd try it, too!

He tried it, and when the old steer like to have torn down the fence with him the raw-boned old range boys haw-hawed all over the place. But th' dern dude straggled out of th' dust, yards from the steer he had hoped to bulldog and asked to try it again!

In time he learned fairly well the gentle arts of bulldogging, broncho busting, lassoing, branding, and similar accomplishments of the range. And during the process he definitely decided to become a cattleman himself, some day.

First, though, he figured he'd better get better acquainted with this strange country, Arizona. Being a self-confident young man, able to care for himself, he fitted out a pack train and struck out alone across a trailless mountain country. He gorged himself with scenery. He saw Nature in the raw, saw it without hot baths and pullman car luxury, without ever a single servant, and emerged into civilization nearly a month later, only to be arrested by the first man he saw on a charge of stealing horses.

Now stealing horses is not an accepted social custom of the West, and this here dark complected, furrin'-lookin' feller looked suspicious, anyway. The usual procedure in such cases always has been to act without much due process of law. Things looked bad for the son of the Italian nobleman and the German actress. As a matter of fact, Jimmie did have stolen horses, but he was able to prove in time that he had bought them in good faith, without knowing they were stolen.

Jimmie then set out to corner the range cattle industry. He began with 200 head of steers, placed on his own Z Triangle Ranch south of Prescott. He nursed them for a spell and finally sold them, after losing only a few thousand dollars on the venture. Knowledge of seven languages, and a resplendent family tree, hadn't meant a thing toward turning those steers into a profit. Jimmie grinned and took it as a financial sock on one cheek, then turned the other by plunging into the dairy game.

Demetrio Minotto, son and heir of the Count, enjoys the game of playing milkman at the Mission Dairy, Phoenix.

But he had learned some things, and his dairy venture didn't flop. First of all, dairying offered better outlets for his normal business instincts. Range herdin' is a sort of specialized bizness, mister, and a feller sort of has t' grow up in it. But dairying—

With some more financiers, Count Minotto purchased the old, established Norton dairy, brought to dominance by Dr. J. C. Norton, who knows very nearly everybody in Arizona. The group acquired one or two more good herds, merged all of them and founded the Mission Dairy at Phoenix.

Holsteins and Guernseys now supply milk for thousands of people, including patrons of the Fred Harvey restaurants. Each day half a million or so bottles are sterilized, filled and delivered to front doors, all under the guidance of the dude financier, th' count.

They don't look upon him as a greenhorn now, somehow or other. Not long ago they (his fellow-farmers around Phoenix) elected him to the board of governorship of the Salt River Valley Water Users' Association. This year he might have been elected president of that body if he had cared to run, and anybody in Arizona will tell you that being Water Users' president means more in Arizona than being Governor of the State.

The Phoenix Mid-Winter Rodeo, annual range spasm-of-sport staged for the edification of dudes and tourists, was finan-

Crops Affected

Tomatoes From Mexico Will Be Fewer and Higher

The new tariff on Mexican tomatoes—2 cents per pound, 90 cents to $1 per box—is expected to affect prices here this winter, and has already affected the Mexican output, which is variously put at 50 to 75 per cent of last year's on the basis of acreage.

Florida and Texas plan to benefit from the tariff, and plantings are heavier than ever before in those States. California, it is predicted, will suffer, not only through having to pay the increased price for tomatoes, but also, to some extent, from Mexico's retaliatory measure, which increases that nation's duties on grapes, apples, pears and peaches about 300 per cent.

San Diego county growers expect to produce small quantities of tomatoes, in protected areas, clear through to spring.

Southern California growers, particularly those in San Diego, Orange and Los Angeles counties, have experienced a new trouble, added to their many cultural problems, during the past season, the pin worm being unusually active this year. It enters the green fruit at the stem end, leaving a small hole. It is frequently found—a small green in the periphery of ripe fruit, usually not having penetrated very far.

The standardization laws allow only 5 per cent tolerance on this trouble, which is hard to detect at harvest. The result this year has been considerable loss through the necessity of repacking eastern shipments to meet the standardization inspection.

Some growers declare that the worm is usually removed when the tomato is peeled for use, since it stays so far out in the fruit, and at a meeting of growers and State Department of Agriculture representatives held at El Cajon November 7, the matter of asking an increase on the tolerance was discussed. One packing-house manager of San Diego county said that apparently those tomatoes grown on granite soil were less affected by the worm than those produced on adobe.

The worm is not new in this State, but little trouble has been experienced heretofore. Its habits are not well known, although it is said to greatly resemble the eggplant worm. Whether the soil on which the plants are grown has anything to do with its spread has not been studied by entomologists, it is said.

Holidays will be happier for the children if they are allowed to share in the festivities, but kept to their regular schedule of sleep and simple wholesome food.

stuffs that are not supplied at home. Naturally, California wants to keep most of this money near at home, as witness the State's interest in endeavoring to develop the pork industry west of the Rockies. One of the disciples of greater pork production in the intermountain region has been J. A. MacNaughton, general manager of the Los Angeles Union Stockyards. Every year, says this authority, California sends close to $50,000,000 to the corn belt for pork. Mr. MacNaughton—and scores of others—want the interior farmers to grow more pork so that most—if not all—of the money now going to the Middle West can be kept nearer home.

There is a growing belief in the intermountain region that the best way to assure maximum development of the interior is to assist in the development of the Coast. Secretary L. P. Parsons of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce is one who shares this belief. "The unsatisfactory results during the past ten years cause us to question if we should not face about and look westward for the development of our 'hinterland,'" says Parsons.

Mr. Parsons reports that the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce has been advertising the resources of Idaho in the papers of the Middle West and also in papers along the western coast. "We find that a much greater response has been received from the advertising placed in the Coast papers than from the advertisements in the papers of the Middle West. This, with other facts available, makes it appear that a large part of the small increase in population in Idaho during the past ten years came from the West rather than from the East."

Future Lies West

Idaho is not the only State which has had an awakening to the fact that its future lies to the West. Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, and, naturally, Arizona and Nevada, have been developing closer trade relations with great buying centers of California and the Pacific Coast. What is happening in Idaho is, however, very typical of developments in the interior district as a whole. The Gem State is chosen for deliberation chiefly because the writer is more familiar with it than any other State in the area, and because, being centrally located, its situation with regard to California markets is fairly representative of the intermountain group.

"A comparison of the car shipments of 1929," to return to Mr. Parsons's consideration of the subject, "shows an astounding increase both in number and in character of commodities shipped, indicating that the increase in income from agricultural commodities in Idaho during the last ten years is largely due to the increase of our markets to the West.

"The great increase in industrial activity of California has influenced the character of the agricultural products of our State. Ten years ago Idaho was an importer of dairy cattle and dairy products. Today the State is an exporter of these products and 90 per cent of the volume shipped out is going to California. Ten years ago agricultural commodities were the largest source of income for California. Today that is changed, and the income from manufactured products in California is twice that of the total income of agricultural commodities. Ten years ago California was producing sufficient potatoes to meet her own needs; today Idaho is marketing 25 per cent of its potato production in California markets.

"A large portion of the live-stock production of Idaho is now going to coast markets. Markets to the westward for our products means a preferential market, a market in which we are competing only with the producing areas west of the Rockies. The West offers a market much more stable, with a decreased transportation cost and one that should yield much to our producers. Another market can and should be developed by co-operative action on the part of our States west of the Rockies. One-half the population of the world lies to the westward. It is believed that we in Idaho and the people of the intermountain area can develop our States much more rapidly if we will about face and look westward for our increase in population and our markets."

There is no doubt but that Californians have done well by producers of agricultural commodities in neighboring States. But the circle will not be as complete as it should be for maximum western development until the people in the interior do right by the people who have bought their butter, eggs, cheese, lamb, potatoes, pork, etc. It is, in brief, a sound case of business reciprocity.

On the basis of 1927 figures, every additional citizen in Los Angeles means that ten pounds more of Idaho butter will be wanted. It is by patronizing western manufacturers and by taking the specialty products from the Southern California and Pacific Coast factories that the interior residents can complete the circle. "If we of the interior will look to the industrial centers of the Pacific Coast for our manufactured products we can do much toward stimulating the drift of population to the Pacific Coast and increase the consumption of our food products and bring about a quicker utilization of our raw materials, of which we have a great abundance for manufacturing purposes which have little or no value at the present time," says the secretary of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce.

Idaho's Governor, H. C. Baldridge, tells there is much to be gained through closest trade relations and business reciprocity between the California and Coast markets and the interior States. "The interchange of commodities produced on the farm or in the factory means a great deal in increasing the prosperity of both the intermountain section and the Pacific Coast," he says. "More and more the business interests of both sections realize the importance of this interchange of business. It is certainly to our advantage to buy everything we can from Coast manufacturers."

How this reciprocity can be made to operate was illustrated a few years ago when a Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce goodwill excursion visited the intermountain region. At a stop in a county seat in Central Utah the party was shown through a fine new courthouse. At the noon luncheon the usual speeches were heard. How much agricultural produce Los Angeles and Southern California took from that district was outlined. One speaker, however, injected a new thought. On his tour through the courthouse he had noticed that all the furniture was from an eastern firm. He pointed out where the county could have duplicated that furniture in the West at less cost and would have helped in building the markets that take so much of their farm produce.

"Help us build our factories by buying Pacific Coast manufactured products and we will make Idaho the bread basket of the world," said the leader of a California excursion into Southern Idaho this past summer. "The more you help us build factories, the better market you will have for your products."

The opportunity for business reciprocity does not end with manufactured goods. The interior already has done its share in building one great California industry—the movies. Reciprocity also applies to certain crops the interior cannot produce. Idaho and Utah people, for instance, cannot grow oranges, but the million people in these two States will spend several hundred thousand dollars for this fruit during the year. It will be helping their own welfare if those oranges come from California.

It is nothing short of good business for residents of interior States to look to the West when buying manufactured goods and special fruits. The ideal circle is described by President Shepherd of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce as follows: "Manufacturing of various products is constantly increasing in California, which in turn furnishes employment to more people, who in turn can consume more Idaho products. It is sensible, therefore, for the people of Idaho to in turn use as much of California's products as they can. It is a case of reciprocity. Idaho has much to gain through the help of Los Angeles and other Coast cities."

It is quite obvious that agriculture in the interior district needs the California markets. The Coast in turn needs the interior or it soon will be to its population limits. In view of the close relationship imposed by nature it will be mutually advantageous for the two great districts to push forward together, making this business reciprocity as rule No. 1 in the key to future success.

It is really unnecessary to point out that prosperity in the western interior country spells prosperity to California in terms of what has sometimes been referred to as the Golden State's greatest crop—tourists. Our intermountain people look upon the Coast as their one best place for touring when vacation bent—the East is too far away, and California's charms are greater anyhow. A lot is heard in the intermountain country about the need for better highways to Southern California and our people are ready to work with Southern Californians to that end. We in Idaho and Montana would like nothing better than the final carrying out of the project for a really first-class highway down through Nevada to tap the existing route from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City through Las Vegas, Nev. Once the roughness of existing roads can be smoothed out and such a highway route is ours, California's Southland is going to see a lot more of us headed that way. The commercial advantages of such a route cannot, of course be overestimated."

Grapefruit Costs

Production Figures Being Gathered in Arizona Groves

PHOENIX.—Next fall, citrus growers of Salt River Valley, if they are interested, may know accurately what it costs to grow grapefruit. The figures that will be available then will come from R. M. Hess, assistant county agricultural agent, and Dr. George Barr, agricultural economist for the University of Arizona.

The project, which has been started by these two men, is a study of 3-year-old Marsh seedless grapefruit orchards exclusively. They selected twenty-five groves that were planted in 1927 for their studies. Everything about the management of each grove that might prove of interest or value in the report has been noted by the investigators. They even went through each grove and put the calipers on every fifth tree, to assure themselves of the average trunk diameter, so that the growth of one year might be learned.

In no case are they telling the grove owner how to manage his grapefruit. He may irrigate, fertilize, pick or thin as he pleases. But the investigators are making records of every little "kink" in the practice at each grove, so that if outstanding production is secured in any of them the cause and result, if possible, may be connected up.

It is planned to have the report cover every angle of the grapefruit growing business from the purchase of the land through to the returns from the packing-house. All of the groves selected market fruit through the Arizona Citrus Growers' Association, so that accurate net returns may be secured to match the cost items.

"Rule of thumb" estimates on grapefruit production in the valley place the cost at 2 cents per pound, which brings the cost on the Arizona crates to approximately $1.50 at the packing-house. Mr. Hess and Dr. Barr expect to place a stamp of authority on this figure or change it to agree with actual production costs.

FALL CROP COMPLETE

By Iva M. Mc

FALL melons are now definitely a part of the contribution which Southern California is making to the nation's food supply. Time was when the spring crop, ahead of the East's own, was all the desert thought of producing, but now city dwellers who depend upon the markets for their breakfast fruit, can look forward to the coming of Imperial Valley melons after the eastern vines have all wilted.

These desert melons, in fact, have claimed their own corner of the produce deal. They are moving forward when such established centers as Colorado have about quit, and even though a few possible melons from the other established sections may linger along, they represent a clean-up from old vines and do not begin to compare with the fresh new output from the desert.

The whole movement began as a doubtful experiment, but it worked, and though the season is short, running from about October 10 to mid or late November (the time of the first frost,) it is a definite season none the less. To be sure, melons do not have the same popularity when the weather chills as they have in the hot season, yet there is enough demand to keep a limited acreage on the job.

Fall melons from Imperial Valley are comparatively new, the first trial having been made in 1927. Just a few more were planted in 1928 and these did so well that with super-abundant optimism, 3000 acres were planted last year, which was stretching the market past its ability to return good prices. This year the acreage was cut to 1000, which seems to be about where it can stand and make a good profit. The weather has been particularly good for melons and they are coming forward with exceptional quality.

Only a few firms go into the growing of out-of-season cantaloupes, because, as easy as it may seem to plant melons when they need no protection, they are a pretty expensive late crop. In fact, the cost is said to be just as much as for the covered acreage because all the known pests in the cantaloupe world are abroad in the fall of the year and it is warfare from first to last to keep them in check. Mildew tries to get a foothild, aphis are looking for good forage and altogether it's a busy and expensive season for the grower.

To bring on the harvest by October plantings must be made about the first of August just when everybody thinks vacation ought to be at hand. Yields are never very heavy, and with the crop lasting well into November, the grower is deprived of the use of his land for the big movements of either lettuce or early cantaloupes. About the only crop he has left is the later spring melon crop, which is planted in February or March and matures by July. All such considerations do much to keep the acreage limited, which, after all, is a good thing. A few growers can make money, but if many were in the deal, it would mean a disastrous "flop."

Ordinary cantaloupes, honeydews, and honey balls make up the output. The latter two are interesting additions to the melon world, for they are as yet comparatively new and have rapidly grown in favor, while the casaba, a melon which we once saw on the market a great deal, is doing a "fade-out."

The honeydew, it seems is another triumph of that veteran cantaloupe man, I. D. Hale, who has written his name large in the melon industry. His "Hale's Best" did much to push forward the Imperial Valley industry, and it was he who adapted the French melon, White Antibes, and made of it the honeydew we know today. Mr. Hale, it appears, decided to keep this new type for himself, copyrighted the name, and increased his plantings to the point of shipping several cars to the Chocago market. But alas.

Even melons used in restaurants have seeds and one planter wishing to avail himself of seed had bought the new variety through a restaurant owner, allowing that gentleman to put the melons on his tables with the stipulation that the real buyer should have the seeds. Though they could not be called honeydews at that time, they were the real article just the same. These honeydews carry very well though they must be packed in excelsior to make the grade. They are a clean, fresh-looking melon, and many firms have taken it upon themselves to stamp their first quality grades so that the trade may become sold to these brands.

When stamping is done it must be by hand since melons cannot well be rolled through machinery. One stamper, however, can keep up with many packers since the crates are flat and the melons are easily marked just before lidding.

Some companies, especially in the summer, since a very big movement of these melons is now definitely a part of the later so-called spring crop, put special paper ribbons on their boxes to call especial attention to both brand and quality. These, too, are riveted to the lids by hand. In many of these processes the melon business stays away from the mechanical devices that characterize the citrus industry.

Another method of attracting attention to honeydews, used by some shippers is the coloring of the excelsior used around them. This gives quite a festive appearance to the pack, the light-colored melon standing out from its gay background.

It's Never Still

The honey ball is even newer than the honey dew, both having taken a name which has attracted attention. The honey ball is small and round as a ball, from which fact it gets its name. It is said to have been derived by crossing the California honeydew with the Texas Cannon Ball cantaloupe, and W. H. Parker, the breeder, so carefully carried out his work that the melon has remained practically perfect. It is said to be especially hardy and to be resistant to many of the troubles that beset other variety of melons. It does not do well if forced for early production in the spring, but fits in admirably with the summer crop and does well again in the fall.

This melon was planted first by J. W. Handy in Imperial Valley a few years ago. The initial planting was of sixty acres and the trade did not want to take even this, for so similar was it in appearance to the honeydew that it was suspected of being only a poor quality of that variety. However, it was just too good a melon to be kept down and has been making a name for itself ever since. Restaurant men are said to especially favor it because it is the right size for half-portion servings. From sixty acres in 1924 to 7000 in 1930 has been the history of its development in Imperial Valley.

Undoubtedly we are a people of fads and fancies, and the newer varieties of anything attract our attention, but growers believe that we are going to stay by both honeydews and honey balls because both have really made good. This perhaps is more especially true of the little ball which has rolled its way forward so rapidly. Even the outside is interesting, for it has preserved some of the nettings derived from its cantaloupe ancestor, while retaining the creamy white complexion of the honeydew. Within, its seed cavity is small, and the meat runs close to the rind. Altogether, it is one of nature's bargains, a very good "eating" melon, done up in a small package.

INSPECTORS GUARD CALIFORNIA BORDERS

By A. C. Fleury
State Department of Agriculture

QUARANTINE inspection of automobiles at the California border was begun in 1921. In that year, the alfalfa weevil was discovered in Western Nevada, in the vicinity of Reno and adjoining the California line. Several camp-grounds on which alfalfa was growing were found to be infested by this serious pest.

The possibility of transporting the insect into California through the medium of camping equipment was recognized and border inspection stations were established on several of the principal highways leading into this State from Nevada. The first year these stations were operated, living alfalfa weevils were found in camping equipment, demonstrating the necessity for a continuance of this type of protective work.

The following year, similar inspection stations were placed in operation on the three principal highways leading into Southern California from the eastern and southern United States. Over these southern highways traveled tourists from the cotton and citrus-growing States of the south. It was discovered that often these motorists were carrying in their baggage, as souvenirs or for planting purposes, cottonseed and cotton bolls which might be the means of introducing into California the cotton boll weevil or the pink bollworm of cotton.

Free of Cotton Pests

California, today, is the only cotton-growing State free from the cotton boll weevil or the pink bollworm of cotton. The future prosperity of the cotton industry in the State is largely dependent upon our remaining free from those pests. According to a California crop report, this State's average production of linters per acre is nearly three times that of the United States as a whole. This fortunate condition is undoubtedly due largely to the fact that the California cotton grower is not compelled to face the losses caused by the boll weevil in other States. The interception, at the border stations, of weevil-infested cotton bolls and seed in the baggage of automobile tourists is not unusual.

Motorists were also frequently found carrying citrus fruits grown in Florida or Texas, in which States the citrus canker disease occurs. As citrus fruits might readily carry that injurious infection into California, the interception of this material is of prime importance. The citrus canker disease has cost Federal and State agencies engaged in eradication efforts, and citrus growers in the infected States, upward of $13,000,000 in losses to trees and crops.

As automobile travel increased, new highways were constructed and old highways were improved, and the need for this protective border service to the agricultural industry of this State became more apparent. In the years that have followed since the inauguration of the border service in 1921, additional stations have been opened and inspection methods have been improved. During the year 1929, twenty-three border quarantine stations were being operated by the State Department of Agriculture. Through these stations, that year, there passed 537,417 automobiles, all of which were carefully inspected.

Complaints Few

Every effort is made by the inspectors engaged in this border quarantine activity, to carry on their work with as little inconvenience and delay to the traveler as is consistent with careful inspection. It is seldom that any motorist complains. Usually, when a complaint is encountered, it is due to inability on the part of the traveler to understand or recognise the importance of this protective service. Some travelers object because their word is not taken as to what they have in their possession. Experience has shown that efficient results are not secured unless actual examination of baggage is made, since travelers often have in their possession contraband plant material and fail to declare its presence to the inspector.

Failure to inform the inspector of the presence of this prohibited material is usually occasioned by oversight or misunderstanding on the part of the traveler as to what he has in his possession. It is seldom that anyone attempts deliberately to smuggle contraband through the stations. Nevertheless, it is apparent that unless actual inspection is given, contraband will not always be intercepted.

The interception in suitcases, hand grips or hat boxes, of plant material barred from admission to this State under the quarantine regulations, or of commodities infested with serious pests, is constantly occurring. In spite of the serious losses which would result to our agriculture through the introduction of these serious pests, an occasional person is encountered who holds personal desires to be of more importance than the good of the State, and who will deliberately attempt to smuggle some prised plant or a few prohibited fruits.

Smuggling Detected

Recently, a traveler wrapped Florida citrus fruits in California Sunkist orange wrappers, packed them into fruit jar cartons and attempted to get them through one of the Oregon line quarantine stations. This in spite of the fact that the fruit might have been infested with Mediterranean fruit fly, that very injurious pest which has occasioned such losses to the fruit industry of every country where it has ever become established. Contraband fruits have even been taken from inside a spare tire carried on the rear of the carrier of an automobile. Contraband cottonseed has been found stuffed inside dolls and other toys.

Cotton bolls and seed infested with live boll weevil have been taken from homemade mattresses, pillows and other equipment, illustrating the extent to which inspection must go if adequate protection is to be secured.

RIDING to HOUNDS

Lovers of the Chase Perpetuate the Ancient and Honorable Sport in Southern California With Don Coyote as the Quarry

By Ben F. Pearman

DOWN through the centuries, running neck and neck with "the sport of kings," has come that great "sport of the aristocracy"—riding to hounds. Employing as they do the thoroughbred equine and a high degree of horsemanship, they have a close affinity, though the attraction is considerably broadened in the hunting diversion because of the interest centering in the work of the dogs and pursuit of the quarry, rather than in that of the horse.

It is a far cry from romantic Merrie England, where the red-coated landed gentry and their ladies follow the baying packs to the tune of the hunt-master's horn, to California and our version of the ancient sport. The red coats and the huntsman's horn are dispensed with here and the mounts of the hunters are quite frequently innocent of ancient pedigrees, making up for the lack by their toughness and general fitness for the task.

Nor are the hunters in California necessarily of the landed gentry or wealthy aristocracy. In fact the followers of the hounds here are from all classes of various communities and they have this in common: that they are lovers of a good chase, and above all else, they are devoted to the development and perpetuation of the ancient and honorable breed of dog known to sportsmen of all time as the "foxhound."

It will doubtless come as a surprise to those unversed in the sport of the chase to learn that Southern California boasts some of the finest foxhounds in the country, representing the most famous strains of America some of which have been brought down through countless generations from the very packs which were the sporting pride of a past age in the Old Land. Among the great strains represented here are the Walker, Trigg, July, Trumbo and Goodman and they carry the blood lines of such sires as Big Stride, Champion Herrin, King Phillip, Honest Fred and Champion Scout, all noted winners of competetive events in the field and on the bench. Thus, while the blooded mounts of another day and place have given way to better fitted, if more plebeian horses, the hounds themselves still lend to the sport the aristocratic touch of the chase in other lands.

Nor is the quarry pursued by the followers of the hounds in California that wily little red trickster, Sir Reynard, of the fluffy brush and tireless speed. His habitat does not include the Pacific Slope and his smaller cousin, the California gray fox, does not adapt himself to the game of fox and hounds in a manner to make the sport worth while. But, coming to the rescue of the lovers of the chase, Don Coyote, the swift and slinky gray shadow of the West, so ably substitutes for his red distant-kinsman that the sport loses no whit of its zest and the fast-trailing dogs must extend themselves, indeed, if they would overhaul their shifty and game little quarry.

The bobcat sometimes furnishes the Southern Californians with brief chases, but he is not regarded as good game as he runs for only fifteen to thirty minutes and then takes to a tree. The cat usually jumps out as the men approach, and if not caught, another short chase ensues, the treeing tactics being repeated. When the wild cat finally is captured he fights like a veritable fury, often doing serious damage to the hounds, especially if they are young and inexperienced.

In almost every State the foxhound fanciers have organizations, those east

QUARANTINE inspection of automobiles at the California border was begun in 1921. Graceful Montbretias of Novel Giant Types

EXQUISITE blossoms 3 to 4 inches in diameter with broad, overlapping petals displaying the daintiness of orchids, and beautifully poised in spraylike formation on gracefully-arched spikes 3 to 4 feet tall—those characteristics distinguish the new giant-flowered hybrid Montbretias as superb garden subjects with special value for cutting purposes, charming and lasting.

Their loveliness is marvelous in the sprays and individual blooms; and as mass effects they present glorious sheets of color with the advent of the autumn months. The foliage is long and glossy, dark-green, shaped like that of Gladioli but narrower, and forms a striking foil to the handsome spikes of blossoms. The bulbs are sure growers, increase rapidly, making large clumps and spreading season after season, and should be divided and reset every second year. We can immediately deliver the following magnificent varieties:

HIS MAJESTY. An admirable free-blooming sort which produces veritable sheaves of flower spikes on established clumps. One of the tallest, 4 feet, and bears many immense blossoms on elegantly-arranged branching spikes. The center of the flower is deep golden-yellow, shading and deepening to brilliant crimson-scarlet at the outer portion of the petals—a dashing color parade.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA. This vigorous-growing kind throws quantities of strong spikes 3 to 4 feet high furnished with an abundance of very large, perfectly-formed blossoms of gorgeous, glistening orange-spotted purple-crimson at the base—a rich showing of distinctive character and beauty.

UNA. Indeed a gem variety forming bushy and compact plants with long and linear leaves. The flower stems grow about 3 feet tall and bear perfect masses of pure orange-colored blossoms, with reverse of petals a glamorous shade of crimson-bronze. This is particularly meritorious and effective massed in the herbaceous border.

Choice bulbs, each, 35c; 3 bulbs, (1 of each kind if desired) $1.00; dozen, (4 of each variety) $3.50

Mother's Boy

By Alma Whitaker

ALL the evidence points to the fact that our nicer crooks are all fond mother's boys.

When the notorious Mr. Jack Diamond suffered some bodily embarrassment at the hands of his jealous rivals, for instance, we read that Jack babbled about his mother. It must have been true, for surely even the most inspired male reporter would not be reduced to writing sob-stuff about a criminal unless it were indeed a fact.

When crooks in motion pictures babbled about their mammas in times of stress, I used to wax a trifle cynical. Why couldn't our dear Hollywood be a little more true to life?

But, upon visiting our State penitentiary, chock full of hard-boiled criminals, I learned that these tough chaps really do wax maudlin about their mothers on any and every occasion. So that, when Frances Marion had Wally Beery whimper on the subject in "The Big House," she really was being a faithful portrayer of that sort of a character.

Now in a general way, when they have achieved fame in other and more worthy lines, men are not apt to drag their mothers in on all possible opportunities. Of course, their press agents will occasionally do it for them (without necessarily realising the class it puts their valued clients in,) but for the most part even a movie actor or a boisterous politician is content to love his mother in comparative secrecy.

Which, when you come to think of it, is a bit rough on the mothers. The crooks claiming 'em loudly and insisting that they were angel women, and the more distinguished notables keeping their mothers in the background, probably, of course, from the nicest possible feelings of delicacy . . . but nevertheless barring them from some of the glory.

It wasn't Lindbergh, for instance, who dragged his mamma into the limelight. That was a bright reporter in Lindy's own home town. Commander Byrd's mother doesn't seem to have had her full innings. But Jack Diamond's mother . . . bless you, she was mentioned in every newspaper in the country and some in Europe, the moment Jack blossomed into the limelight so awkwardly.

So it looks like an old Adamish trick on the part of the male . . . pointing to ma when he's a bad, bad boy and disgracing the family, and keeping her dark, minus all credit, when he's doing fine, thank you.

In fact, it is when these bad men feel terribly sorry for themselves and get in a tight corner, and almost begin to suspect that crime doesn't pay, that they insist upon remembering their mothers, and blubbering about them. The other kind have to be exhorted to send flowers and write to mother on Mother's Day.

It isn't fair. It almost shoves all the blame on mother when a chap goes wrong, but declining she had anything to do with it, when things go just grand.

So now we come to the question, "is it better to be a stern good mother, who is not necessarily loved at all, and whose boy won't whimper how much he loves her under stress . . . or a weak, bad mother whose boy wants to tell the world how much he loves her?"

So many of us seem to come under one or the other of those headings. I should say the hardest thing is for a mother to be both a strong disciplinarian and a beloved and protected little mamma. On the other hand, it's so jolly to be affectionate, and easy going and refuse to be a horrid disciplinarian . . . only to have sonny boy weep hot salt tears about his dear, dear mudder when he's shot by some rival crooks.

Naturally most of us try to be both . . . just enough discipline, but lots of non-interference. Either way we get the neighbors down on us and preachers demanding. "What are the mothers thinking of?"

As to the non-interference policy . . . "Use your own judgment, my son. Far be it from me to thwart your young life," etc. . . . A boy with that sort of a mother can hardly ever do anything.

"Gee whiz, if you'd only forbid me to go and get mad about it, I might have a great time defying the family and all that, and maybe make something of myself, just to prove I was right. But when you smile and say 'Use your own judgment, dear, it's your life.' Bah!"

As a matter of fact, these boy-men of ours are afraid of their own judgment. The only thing that ever gets them to the point of making up their mind and sticking to it, is fierce opposition. Lots of mothers must have been simply grand at fierce opposition, with infinite success when you come to think of it.

Yet nowadays, we mothers are being urged on all sides to give our male offspring "encouragement." That, we are to understand, is the great need of the age.

All the same, the male of the species usually shines at his best, if he's got it in him, on hardship and discouragement. Talk to half our successful men and hear them tell of the discouragement they thrived on, the thwarting they overcame. Nothing makes them wax so enthusiastic as recalling their thwarts.

I love to hear the dear Parent-Teacher Association discussing the subject of mothers. You'd think they were all teachers. But oh, no, it's the mothers in that organization who criticise mothers most. The idea is that all the mothers in the P.T.A. are about perfect and all the rest pretty bad.

One dame who has exhorted the mothers to greater virtue, sort of hinting that if we were all like her, there wouldn't be a mother's son in jail, has a couple of youngsters. I've been keeping tab on her for two or three years now. Not that I disbelieve her, you understand, for who am I to know a good mother when I see one? But I do sort of want to see whether her children make any particular hit in the world. They may at that . . . for she's a stern disciplinarian, if we are to believe all she tells us. Still, she's going to be mad if they run away from home, under the urge of opposition, in order to make good.

Of course, the ideal arrangement is to have father the stern disciplinarian and do all the jolly thwarting, and mother the sweet sympathizer and encourager. A bogie in the house seems so important and it really should be father. But so few fathers are really good bogies these days. They greatly prefer bringing home candy in their pockets, and begging mother to let the children go to picture shows on school nights, and generally undermining mother's feeble attempts at discipline. If there's going to be any bogie it almost always has to be mother.

I am prepared to wager then that none of those blubbery criminals who wail about their mammas, ever had a good black bogie father? And there's simply got to be a good bogie in the offing if mother is to be forever giving sonny boy "encouragement."

A Ballad o' Broadway

When the beacons of light pierce the mantle of night,
And the sunshine from Broadway has fled,
When the toilers by day have all flitted away,
And are restfully sleeping in bed,
Comes the patrons of ease, with palates to please,
Desires that dollars can fill,
Whose every demand is instantly planned,
As an item to add to their bill.
For these people whose play turns the night into day,
In a world that is wholly their own,
Have no thought of remorse—it's a matter of course
That the seeds of temptation are sown.
There's no pang of regret for those caught in the net
That is lavishly baited with gold,
That swiftly will bring those in search of a fling
To the arms of its festering fold.
From a town in the west, from those she loved best,
Came a maiden so carefree and gay,
To a future of fame, for in fancy her name
Would sparkle in lights on Broadway.
Her pathway was plain when she boarded the train;
She smiled as she pleasantly thought
Of a roseate career, on the stage to appear,
Of the beaux and the bouquets they brought.
So ambition was fed, which so often has led
To the stairs of the easiest way;
You can travel until you are handed the bill
That a girl is expected to pay.
And she traveled with speed till the pressure of need
Pointed out an old path to success,
Paved thickly with gold, where honor is sold,
Your future fixed for a caress.
A whisper—a date—then, finding too late
That the world is not colored so gay,
And life's not the same, tho' it's part of the game
That a greenhorn's expected to play.
She had entered the race with a brave, smiling face,
Today she is counting the cost;
She has settled her score and added one more
To the list of the maidens that lost.

Questioning

If it be true that of my Fate I'm master—
If it be true I'm captain of my soul—
Then why my spirit's trembling 'neath disaster,
And whence, my heart, this bitterness you know?

Rather it seems, we lightly touch life's wheel in guiding
Our cargoes strange through storms and waters chill.
The Why—the Answer to our ceaseless searching, crying—
Not ours to know at will.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and damaged ligaments complicate matters still further. We make supports from carefully prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored to as normal a shape as possible. We have an extensive experience in the correction of flat-feet, broken down arches and other deformities of the feet, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often restore daintiness of appearance to feet badly deformed and unsightly.

say that a quart-and-a-half or two quarts is the desired quantity.

The average eighteen-month-old infant—if all other conditions be satisfactory—should have milk three times per day without dilution.

Constant readers of this department know, of course, that I favor raw milk as against pasteurized.

An eighteen-month-old baby will, under conditions of good health, consume approximately from ten to twelve ounces of undiluted milk per feeding. This makes a total of from thirty to thirty-six ounces or about one quart.

Allowance should be made for individual variation.

Do not understand by my expression in this matter that a child should have nothing else but milk three times per day. At eighteen months he should have a considerable variety of other foods, generally including all of the fruits, all of the vegetables, some of the dairy products such as cottage cheese, butter, and so forth, together with breadstuffs and cereals of whole grain texture.

Heart Pulsation

Question: What causes irregular pulsations of the heart—a few normal beats and then twice in rapid succession? It ocurs fcrequently at night.

Answer: I wish I really knew accurately and definitely so that I could tell all the world what causes abnormalities of the heart—whether such abnormalities be wrong heart-beats, heart leakages, or whatnot.

There are probably at least two hundred different diseases which, according to the weight of authority, are responsible for this condition. A bad stomach, Bright's disease, tuberculosis, an old pneumonia condition, infected tonsils, gout, nephritis, gonorrhea, syphilis—these are but a few, and, as I repeat, there are scores of others.

One of the reasons why phenomena of this type occur during the night is that in a prone position the abdominal organs tend to press against the diaphragm more than they do in an upright position.

Whether this is true in the case of the writer, I don't know. I shall say this, however; That the existence of these symptoms indicates she should procure a physical examination to ascertain what the trouble may be. A doctor skilled in auscultation (listening with the stethoscope) can usually tell whether the heart is defective or not.

If it is, then the ordinary precautions which I have so frequently stated, should be applied.

If you have not read the articles on heart trouble, write to me on your specific complaint and I shall be very glad to enlarge upon it.

A Page Conducted by JOHN STEVEN McGROARTY

Madrid, Wednesday, Oct. 15

This day we mark upon the calendar as the red-letter day of our lives.

Porque? Why, because today we called on His Majesty, the King, and that, afterward, His Majesty, the King, called on us.

Which is to say that shortly after noon we were received by Alfonso XIII in the royal palace of Madrid, spending the better part of an hour in friendly and informal intercourse with him. And that, toward evening, he motored out to the university and returned our call.

Could more be asked? And if that doesn't constitute a red-letter day, then what would you call a red-letter day?

We were escorted from the university to the palace by his excellency the Visconde de Casa Aguilar, who presented us.

We were assembled in a waiting room where there were already in waiting a number of brilliantly uniformed army officers, a cardinal in scarlet robes and several ladies and gentlemen of the nobility. The visconde and ourselves were, however, the first to be called into the presence of His Majesty.

When we entered the room where the King awaited us, he stood smiling to greet us and came quickly forward with extended hand.

I saw a tall, lithe figure, clad in khaki, a soft flannel shirt with soft collar and a plain dark green tie. The room might have been the office of a fairly prosperous American business man. There was nothing elaborate or ornate about it.

In the friendliest and most informal manner imaginable His Majesty invited me to a seat, drawing another chair beside it, opened his cigarette case and lighted one of them for me.

Whatever apprehensions I may have had about meeting a king passed instantly away. He was so very human, so exceedingly cordial, that I was quickly at ease. He has a wonderful smile and is much more engaging to look at than the pictures made of him would indicate. He is fully six feet tall, strong of body and of mind. He walks with the swinging stride of an athlete.

We had a long and a happy talk together.

He was very eager to listen to all I had to tell him about California, the story of the old missions and the founding of the City of Los Angeles interesting him particularly.

When I presented him with the beautifully embossed parchment scroll which set forth the invitation of the Mayor and City Council to him and the Queen to visit Los Angeles next year on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the founding of the city, he was undisguisedly deeply pleased. When I told him of the high esteem and the real affection in which he is held by the American people and especially by the people of California, his eyes were misty.

Tell your people that nothing could make me happier than to visit America, he said. And tell them I will go, surely, to Los Angeles next year, unless some serious obstacle arises. I really do very much desire to go.

I assured him that he would receive a welcome such as no other living man could hope to receive. And this again pleased him deeply. And again his eyes were misty. It was a long interview for a monarch to grant to a plain citizen of another country.

Just before taking our leave the King informed me that the decoration of the Order of Isabella the Catholic had been conferred upon me and that the insignia would be forwarded to me as soon as the necessary formalities could be completed.

There was no kneeling down, no touch of a sword on the head for this. Only the strong grasp of a strong King's hand and the light of his friendly smile.

We had scarcely returned to the university when the Casa del Amo was thrown into a state of excitement by the announcement from Visconde Aguilar that the King was coming to make us a visit.

He arrived at about half past four in a motor car with the Duke of Miranda and three other friends. No troops accompanied him, no escolta. He came as any of his subjects might come.

It was his first visit to Casa del Amo since the House of International Students was completed. He asked us if we were comfortable and happy there, and upon our assurance that we were ideally bestowed, he went through the whole beautiful structure, literally "from the cellar to the garret," bidding me to convey his great appreciation to Dr. del Amo in Los Angeles for his splendid gift.

I watched the King as he swung down the roadway to his car, the cheers of the students, "Viva el Rey," ringing in his ears.

And I wondered upon what misguided information the rumor could have gone abroad that the throne of Alfonso XIII is tottering to a fall.

I have seen the man at close range, intimately. And I have for the second time studied Spain with a newspaper man's trained observation. I think I am able to form a conclusion.

The throne will not totter so long as Alfonso is anywhere near the man he is now. He is a strong man. There are strong men around him. Spain is striding forward, not slipping. It is a great country still, and will be greater. It is rebuilding its old university at a cost of $30,000,000. Its cities are vastly improved since I saw them last.

I am not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet, but I would gladly wager my store of pesetas on the stability of Spain and on a future for it that may bid fair to outshine that glory which once dazzled the world.

The incidents that I have related have made our stay in Madrid notable; other things have made the sojourn also pleasant.

Madrid, Friday, Oct. 17

Our trip through the royal palace was a sheer delight because of the wonder of the place. And it is indeed a "trip," the place is so vast. It is filled with priceless treasures of art. Its furnishings constitute a story in itself. The centuries have contributed to its grandeur.

It is said to be the finest of all the European royal houses. It was begun by Philip V in 1738 and finished by Charles III in 1764.

When Napoleon ascended the great main staircase to place his brother Joseph on the Spanish throne he said to Joseph: "You will be lodged better than I." But, it seems that Joseph did not have much joy of it during the eight years he more or less occupied the palace. His little brother Napoleon was near the end of his string.

We were personally conducted through, and many doors not often opened were opened to us.

We spent a day in Toledo on that marvelous rocky hill above the Tagus where the best swords in the world were wrought. Old Toledo, old almost as the rocks themselves, and where the marks of Moor, Saracen, Visigoth and Roman are still to be seen. Toledo, up to which Hannibal shouted to the Iberian Celts to come down and join him on the march across Italy to storm the gates of Rome.

And we were at the Escarial, tomb of kings, the most magnificent mausoleum in the world, the building of which was the passion of the sad, morose monarch, Philip II.

In another day or so we leave for Barcelona, from which port we sail across the Mediterranean to Italy.

Aboard the "Franca Fassio" Sunday, Oct. 19

Sailing from the port of Barcelona bound for Genoa on this sturdy little Italian ship, we have had a real experience in seafaring.

The voyage is across the Gulf of Lion. You must pronounce it "Lee-own." but if you are not of the blood of the Phoenicians, and, therefore, no true sailor, you will probably not be interested in how anybody pronounces the name. You will be imprisoned in your cabin, strapped in your berth, dying a thousand deaths, yet knowing that you still must live.

Crossing the English Channel in its worst moods is like sailing the waters of a swimming pool as compared to the Gulf of Lion when it is at its very gentlest best.

It seems that the waters of the Mediterranean are a bit crowded up here in the Gulfo de Lion. And they get mad about it. They rush back from the Costa Bravo to meet big swells from the open sea, and when these currents meet they try to see which will get the best of it.

The result is something to make a man's heart ache for his fellow-voyagers who are not beloved of wild sea waters.

There need be no storm or battle of great winds to churn up the Gulf of Lion. It is simply its natural disposition to be rough. It was born that way. It doesn't act as it does simply to be mean. It just can't help it, that's all.

And, as far as I am myself concerned, I am finding no fault with it from any point of view whatever. I am of the Phoeniciana, and, therefore, voyaged upon the old sea paths of by ancestors.

I stood on the decks of the "Franca Fassio" elate with the joy of the sea, my solar plexus serene, the pit of my stomach as quiet and well behaved as I could ask.

Sorry though I was for my poor fellow-passengers wearing their wretched hours away in unspeakable misery in the cabins below, their unfortunate situation proved advantageous to me. The deck was all mine. I was a sea king sailing in my own ship.

It was a day of moody weather, alternating cloud and sun, blue sky and dashes of rain. Withal, balmy like a day in May among the old blue hills of home.

We left Barcelona in a pouring rain which ceased soon after we cleared the busy harbor. Then, all day long until near dark, we sailed in sight of the Costa Bravo of Spain, famed in song and story. The white buildings of the fishermen's cities flung their hailings of welcome to us. Hilltop after hilltop rose before us with the passing leagues, each hill with its frown of Moorish castle.

It was with the great centuries of the past that we voyaged. Upon these very billows the ships of the Phoenicians sailed—the first to sail. Here, for mastery, fought Moor and Saracen and Visigoth, Gaul and Briton, only to leave it all at last to the Catalan and Spain whose land it first was.

It is strange what dreams will stir the heart under circumstances such as these. Somehow or other I could not escape a sense of reincarnation. The Costa Bravo seemed not unfamiliar to my eyes. Only the ancient Moorish castles on the hilltops seemed new. I had a feeling that they had not yet been builded when I was last on the Costa Bravo. I was before their time, doubtless. And so, that would put me with Hannibal and his two brothers on the march to Italy to storm the gates of Rome.

Scalp Eruptions

Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

My husband has been troubled with his scalp for several months. It first started at the back of the head in the form of whitehead pimples. They come to a head, break and discharge, and are extremely itchy.

After trying various remedies they gradually healed, only to break out on the top of the head.

He is an automobile mechanic, working quite a bit in oil and grease.

We are wondering if he is getting an overabundance of certain foods.

We shall appreciate any advice that you may be able to give us. A READER.

Many occupations, from a health standpoint, are frequently undesirable.

Our legislatures are constantly grinding out laws to make the physical end of machinery safer and safer.

Unfortunately, the chemical end is not so well understood and chemical abuses are permitted to continue largely because they are little understood.

The skin has an absorptive power capable of taking into the bloodstream fluids with which it comes in contact.

Automobile mechanics, workers in paint factories, dye houses, gasoline-cleaning concerns, ink factories, photographic laboratories and similar establishments where volatile chemicals are handled, frequently suffer from skin diseases, due to the chemicals contracted.

Of course, it would be preposterous for me to recommend the abolition of these industries or even the giving-up of one's job merely because of these chemical contacts.

What can be done, however, is to give more and better attention to the hygienic safeguards and precautions.

For instance, the average automobile mechanic will keep grease and oil on his skin for his entire eight or nine-hour shift. Then he is frequently indifferent about its complete removal.

The result is that some absorption is bound to take place.

Were he to clean his hands of the grease and oil five or six times per day, he could avoid most of the injurious effects.

The same applies to workers in all other industries where they use or contact chemicals.

The important points of information I can furnish are to give a free and easy circulation to the scalp, to do without a hat, to massage the scalp once or twice per day and to accustom it to cold water, air and sunshine.

Infant Formula

Question: Is half a pint of milk a day enough for an eighteen-month-old baby?

Answer: In the field of diet quantities, there is a considerable distinction between a minimum and maximum. This applies to adults as well as to infants.

Although I have had many infants under my care, I seldom or never prescribe a definite quantity of any food to be consumed.

The variation will be the same as with adults. That is, one day they will consume more—another day, less.

For instance, a new-born infant will consume from three-fourths of an ounce to as much as three ounces—a variation of nearly 400 per cent.

The same general rule applies for older babies.

The best procedure for an infant who cannot express himself is to give him as much as he will consume within a given period of time. For all ordinary infants, half an hour should suffice to cover their full meal periods.

Now, when we take a general average of all children and apply it to a total food quantity, we may then easily say that half a pint of milk is totally inadequate for an eighteen-month-old baby. We cannot, on the other hand, of the Mississippi River being known as "fox-hunting associations" and those of the western part of the country, where the coyote forms the quarry of the chase, being known as "wolf-hunting associations." The foxhound lovers of California have become so numerous that they are now preparing for organization which is expected to be consummated soon under the name of "The California Wolf Hunters' Association."

Riding to Hounds

The purpose will be that of all such organizations to effect the breeding and development of better hounds and horses and to promote a wider interest in the ancient sport of the chase. They expect to follow the program of other similar associations, holding semiannual and annual meets, field trials and bench shows for their foxhounds, award prizes to the winners and invite hunters from other States to bring their dogs and enter them in competitive runs.

The association meets offer much of interest, not only to the hound fancier and sportsman, but to the layman as well. Among the trials are free-for-all races for hounds two years old or less; those for stud hounds, and specials for stud hounds, the latter an important event in association circles. The winners of the different contests are finally entered in an endurance race and the dog which takes that stake is just about worth his weight in cash money to his owner as a breeder. The endurance contest is a strenuous one as the entrants all have been running for three or four days before being started in this event, which may last as long as eight hours. The dogs that last through this chase are made of stern stuff and are fit to become the sires and dams of famous strains.

Several counties of Southern California boast good packs of foxhounds in the breeding and development of which no pains have been spared by their owners, all of whom are keen sportsmen and devotees of the chase.

In Orange county Henry Luther, Leo Douglas, Adolph Friend, Gus Ward, Jim Connelly, Ed Gains and Ed Hunter follow the hounds regularly and some splendid runs have been enjoyed by the writer in their company on the O'Neal, Bixby, Moulton and Irvine ranches.

At Welch's playground up on the Ridge Route, a very fine pack of hounds is maintained and run frequently by James Welch.

There is a merry crew of foxhound fanciers in Ventura county, centering at Oxnard. They include George P. Austin, Eugene Agee, Joe and Bernie Mouldoon and George Bushell, known to friends as the "Happy Family;" and their numbers are augmented frequently by other devotees of the chase who join them in the runs. Father McCarthy, a young Catholic priest who has charge of a boys' school at Ojai, has a pack of fine hounds and regularly joins the Oxnard boys in a chase.

The sport of riding to hounds is perhaps one of the most ancient, having come down to us from remote times when it was practiced for the prime purpose of procuring meat for a larder which depended almost entirely upon the chase. In England it developed into its highest form as a fashionable sporting pastime and is still practiced in much the same manner and with the same equipment as in the days of the Middle Ages.

It was but a natural reaction of the aristocratic English Colonials in America that the popular sport of their mother country should be perpetuated in the land of their adoption. Thus, riding to hounds became the fashionable pastime of the Atlantic Coast colonies, especially those of English origin and of aristocratic complexion. These hunt clubs, with all the social flair of their forerunners, exist today in most of the eastern and some of the western States.

In the earlier form of the sport the catching of the quarry was a part of the program—and still is in the old land, the object being to be "in at the death," the first hunter arriving at the termination of the chase claiming the "brush," or tail of the fox, as a trophy. In America, with the scarcity of suitable quarry growing more and more pronounced, makeshift means have been adopted, such as the dragging of artificial bait over a course which the hounds follow readily, and the breeding or trapping of foxes for the hunt.

The more popular and widely practiced type of chase, however, in which the pomp and eclat of fashionable society are entirely dispensed with, has as its sole object the chase, itself, and the capture of the quarry is not only undesired, but is deplored. In most of the eastern States the man who kills a fox is regarded in somewhat the same light as the cattle rustler of the old West by his fox-hunting neighbors.

The hunt in California partakes of both the day and night forms. The latter is participated in actively by the hounds only; the hunters remaining on high ground from which vantage point the hearing is better. The "music" of the pack is the pleasure derived from the night hunt but it is a popular type of the sport and in many eastern localities is the only form of fox-hunting indulged in. On the West Coast night hunting is necessary during the dry season as the ground is so dry during the day that it will not hold a scent sufficiently for the dogs to trail well. The foxhound depends entirely on his nose and does not run by sight, as do some other less efficient trailers.

Don Coyote, the quarry.

The Happy Family pack, Oxnard, Cal.

The riding to hounds is done in the daylight hunting only. The mount is a very important feature and, while the standard-bred hunter is used to a limited extent, the western type of horse is the safest and most practical mount for California hunting, especially if he is ranch-bred and has worked as a stock horse. He is sure-footed, knows how to avoid gopher holes and can tell by the appearance of the earth whether it is soft or offers safe going—and this while traveling at high speed. He can go longer when properly ridden than any other type of horse.

The western riding outfit is best for these mounts though a few prefer the English equipment, the latter requiring a very expert type of horsemanship, however. The going is often extremely rough and through dense growth; but the danger is one of the attractions of the chase and a chief factor in its popularity.

It is difficult to explain the charm of the sport to the uninitiated. It is the "music" of the pack which appeals most to the follower of the hounds and he would readily chuck a performance of grand opera or a philharmonic concert to indulge his weakness. The horsemanship also draws some men to the daylight form, of course, but the veteran fox or wolf hunter seems to draw most pleasure from the night hunts, the tonguing of the hounds representing the acme of things harmonious to him.

When the velvet softness of night envelopes the world rendering all but the nearest objects invisible, sounds seem to be more melodious, more modified and enhanced in beauty than in the light of day, while the winking lights of the distant cities increase the feeling of one's remoteness. It is then that the baying of the hounds is veritable music—the finest music in the world to the huntsman's ear. The long, sweet bugling note, the short, crashing chop, the deep "boohing" throaty tone; the high, piercing squall and the wailing note of weirdness, all blended into a chorus which is inconceivably harmonious, carrying at times its solos and obligations. It is the melody of the pack in full cry—the mania of the follower of the hounds.

In California the chase is a year-round sport. There is no closed season on Don Coyote, for man's hand is eternally against him. But he is irrepressible and crafty, cunning and swift. Always he gives the dogs a good chase, usually eluding them. But occasionally, the shifty little gray shadow of the West falls the victim of the rushing hounds. When he does he passes out silently, without a whimper, for he is a stoic by nature and dies game. And though he is a predatory little beast, the huntsmen are sorry when he is caught, for a live coyote will give them another run—a dead one never does.

And that is the spirit of the chase in California.

WITH the POETS

The House in the Hills

I sing of a dwelling far back in the hills,
Surrounded by a beautiful stillness that thrills, the heart of man—
It is guarded by day and by night, from above,
By the symbol of God, of peace and of love—
The goal of man.
I wish it were mine, when my day was done,
From earthly things, lulled deep in
And there to commune with Him whose Hand,
Has wrought the beauty of the land—
The Maker of man.

RICHARD H. KING.

Hope

The beacon light whereby we see
Our dim, uncertain paths to tread,
A vital spark that fires the soul
When that faint soul is all but dead,
A voice that dares resist defeat,
A song that soothes our utmost pain—
Its name is Hope—by its good strength
Malignant fears are slain!

Like April sunshine through a rift
In treacherous, leaden skies;
Like water in a desert land,
Like food that fills and satisfies,
Hope springs eternal as the years—
No human heart too dumb to feel
Its gracious presence—it alone
Life's deeper wounds doth heal.

Unsung Heroes

We hymn about our heroes,
'Til their glory sweeps the earth,
And sing about their noble deeds,
And warble of their worth!
But there are some "unsung" ones still,
Who've faced life's "ups and downs;"
'Bout fifty million, more or less,
In twenty thousand towns!

So let us sing about the ones
Who struggle on alone;
Heroic ones who bravely work
Their fingers to the bone,
To make this world a better place
For all of us to live;
Who take such jobs as they can get,
And honest service give!

The ones who strive with brain and brawn,
To do their earthly "bit;"
The ones who bravely struggle on,
And get small praise for it;
Who bear their burdens; do their best;
Give thanks for what they get;
The "unsung heroes" of our land—
That God will not forget!

CARE OF THE BODY

troubles—some peculiar to one or the other and many common to both. Of them all, I may truthfully say that prostatitis is one of the most irritant, vitality-exhausting and health-bedraggling ailments that men may get. I do not know of any figures on it but I do not believe I would be far off in my estimate that at least one out of every three men past the age of 60 has this trouble in a mild or aggravated form.

Prostatitis is not an ailment that comes on acutely. It is rather a sequence to a long chain of pre-existing causative factors. It comes from the chronic overloading of the intestines. It comes from the absorption of poisons from the adjacent structures.

There is no doubt in my mind but that the universal prevalence of venereal disease with such a large number accounts for the early weakening of this gland.

Prostatitis is usually co-existent with a depleted sexual system—sometimes with an irritant bladder but invariably with a long, preceding history of sexual excesses, chronic constipation, laxatives, alcohols and stimulants.

The symptoms are very apparent. The patient feels a constant pelvic depression. He finds it more and more difficult to control urinary function. In very severe cases he might even be compelled to resort to the catheter permanently or temporarily.

Prostatitis affects urinary function mainly through pressure and secondarily through irritation.

The prostate gland lies at the base of the bladder. As a sex function, it empties through the channels used by the bladder.

Venereal infection invariably affects the prostate. The drain of our sexual excesses is responsible for much of the depletion through prostatitis.

Far more important is the constant bloating, pressure and irritation of the adjacent rectum.

The prostate lies somewhat below and midway between the bladder in front and the rectum posteriorly. As such, it is is subject to the mechanical displacements—the typical prolapse which occurs with elderly men who have little or no abdominal exercise.

The chronic taking of enemas and bowel bloating and ballooning which we find in so many cases are responsible for the constant pressure.

Far more important than the loss of sleep and the urinary disturbances caused by this trouble is the seepage of prostatic fluid.

Prostatic fluid is a vital sexual secretion of fundamental importance in the body economy.

He who preaches sexual conservation during advanced age is not preaching idly. There is sound reasoning behind it.

The celebrated operations of Steinach in which the passageway is severed, preventing some of these important sexual secretions from leaving the body, have as their foundation this vital conservation.

In a typical prostatitis there is some seepage of prostatic fluid with practically every urination. The patient suffers as if he were guilty of the most tremendous excesses—yet he may be living a very rigid and continent life.

This is the reason for the tremendous depletion—hence, the great importance for its cure.

He who recommends the indiscriminate removal of an enlarged and inflamed prostate gland is literally fooling with death. The mortality is far too great to justify the procedure even if it were sound from a reasoning basis. It is not.

We do not cure any inflamed structure by its surgical excision.

Were we to bear this in mind we would save countless operations.

Relief is not granted by the surgeon's knife. The uncertainty as to the results should not be lost sight of.

There are no drugs which are in any sense available. Most of them are painkillers—so-called analgesics—very often containing powerful narcotics.

The action of such drugs is notorious in the manner in which they seep vitality. We cannot kill pain without paying the price in its proportion of health destruction.

The cause must lie more deep-rooted

First and foremost, is the condition of the blood stream proper?

The coffee-drinker or the person consuming large quantities of meats, stimulants, sugars and delicatessen goods can never get well via this route. It doesn't particularly matter whether he takes goat glands or the well-advertised remedies. His quest is futile.

Diet restriction and control are of the utmost importance. The simple fruits and vegetables are mainly recommended—and very little of those.

Overeating is the greatest crime for the prostatitis sufferer.

Next of great importance is keeping the bowels active and open. I do not recommend enemas. The measures I have repeated so often in this column concerning constipation should be used.

Procure my leaflet on the subject of constipation. It is available to any Times reader for a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a loose 2-cent stamp.

The bowels must move naturally—of their own accord—two and three times per day in order to relieve the pressure of waste materials against the prostate.

The prostatitis sufferer who has an active sex life is literally a criminal to his own body. He cannot afford the depletion nor can he in any sense lose the vital fluids of the prostate gland.

If the pain is very severe he can usually secure reasonably good relief by hot sits baths or by the application of a warmed rectal dilator.

There are several of such devices on the market.

Inserted into the rectum, heat is transmitted directly to the prostate gland.

Such devices serve an alleviative function although, to my knowledge, they cannot cure prostatitis. They are a good form of drugless relief.

It is in careful living that we find the only hope for the solution of the trouble.

The bladder problem may be solved in its particular way as well.

Hot packs will often relieve an in-

FEET HURT

Our method of making and adjusting arch supports and foot appliances has been endorsed by many prominent people of this and other states. This NEW SYSTEM of foot correction is years ahead of any other method that we know of, for it relieves foot pains in many instances almost instantly, and gives permanent relief. Our feather weight supports overcome fallen arches, swollen ankles, run-over heels, weak feet, flat foot, painful heels, pains in the knee, leg and back; prevents corns, bunions, etc. The following are extracts from a few of the many testimonials that we have received from grateful people.

May I express my appreciation of the success you have made in correcting my wife's foot trouble?

DR. A. N. WARD, A.M., D.D., LL.D.

It is a pleasure for me to thank you for the effective service you have given me. When I came to you my arches were completely broken down, walking was a torture. The whole system was badly affected by the condition of my feet. After the first visit I grew better, and have continued to improve. I realize that my case was of long standing and thus I am so much more confident of your method and arch supports. I consider it a duty to let sufferers know what he can do for them.

Santa Claus Becomes Juvenile

The Poor Little Rich Girl Is No Longer Poor, as Happiness and Profitable Training Come Through Cheering Others at Christmas Time.

By LANNIE HAYNES MARTIN

Juanita Stancliff weaving a rug for Christmas.

NO ONE today will contest the statement that everything in the world is changing. People, customs, amusements, the relation of one thing and one person to another. Even Christmas is changing. People are beginning to believe in Santa Claus again. Each person, young and old, is beginning to believe that he or she can be Santa Claus to some one else, and in this belief the real spirit of Christmas is coming to pass.

The most notable example of this is in the attitude of the young. For heretofore Christmas has been a festival merely for the entertainment of children. A time in which to shower and submerge them with extravagant and unnecessary gifts; a time in which to surfe t them with an inordinate amount of unwholesome sweets. And for this undesirable end the entire adult family often worked, schemed, and sacrificed for weeks.

But today you will hear just as many children saying "What can I make for Christmas?" as you will hear them exclaim, "I wonder what I will get for Christmas!" And it is an exceedingly significant symptom. Perhaps in time Santa Claus, himself, will grow youthful; lose his long white beard, his snowy hair, and appear in rompers, rolled down socks, and a rakish beret—a glad, gleeful child symbolizing youth as a generous giver of gifts!

For all over the country children are busily engaged making things with their own hands for Christmas. Los Angeles has an unusual number of these enthusiastic young handcrafters who are doing a surprising variety of unusual things in an unusual manner. They have hired themselves a Christmas-gift teacher! And this teacher comes in costume, and tells them stories about their work, so that, along with their remarkable striving for efficiency, they have dramatized their work into a play!

And they are making many different kinds of things. Dolls, toys, furniture, picture books, decorated flower pots. They are embroidering table scarfs, weaving rugs, doing petit point footstool-covers, binding books, carving wood book-ends, knitting socks and sweaters, modeling little figures and vases, making old fashioned wall hangings, all of which are intended as presents for their parents, relatives or friends.

The children of the Colonial School, Long Beach, one of whose principals is Miss Anne Elisabeth Merriam, sister of the newly elected Lieutenant-Governor of California, have been working for weeks making things for less fortunate children than themselves. They, too, take lessons in stitchery and are the first group in this part of the country to revive those quaint pieces of needlework which their grandmothers called "samplers." They call themselves the "Pilgrim Sampler Club" and when they are doing the stitchery they wear the same distinctive pilgrim costumes which their teacher "Mrs. Pilgrim" wears. From these samplers they are evolving original designs for table covers, footstool rugs, sofa pillows, hand bags, footstools for their mothers and gaily decorated doll dresses for crippled, sick and poor children whom they know. For these well-to-do children do not make and send out gifts indiscriminately; they hunt out a sick, needy, unfortunate child and each child in the Colonial School adopts one of these less fortunate children for its own "gift brother" or "gift sister," so that when they are making the gift they all have some special child in mind as they work. This, the "Christmas gift teacher" says, gives an impetus to the work, and admits of joy in it, which would not otherwise be possible.

Besides making articles of clothing, little rugs, and household articles, they do clever work in constructing doll beds and bureaus and other miniature furniture. They reconstruct dolls, put new wigs on them, repaint their faces, and dress them, doing all of the sewing and designing themselves. They make Christmas tree decorations out of envelope linings and discarded bits of gold and silver paper, to brighten the homes of the poor and sick and they make and design their own Christmas cards.

When they present their gifts to the less fortunate children, who are able to leave their homes, they give a tea party in the Old Court Yard Theater, which is an outdoor one, and the visiting children are treated with all the courtesies which belong to honor guests, each school child having certain hostess duties to perform. These parties are always the most delightful occasions of the year and are a perfect demonstration of the old text, "It is more blessed to give than to receive;" for while the recipients always seem glad and grateful, the young guild of givers are exuberant with joy.

There are a number of children of social affairs in the school and these children have a small club of their own and prepare boxes of fruit for the shut-in children of a crippled children's hospital. They are confined in this by many other children, too, but they are the prime movers in the activity. They need the help, even the note and the smaller children roll them in sugar while the older ones stuff the dates and pack them in boxes. Each child saves boxes during the year for this joyous gift time.

But the very best and biggest thing which all of these children do is to help in providing a bed for some afflicted child at that same crippled children's hospital. When they buy the yarn, the canvas and the patterns to make their "samplers," "Mrs. Pilgrim," the "Christmas gift teacher," lays aside all of the purchase money for a donation to these helpless, little shut-ins.

The school has taken the name "Colonial" because it is trying to imbue little Americans, who will one day have means and position, with the ideals of responsibility, generosity, patriotism and community interests on which this country was founded and on which it will have to endure. Are not they themselves getting the very best Christmas gifts to be had?

"Mrs. Pilgrim" teaching Gloria and Peggy Lloyd the art of rug-making.

In Beverly Hills, in an immense Spanish patio surrounded by a house which is no less than a palace, two little blond-haired girls, six and five years old, sit at old-fashioned tapestry frames and ply the needle back and forth, surreptitiously, of afternoons when their mother has gone for a drive or to a bridge party, working patiently on two little hooked rugs which they mean to surprise their mother with on Christmas morning.

They are Gloria and Peggy Lloyd, the little daughters of Harold and Mildred Lloyd, famous screen players, and they are learning rug making and tapestry weaving just like the children of the nobility learned it in the middle ages when war and sieges shut up families in castles and fortresses for months at a time. But these children are not shut up in a fortress. They have a landed estate of many acres in which to play, and the spacious, tiled patio in which they sit and work is flooded with sunshine which falls on a sparkling fountain, on rows of potted plants and blossoming flowers, and on the brilliantly colored feathers of a solemn-eyed parrot which watches them with curiosity.

Peggy, the younger of the two, and the very recently adopted sister of Gloria, had not heard quite so much about the rug making as the older child, who has been brought up in an atmosphere of handcraft. But she too became enthusiastic about it when she saw the bright colored yarns which are used to make the rugs.

Mrs. Lloyd, who has made many beautiful rugs and pieces of tapestry herself, had told the children the stories woven into the gorgeous Gobelin tapestries on the walls, she had told them how the Norwegian picture weaving was done in the tapestry which covers the library chairs, she had shown them the wonderful Anbusson carpet in the French room, the beautiful stitchery in the petit-point and needle-point coverings of chairs and footstools, and had explained that all of these had been done by hand.

The children had heard their mother say that the teacher was kind and patient and that she came in Pilgrim costume when she gave lessons. This, they thought, would be as interesting as a picture show, so they wrote her a letter which ran:

"Dear Mrs. Pilgrim:

"We want to make a rug for mamma for Christmas, won't you come and teach us how? We live in Beverly Hills way out beyond Hollywood. Our father is Harold Lloyd and everybody knows him.

"Yours with truly,

"GLORIA and PEGGY LLOYD."

And "Mrs. Pilgrim," who is really Mrs. Walter H. Newman of Long Beach, declares that they are among her most adept and enthusiastic pupils, and that she has never seen children with such decided ideas as to color and design. She wanted Gloria to make a morning-glory rug because the flower suggested her name. But Gloria did not like the idea. "Morning glories wither, just in a minute; I want roses," and roses she had!

Mrs. Lloyd says, "Even if my children never use their skill at handcraft in any other way but to make beautiful and useful things, even if they should give all of these things away, they will be much richer for having learned the skill-

BUNIONS

We have invented a day and night appliance for bunions and overlapped toes, and we have ever reason to believe it will correct nine cases out of ten.

The night splints are worn while sleeping and the muscles are relaxed, to stretch the contracted tendons that distort the toes and cause this hideous deformity.

The day cushioning appliance shields the bunion, hides the deformity and holds the toes in proper alignment and the normal traction for the bones will be re-established and in a short time the bunion disappears completely and forever.

CARE OF THE BODY

itself, there are several other effects of arthritis that one must have in mind in considering this condition.

The secondary effects are the outgrowth of changes in two important systems of the body.

Firstly, as the result of the enlargement of the joint and the hardening of the tissues about it, the blood and lymph supply to the parts beyond the joint is materially affected. In extreme cases this may lead to distinct atrophy. That is, the muscles and even the bone may decrease in size and become incapable of activity.

Then, by the pressure of the hardened and enlarged places about the joint, the nerves passing over the joint are injured. This affects the parts around the joint in practically the same way as does the shutting off of the blood supply. Sensation in the limb is diminished and so the physiological response is called for and made. The muscles do not receive proper nervous stimulus. Therefore, they do not act and they atrophy from disuse.

Interestingly enough, the enlargement of the bones about the joints may, by shutting off the blood and nerve supply to the limb beyond it, cause atrophy of the bone in the lower part of the same limb.

In practically all cases where a major joint such as hip, knee or elbow is affected by a serious chronic arthritis, the limb beyond that joint becomes materially and permanently impaired. This may happen even when the joint itself is not sufficiently stiffened to destroy its movability. It must be thought of as one of major disabilities resulting from neglected arthritis.

I have a special leaflet which goes into the subject of arthritis very thoroughly. It is available to any Times reader for a stamped, self-addressed envelope and a loose 2-cent stamp.

The general discussion of this subject will be continued next Sunday.

Watch for next Sunday's issue.

Coughs

Coughing is a symptom of an internal trouble. By a cough we understand that the breathing muscles contract without control.

As a rule, the cough is usually connected with some other disease such as bronchitis, whooping cough, tuberculosis, pleurisy and similar disorders.

There are coughs and coughs. They go to both extremes. There is the severe, hacking, tiring cough such as in croup and in whooping cough and the "clearing-of-the-throat" type, with its nervous, short cough.

There are so many coughts it would be impossible to outline all of them in one article. Suffice to say that most of them have one common purpose—that is, the discharge of waste material present in the lungs, bronchial tubes and throat.

It is for this reason that most coughs are usually associated with a form of expectoration—either pus, mucus, a mixture of both, or broken up, decomposed cells.

The discharges vary with the nature of the trouble. They have one thing in common, however. They are all poisons in the blood stream.

In some cases, when the pus has been discharged the cause of the cough disappears and no further treatment need be taken.

The chronic cough differs from the acute one. Both, however, require strict measures for elimination.

The causes must be overcome. The first thing necessary to accomplish this is to be sure the stomach and intestines are well cleaned out. Two or three high enemas taken daily will be sufficient for this purpose.

The enema washes the walls of the intestines of all the debris and as the water comes out again, the impurities are carried with it.

In all forms of fever disorders—in fact, in any kind of trouble—it is absolutely necessary to clean out the colon, as poison is always found in this area.

During the acute symptoms of coughing there should be no intake of food. But if the patient is too weak, he should be given water and warm, harmless liquids only. Liquid nourishment must be taken very slowly.

Coughing spasms come on most frequently when the stomach is full. There should be no heavy meals. It would be better to eat more frequently but considerably less each time.

Warm drinks such as warm lemonade, warm broth or warm fruit juice will decidedly relieve the irritation in the throat.

Towels dipped in warm water, wrung out and then placed around the chest will give some relief.

If it is possible to move the patient, warm water baths will help draw the inflammation from the chest.

Each night before retiring a cold pack should be placed around the neck. This should be kept on throughout the night.

Very often deep breathing will also help in curbing a cold. Deep breathing will overcome the "ticklish" feeling which starts at the beginning of a cough.

These are common-sense measures—simple and possible for everyone to follow.

To my knowledge, there is no permanent cure in cough medicines. It is far more advisable to use simple, natural measures. The ingredients in cough medicines generally do more harm than good.

Prostatitis

One of the differences between the common-place ailments of childhood and old age is the persistence of symptoms.

A child gets sick. No matter what the ailment may be, the symptoms are acute and proceed to a rapid termination.

An adult gets sick. The symptoms may be equally acute but there is no sharp recovery. The pain lingers on. The distress becomes an unwelcome visitor.

This is repeated with regular periodic frequency.

It is the chronic nature of the ailments of old age that makes this period of life oftentimes so difficult.

Each sex has its distinct array of

WEDDING DAY

By Edwin Balmer

Young Joyce Hildreth Was Going to Be Married and Was to Live in China, While in the Shadows Stood a Woman, Strangely Like Her, Who Looked On SOMEONE mentioned to Howard Imbrie that Joyce Hildreth had come home and was soon to be married.

"Young for that, isn't she?" Imbrie asked, for he thought of the child as he had last seen her with dolls and toy dishes; a lovely, warm-hearted little girl with shining light hair and steady blue eyes which studied you a bit before they approved you.

"She's seventeen," the someone said; Imbrie had forgotten who it was. Half the people he knew also were friends of the Hildreths. "Not young for the sort of marriage she'll make. The boy's Ted Lennon. He was near the top of his class at Annapolis and he goes into the marine service; he's flying, you know, and is being sent to some China station. The voyage over will be their wedding trip and after that he'll join the air squadron."

"And she'll sit in Shanghai or on some Yangtze River gunboat and watch him on a patrol," Imbrie said and made a picture for himself of the eager, lovely little girl of the toy tea table who had grown up so soon to become a bride; and he thought of her looking up at tiny specks of airplane wings, which would be her lover disappearing toward the horizon where China climbed into the sky.

This news was told to Imbrie in his office, for he later recollected that Miss Winslow had been present and heard it.

About a week after this, another caller mentioned Joyce.

Again it was in his office near the top of the great Gothic tower which dominates by its beauty the new pinnacles of Chicago. He was at his desk alone with his letters and with the morning light yellow on the blue rug beside him and behind him the lake to look upon, agleam under the June sun.

Miss Winslow entered in her quiet, pleasant way and said, when he looked up at her, "Mr. Barrett West, Jr., is here. He says you know his father."

"I know him, too," Imbrie replied, opposing the boy's implication that Imbrie, being older, might not remember him, for Imbrie, in spite of the dignity of the big room which went with the presidency of the company, was barely thirty-six.

Miss Winslow went out and the boy came in, looking back over his shoulder at her.

"I beg your pardon, sir," he said when he had closed the door, "do you mind if I ask if your secretary is a relation of the Hildreths?"

"No," Imbrie answered. "I never heard of her being related to them. Why?"

"Do you know Joyce, sir. You ought to see her. She's home; and she's going to marry Ted Lennon and go to China. There's such a resemblance—" the boy went on, glancing again at the door; then he stopped and brought himself to his business, which was the ordinary errand of a youth just out of a university and looking for a place in the steel company.

After the boy was gone Imbrie rang for Miss Winslow.

She was slow to respond, which was not like her. There was nothing restless or assertively quick about Agnes Winslow but always she was ready and prompt. And impersonal.

He liked to have her dealing with his affairs and with him. He liked her impersonal pleasantness and interestedness, her quiet way of speaking to him; he liked her smooth, pretty, efficient hands and her clear never-confused head. She was of agreeable, medium height and slender; she was thirty, perhaps, he had reckoned, when he thought about it. He knew nothing whatever of her own life—of her hours each day and of the day and a half at the end of each week beyond his walls. He had never speculated about them; he had never thought of her except in her close, often confidential relationship to him here. Nothing of her own, from outside, ever had intruded; but something had now.

It made her a different person. She was no mere secretary, attentive to his affairs, who took her place beside him; she was a woman to whom his work and her position in the office and her relation to him suddenly had become of no importance.

He resented this at the same time that he felt it stir him. Strong feeling is a fire which cannot be kept within one; and hers communicated itself to him, rousing him in regard to her. He tried to ignore it and began with a letter.

"Please," she broke in on him, "please, did Mr. Barrett ask you about me?"

"Yes—he did."

"What did he ask you, please?"

"He asked if you were related to the Hildreths."

Why should this stir him so? It was her business—some secret of her own life which that boy had surprised. She was trying to keep down her excitement and the result was the sweeping of deep, ruddy pink over her white face and forehead. It deepened and died and deepened again to the line of light, lovely hair.

"I told him 'no'," Imbrie went on. "That is, I told him I never heard that you were. Are you?"

"No."

He waited; for that was no adequate answer but she added nothing until he turned to his letters.

"What made him think I might be—did he tell you?"

"He said I ought to see Joyce. He spoke of a resemblance."

"Do you know Joyce Hildreth, sir?"

"Yes. But I've not seen her since she was a child."

"She's seventeen, now, isn't she, sir? She's the girl who is going to China after she's married—isn't she? And is seventeen years old."

"Yes," said Imbrie. "Why?"

What had the boy said to her on the way out and what had lain hidden within her which he had hit"

"I beg your pardon, sir," she said. "I'm sorry—I'm very sorry." And she spread her notebook, waiting for him to go on with his business.

But he could not dictate to her about alloys of steel. "Later," he dismissed her and watched her take refuge in her room. Soon thereafter he left the office.

It was Saturday and, on such a day a few years ago, he might have dropped in at the Hildreths'; but an acquaintance which has been allowed to lapse is not to be resumed abruptly. No; there could be no casual looking in at the house on Astor street. Moreover, Howard reckoned, Joyce very likely would be out today.

She was aware of no one near her. Howard gained the place beside her before she looked around.

Her friends would be entertaining her at teas and luncheons. This gave him an idea, and, buying a paper, he discovered that a luncheon was being given for her today at a golf club near Lake Forest. It was not one of his clubs, but he was acquainted with several members, and there would be some one who would not be surprised at a sudden challenge for a round of golf.

Howard stepped into a hotel and phoned: "Hello, Timmie. Shoot a few holes with me this afternoon?"

"You shoot with me," Timmie invited, as Howard had hoped; and so it was arranged.

He phoned his office and told Miss Winslow he would not be back.

When he reached the golf club Howard passed along the veranda where girls in gay, bright dresses were greeting one another, and, at the end of the veranda, he found Joyce.

She was like the little girl of the tea table, but she was more like Agnes Winslow. Startlingly like her, with her hair, fair and fine as flax; her eyes, blue and her skin clear and white. She was of the same height, and Agnes Winslow was almost as slender. There were little likenesses, too—an identically appealing peak of her lovely hair pointed above her forehead, and lips that smiled like Miss Winslow's.

The girls crowded about her and Imbrie stared at her unnoticed; then she looked up at him without recollection but in the friendly way of the little girl of the doll's tea party.

He did not recall himself to her; he hurried after Timmie and played, during the next two hours, alternately his most inspired and most miserable golf, as he fought the strange excitement within him. Joyce was like Agnes Winslow, and what did it mean.

When he returned to the clubhouse he heard that Joyce had announced her engagement and so he had a good excuse to seek her and recall their old friendship.

She gave him her slender, warm little hand and looked up and thanked him for the happiness he wished her, and in that moment of nearness how like—how like she was to the woman brought before him by business each day!

Alone in his apartment, later, Howard Imbrie for the first time in years followed, in his mind, a woman. Long, long ago—as long as ten years ago—he used to meet in his mind and accompany, in pleasant reverie, Cora.

She became his wife, Cora, and for two years and two months she had been his wife, and then she had begun to feel the mistake she had made marrying him For he was not prospering.

At least it had seemed so, at that time, since his start with steel alloys had been deliberate and exasperating to a girl who was very beautiful and ambitious and impatient. So there followed her stay in Paris and her decree of divorce from him, and her marriage to Reyburn, who already had arrived at a position in the world.

Yet at no such place in affairs as that which Howard Imbrie since had won. For once his advance began fortune emptied upon Howard Imbrie all her favors—but one. Love.

He no longer loved Cora; he never thought of her, except when reminded of her by some poignant memento left to a man discarded. No; it was not Cora he met in his mind this evening, nor any of the other women with whom he went about in these days. None of them left anything for his feelings to linger over when he was alone. . . . But what, tonight, was Agnes Winslow doing? Where was she? With whom?

She was alone, he hoped. He wanted her to be alone.

On Sunday morning a large picture of Joyce was in the newspaper, and Howard, holding it, thought of Agnes Winslow—somewhere—holding it and gazing at herself, almost. From Sunday morning until Monday became, for him, an interminable wait.

She was in h's office, when he entered, and standing before his desk arranging his mail for him, but he knew as soon as he saw her she had no mind for her task. She did not look up at once, and he stood, aware of his pulses pounding as he gazed at her. She was lovely there in front of his window—lovely and very like Joyce Hildreth—so like her that it would be stupid to speak of anything else.

"I've seen Joyce Hildreth," he said.

Now she looked up at him. "So have I."

"I suppose you would," he said, and repeated, "I supposed you would," won-

Care of the Body

Arthritis
Article No. 2

Arthritis may be a very trivial or an extremely serious condition, depending upon the nature of the systemic disturbances that have set up the inflammation.

Some of the possible results of a continued arthritis condition are readily understood.

First, of course, is the limitation of motion.

When a joint aches constantly and when it hurts to move it, obviously it should not be moved so much. Often the mere tenderness of a joint prevents any use of it whatever while the inflammation continues.

However, this is the least serious of several forms of limitation of motion at a joint which may result from arthritis. In arthritis, as in every form of inflammation, the stagnation of circulation is the real cause of the affected part.

The swelling of the joint means that lymph has collected in great quantities in the spaces between the cells.

In the stagnant lymph the white corpuscles which serve several functions in the growth of tissues accumulate and undergo very profound changes. They divide in abnormal ways because the nutritive fluid around them is abnormal and give off abnormal waste products, poisoning the cells in their neighborhood. They die and disintegrate, the decomposition producing poison.

The cells about an inflamed joint are thus severely affected in several ways:

They are subject to the influences of the poisonous substances to which we have just referred.

They are deprived of their ordinary nutritive supply, due to the circulation of lymph.

They are deprived of their normal supply of oxygen in the same way.

As a result, an abnormal growth process is produced in the tissues.

This may affect any one of four tissue systems about the joint. Nearly always the first effect is felt in the synovial membrane. This is a very delicate layer of cells which lines the extremities of the joint and covers—in part at least—the cartilages which are the moving contact surfaces. When the effect is practically confined to this membrane, the disturbance is called synovitis.

In synovitis the synovial membrane is thickened. Then the character of the cells that make up its surface is changed. In a normal synovial membrane they are constantly giving off a liquid which fills the space within the bursa and lubricates the joint.

In chronic synovitis this liquid is gradually absorbed and disappears so that if the surfaces rub together without lubrication, the joint ultimately becomes stiff and immovable.

In every case of arthritis there is some degree of synovitis. Therefore, there is some loss of synovial fluid. Thus, drying of the joint and some stiffening of the joint are due to such lack of lubrication.

Secondly, the articular cartilages are affected. These are parts of new hard gristle that cover the ends of bones and supply the rubbing surfaces of the joints. In cases of chronic arthritis these cartilages become thick and hardened, sometimes being converted into lime substance which is hard to distinguish from bone. They lose, almost entirely, the smooth elastic character which makes them give free motion to the joint.

This condition is not as common as the synovitis but when it occurs it, of course, entirely destroys the movability of the joint.

Thirdly, the capsule—that is, the connecting tissue sheet which entirely surrounds the joint—becomes affected just as truly as the synovial membrane and the cartilages. The cells are changed in character and the tissues are thickened and hardened.

In extreme cases the thickening and hardening lead to enlargement of a joint to twice its normal diameter, the added thickness being due to a somewhat elastic growth of connective tissue.

Finally, the bone near the joint itself is affected. The commonest effect upon the bone is what is called exostosis—that is, an abnormal growth of bony tissue.

Sometimes this takes the form of the development of what is known as Heberden's nodes. They are small lumps of bone developed in the tissues about joints. They may be left in the skin and moved about with the fingers. They are usually not painful in themselves.

Sometimes the tissues about them are tender so that they hurt distinctly under pressure. The nodes cause a slight enlargement about the joint and many of them develop. If their size is considerable they, of course, interfere seriously with the movability of the joint. In fact, they may render it stiff and almost useless.

Worst of all is the outgrowth of the exostosis from the bones of the joints proper. These may enlarge the joint until it is altogether unsightly. They may extend across it and join together until they become practically solid bone. Such a condition is known as ankylosis of the joint. It, of course, entirely destroys the use of the joint.

We have mentioned the more obvious effects of an arthritis condition at the joint itself. We have been describing the extreme results of a continued chronic condition.

We wish that we could assure our readers that such extreme results are rare but alas, we cannot truthfully give that assurance. In neglected cases of arthritis one or more of the conditions described are likely to develop to a degree that destroys the movability of the joint. We cannot be too emphatic about this.

Besides the direct results at the joint

A Story of Persistent Love

THE fact that he was married to Gladys Cowper was to remain a phenomenon to John Bayley. That the lovely Gladys should ever have found in him sufficient attributes to claim not only her interest but her love, was something that even in the second and third year following their marriage, was to remain a miracle in the eyes of John.

First of all, Gladys, above everything, was so alive. She radiated a vitality that seemed to demand so much more than the sedentary life in a cottage which the young clerk in a large wholesale floral and tree nursery was able to provide her.

Gladys, before her marriage, had been the center of a group of youths eager to provide her with more than John could. She had lived her girlhood so recklessly in the spirit of dance, frivolity and adorable nonsense!

It gave a man pause to have come into the vast inheritance of a creature of this irresistible love-of-life. It gave him pause and more than that, it gave him the urge of ambition.

A man had to justify his good fortune in having won a wife like Gladys. More than that, if a man wanted to hold her, he had to earn the right. John realized all this. It gave him a sense of pride and at the same time filled him with a sense of torment.

What if the turn in the tide of his affairs was not to come in time? Gladys was so young, so unconsciously keyed to attract all who came within her orb. Even on the streets, heads swung after as she passed. In a group she predominated. A young husband had to look to his p's and q's.

Not that Gladys herself ever gave off the slightest awareness of the extent to which she kept her husband pitched to tiptoe. The first years were just happy, love-in-a-cottage; an adored wife and an adorable, good-looking young husband who could be serious one moment and playboy the next. True, resources were low. The position of clerk in the tree nursery was not remunerative and Gladys was filled with little wishes that tugged at John's heart.

"Darling, do you think we'll ever be able to afford just a second-hand little Ford coupe? Wouldn't it be too heavenly having one to rush around in?"

"Oh, John, fancy being able to buy the mink coat in that window. Honestly, if I had just an imitation one, I'd curl up like a sardelle and die of happiness."

"Oh, honey, would I love a duck of a bungalow like that! Do you think we'll ever be able to afford one half as nice?"

John did think, a great deal. There was, of course, much to be said in behalf of his work at the nursery. The offices, within walking distance of their tiny suburban cottage, were set in the midst of acres of growing roses, aisles of spicy carnations, glowing riots of fuchsias, marigold, phlox, gladioli and madonna lilies. From the window beside his desk, far as the eye could reach, there pillowed the shining, tender green of young leaves and the wind-swept waves of color. It kept a man a little drunk with just the sense of rising sap and growing vegetation. It kept him somehow young, and in a strange ashamed way, reverential toward the beauty of the world about him.

All very well and good from John's angle. Pleasant unhurried work. The delightful proximity of his small home and lovely wife. The days that ended peacefully with Gladys waiting for him at the end of the floral pergola that led from his offices to the high road. All very well and good. But it got a man nowhere. One hundred and fifty dollars a month earned in the heart of a garden, got a man's wife nowhere.

Not that Gladys complained. Of course they talked and planned for a future, but there was something frighteningly indeterminate about that future. At best he, John, could only hope for an increase of from $50 to $75 a month. Unless, of course, the unforeseen happened, and he managed to wangle his way into the firm. That, however, was unlikely. Only calamity or catastrophe could bring that about, and there were two husky young sons between him and the ultimate dream of membership in the firm.

Be that as it may, it must be said for Gladys that while she hankered for so many of the good things denied her, there was not in her attitude either rancor or bitterness. Just a wistfulness, and it was that wistfulness which, somehow, broke John's heart, and at the same time filled him with fear.

There was a country club set in the suburb where the Bayleys had set up their home. While not part of it, Gladys had opportunity to observe, from the remote vantage of sidelines, the gay-spirited existence of the polo-playing, hunting, golfing, dancing and motor doings of neighborhood couples about their own age.

Evening after evening, the strains of dance music floated to them from the adjacent clubhouse and sometimes, over the top of his newspaper, John could see the foot of Gladys, seated at her handiwork, tapping, tapping, to the rhythm, as if it were all she could do to hold herself in leash.

Never a word, dear darling, but John grew afraid, particularly as never an evening that Gladys did not meet him with this or that recital of what hearsay she had been able to pick up about the country club crowd.

Well, John, decided to himself, it was just as well it was happening and above all, it was good that he was realizing it before something concrete came along to jeopardize his happiness. This way, at least, he could take the step while there was time. Without this stimulus, he might be content to go on to the end of time in the pleasant fastness of his position and the perfection that was his in his marital relations.

Gladys was so unconsciously keyed to attract all who came within her orb—heads swung as she passed —a young husband had to watch his P's and Q's.

It was about this time that he decided to take the situation in hand. Wall street seemed to present the first rung in his ladder. Not in the gambling sense! John was too shrewd for that. The way to wedge in was as bond salesman. Various of his friends had worked their way to brokerage positions and finally wealth by way of that intermediate step.

John did not intend to risk one penny of his two thousand dollars savings. Rather, he would get out of his rut and into a business that promised a future.

The way to hold a beautiful, restless young wife, was to widen her horizon. The way to keep pace with the younger generation around them was to live a little dangerously.

A man was a fool not to realize that.

Gladys, at first quite bowled over by the prospect of the radical change in their lives, admitted, however, to seeing the wisdom of a young man's alertness to his future.

Of course a small apartment in New York would be more diverting, and then there was John's future to consider.

Curious, she told herself, how well John had kept this ambition in leash during those first few sweet peaceful years of their marriage! She had been lax and absurdly bovine in not discovering this latent restlessness in his make-up.

It was not easy dismantling the house. It was an absurd little affair, built like a gingerbread cottage and almost buried behind foliage and shrubbery that the nurseries had bestowed upon young Bayley when he married.

It was not until they were stripping the little garden of the furniture that together they had built and painted, that there arrived the moment when the equanimity of Gladys collapsed.

There were more tears than she had ever in her life shed and all in a volley, a revelation out of the blue.

"Oh, John—must we—wust we—of course, I know it is for your good—a young fellow must have his chance—his future— but can't you stay back here, darling—and work toward it, quietly, just us. I haven't wanted you to know it, dearest, but it is breaking my heart to move into town, as just another wife of just another nervous, harassed bond salesman in just another flat."

Of course the cat was out of the bag then. The most joyous bouncing elated cat imaginable.

The Bayleys still live in their gingerbread house.

It seems fantastic, but then life can be fantastic. The two sons who stood between John and membership in the floral company's firm were tragically killed on the same field at polo.

Bicycling Was a Major Sport in Southern California in the Early Nineties.

By Audrey Henderson Cooke

ONE hundred acres of Los Angeles property offered in trade for—A BICYCLE! And the deal fell through, because the owner of the bicycle, William M. Jenkins, known in those days as "Bill," didn't want any "sagebrush-covered land out in the sticks." And the land was near what is now known as the Mt. Washington district, virtually in the heart of the city! Of course, it was a particularly good bicycle, as Mr. Jenkins pointed out, and was valued at the time at about $165. It had been won in a hotly contested race, and the land offered in trade was just part of a large estate consisting of the hill section where the Mt. Washington Hotel was later built—the bicycle looked like the best value!

But that was back in the "Gay Nineties" when bicycling was a major sport in Southern California, and Los Angeles was a particularly popular center for cyclists, both amateur and professional. Some idea of the extent of the sport as it once flourished here is gained from the fact that even today a club known as the "Wheelmen of the Past Century" meets here regularly. Most of its two hundred members are genuine "old-timers;" many of them are prominent in business and social circles—all of them boast of a real interest in some phase of cycling prior to 1900. The latter characteristic is the sole requisite for membership in the unique organization.

As far back as 1886 a club known as the "Los Angeles Wheelmen" was in existence here, but of the original membership only Maurice S. Hellman, James Lancaster and R. Baker remain. The membership of the Wheelmen of the Past Century reads like a veritable "Who's Who" of men well known in Los Angeles, and includes such names as Frank A. Barnes, Eugene Biscailuz, Ralph Hamlin, Tracy Q. Hall, Dean Cromwell, Carl McStay, Ed S. Pauly, Louis Schwaebe, William M. Jenkins, Knowlton R. Bradley, J. W. Off, William Wier, William A. Tufts, J. Phil Percival, Harry A. Miller. William Wickersham, and numerous others, all of whom were actively interested in cycling.

Once a year the club holds a get-together meeting, and it is then that there is great talk of the "good old days," and much swapping of yarns and reminiscences of the various sporting events that made bicycle history.

The record established by S. C. Spier, formerly of Los Angeles, who rode on a high bicycle from New York to San Francisco in eighty-four days is still recalled. It was a remarkable feat in those days, back in the '80's, long before there was a paved road in the country.

Many a local wheelman still remembers the annual road races from Los Angeles to Santa Monica, inaugurated one Fourth of July in the early '90's. The race started between Second and Third on Spring street, in front of the old Los Angeles Athletic Club, and covered a course seventeen and three-quarter miles to the beach. When traffic on Spring street increased the start of the race took place on Hill, and the starting point was gradually moved farther out of town as the city grew. William M. Jenkins held the title for several years until William A. Tufts "beat him by accident" when the latter introduced a new type of wheel.

The "first century run," as the 100-mile ride was called, was a yearly event here, as in other parts of the country. The trip had to be finished in not more than twenty-four hours and the recognized course extended from Los Angeles to Pomona, thence to Santa Monica and back to the city. It was won the first time by the late Harry Cromwell.

Annual relay races from Los Angeles to San Diego, participated in by various Southern California wheel clubs, were important occasions, but there were strictly local events that attracted equal attention in their time. There were the races held at the old Agriculture Park, now Exposition Park when members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club team, the East Side Wheelmen and the Los Angeles Wheelmen contended for such valuable prizes as pianos, furniture, bicycles, medals, jewelry, etc. They were popularly known as the "piano races," and were for amateurs only. Men with amateur standing were not permitted to race for cash prizes, but in the early days of cycling extremely valuable gifts were sometimes offered. William M. Jenkins recalls the time when a town lot, diamonds and numerous other notable prizes were given in races held in Phoenix, Ariz., to attract popular wheelmen to contests in that city. On the other hand, many big races were for "honor and glory" only, and the winner may only have drawn a cup or medal. Besides the Agriculture Park track, other well-known tracks included Athletic Park, near where the Southern Pacific depot now stands, and Tenth and Main streets was also the site of one.

The sport became so popular, what with races, cycling trips and the universal use of bicycles here, that it was finally necessary to have definitely defined cycle paths. In 1896 the Santa Monica Cycle Path was organized and built through the efforts of the late Bob Lennie and Joseph Ostendorff. Their bicycle shop was located where the old Westminster Hotel now stands at the corner of Fourth and Main streets and was said to be one of the best in the city. The cycle path was financed by selling buttons at $1 a piece and according to Ralph Hamlin, who recalls the incident well, no difficulty was experienced in raising funds for it. The path was hard surfaced, in comparison with the dusty roads that prevailed everywhere before automobiles made paving a necessity. The cycle path started at the old Rosedale Cemetery on Washington Boulevard, then a considerable distance out in the suburbs, and wound its way through picturesque, countryside via what is now Palms and National Boulevard. Milestones were placed and at regular intervals arches were erected over the path so that it would be reserved for the use of cyclists only. This semiprivate road was a great advantage to all—wheelmen could no longer frighten the horses! And after a rain cyclists weren't inconvenienced with the road beds being ruined by farmers driving their cattle down them, as Tracy Q. Hall pointed out in commenting on it recently.

Another notable venture in the annals of bicycling in Los Angeles was the organization of the old California Cycleway Company, of which Horace M. Dobbins of Pasadena was president. The purpose of the company was to build and operate an elevated bicycle track from Los Angeles to Pasadena, and it is a curious fact that the right of way for the old path still exists!

With the number of wheelmen in the two cities conservatively estimated at 30,000 at the time the track was started in the '90's, it looked like a good investment. A toll of 10 cents was to have been charged and this would permit a cyclist to ride up and down all day if he so desired, and also included storage of his machine at either terminus until he wished to undertake the return trip.

Despite its flourishing outlook, though, the venture was doomed to early failure as far as commercial success was concerned. The track was actually only in use from the Green Hotel to the Raymond in Pasadena, though it was constructed nearly to Garvanza and the right of way extended for miles.

Paradoxically, it might be said that Mr. Dobbins, builder of the unique cycleway, was also at least partly responsible for its ultimate failure—he owned the first automobile in Pasadena! And it was undoubtedly the advent of the "horseless carriage" that wrought such changes in the character of public interest in the years following 1900. All that most people remember of the romantic days of the iron steed is the refrain of the old song, something about a girl "looking neat, upon the seat of a bicycle built for two!"

A combination automobile and motor boat recently shown in Europe has a speed of six miles in the water and twelve and one-half miles on land.

Uncle Sam's Model Indian Woman

By Annie M. Crabb

Mrs. Hiyi and her model home.

Mrs. Hiyi still uses the Pueblo ovens for her baking.

MRS. SUSIE HIYI is Uncle Sam's model Indian woman. During the forty-seven years of her life she has lived just as he would have her live and her light has shone out in the great wastes of the West as an inspiration to all her kind. She has been the living demonstration to her sisters of an effective adaptation of the white man's conveniences to private surroundings.

Mrs. Hiyi is a full-blood Pueblo Indian and lives in the tiny native town of Seama in the midst of that waste region between Albuquerque and Gallup, in New Mexico. This is semidesert country, where only native plants can survive without irrigation. But a single small spring feeds the town and at times its flow is so slight that each family may receive but half a bucketful a day.

Mrs. Hiyi hauls water four miles in a barrel that she may water a clinging green vine that climbs up the screen porch of her very modern house.

Seama is one of the numerous villages of the Laguna Indians, most progressive of all the Pueblos. A hundred and fifty young Laguna men work as skilled mechanics in the railroad shops at Winslow, Ariz., together with as many white men and as many more Japanese. When asked which of the races he employed was most efficient the superintendent of those shops recently answered that his Indians ranked first, his white men second, and his Japanese third.

The Lagunas that stay at home tend flocks of sheep, and prosper. David Hiyi, lieutenant-governor of Seama, and husband of the model Indian women, has numerous flocks and is a substantial citizen.

It is the example set in the Hiyi home that the government finds so helpful in leading other Indians to a higher plane of living. It is built of adobe, Mexican style, but with modern adaptations. This house is equipped with modern furniture typical of which is a walnut dining-room set that would not be out of place anywhere in the land. There are modern box mattresses on the beds, to which a racial touch is given by the covers embroidered by the Indian women. In the dining-room the dishes are all neatly arranged in glass-inclosed china closets. Comfortable rocking chairs abound in the living-room. Drapes at the windows, gayly-colored cushions, Navajo rugs, and framed pictures on the walls, give evidence of refinement in living.

Mrs. Hiyi, as a girl, went four years to a mission school at Aubuquerque. Her father was an Indian scout in the campaigns against Geronimo and drew a pension as such. A brother served in the Army and is now a railroad man in Pittsburgh. Mrs. Hiyi's daughter, Mabel, went to the village school, to the boarding school at Albuquerque, and to Haskell Indian School at Lawrence, Kan. Then she taught in Indian schools for three years and married one of those young skilled mechanics of the tribe who works in the shops at Winslow. The two of them are now living in a modern cottage which they rent just like any other progressive and self-supporting young American couple.

Tradition has it that the Hiyi family comes down from the first man of the tribe that ever learned to read and write and that the love of education has persisted through the years. It is said that along about the year 1800 a young Indian of this tribe was taken to Mexico City, where he remained for some years. When he returned he was able to read and write Spanish. He became a power among his people and was known as the alcalde, which is a word the Spanish apply to the head man of a community. For generations his family has nurtured education and worked for the advancement of the tribe.

Mrs. Hiyi has maintained her model home in the midst of her own village for thirty years. In doing so, the government believes, she has taught more effectively than any representative of the dominant civilization, trained in its institutions of higher learning, that it could employ and send into this land of topaz and clustering ancient villages.

DEFIANCE

I saw silvery, aged sycamores
With their tinted treasures:
Arms jeweled with autumn leaves
And the gold of the late year's sun
Hung like an aureole around them.
The wind passed by,
It took its toll of beauty,
But still the tall trees held, trembling,
Bits of bronze and gold pressed against blue sky:
Defiance!

ful use of their hands. I once heard a girl at school say of another girl, 'Oh, her mother works with her hands!' and she said it in such a snobbish manner that it gave a key to her whole personality. I feel that the time will come when it will be a disgrace not to be able to produce something beautiful or useful with our hands, and I think the best possible way to train children out of any possible snobbishness is to teach them the beauty and dignity of doing something useful."

Eleanor Hempstone, Ernest Gunther and Kathleen Jackson dipping candles.

On the same day in which "Mrs. Pilgrim" gives lessons to the little Lloyd children she stops in Beverly Hills to teach Juanita Stancliff, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mildred Ray Stancliff, to do needlepoint and hooked rug making too.

Mrs. Stancliff believes that all children should be taught to work with their hands, not merely for the beautiful things which they may create but for the brain development which the hand movements will accomplish. And Juanita, who is unusually alert mentally, is also very skillful with her hands, for besides the weaving she has learned book-binding, embroidery, fine sewing, wood-carving and free-hand drawing. These various talents she is combining in the creation of beautiful gifts for her family and school friends in Beverly Hills.

Juanita with all the mature dignity of her twelve years says, "When I was little I thought it was great fun to go to the 10-cent store and buy nonsense presents for everybody, but it was just waste of time and money. I am going to make things this year which are useful and beautiful too, and which will last." And her teacher assured her that the footstool covering she is making will last at least until she has great-great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Stancliff, like many other well-to-do mothers, is teaching her children that handcraft is an ennobling and inspiring occupation and that there is an intimate connection between the evolution of brain cells and the deft, skilled movements of the hand. "My attention was first brought to this idea," said Mrs. Stancliff, "when I heard Helen Keller's teacher relate how very rapidly the deaf and dumb child learned. The rapidity with which she grasped the things taught her was so far in advance of the normal receptivity of even exceptionally gifted children that I decided there must be some basic cause. When I learned that the child had spent almost her entire life dressing and undressing herself as her one diversion, buttoning and unbuttoning her dresses, her hands becoming so adept that, so her teacher said, they ran up her back like little squirrels, as she fastened the buttoned-up-the-back dresses and aprons, I decided that here was a concrete verification of the theory of brain and hand connection which William James and others had given in abstract form.

"Of course I knew that Madam Montessori had used the same methods with backward children, but I believe that handcraft will assist as a balance for both the overly precocious child and the one not advanced enough. Children who are alert mentally have a surplus of energy which needs an outlet and I find that anything which they do well with their hands steadies and develops them to a remarkable degree."

Besides gaining patience, accuracy and skill all of these children are learning color and fabric values, and composition of figures, so that when each of them comes into the large inheritance which will one day be theirs they will have accurate ideas of standards and wholesome tastes. The Stancliff children are the grandchildren of the late Gen. William H. Harrison, who was a prominent Confederate figure in the Civil War.

Filipino Babies Thrive on Milk From Contented Cocoanuts in a Land Where Milk and Honey Flow from Trees and a Dairy Operates Without Benefit of Jersey

MONKEYS drank the milk from cocoanuts and became men. Men, thinking to progress, discarded this simple rule of diet for a complex menu of caviar, Yorkshire pudding and parfait. They are still men. With the index finger of modern science pointing to an imminent revival of this prehistoric fare, does it mean that the cycle is completed and men will revert to monkeys, or are we evolving into an era when children of men will drink milk from cocoanuts and become supermen? But perhaps we are ahead of our story.

Manila, in the Philippines, has become a "firster" by adroitly ushering in the first "Cocoanut Dairy" in the world. There are millions of "tin cows," thousands of "synthetic cows," hundreds of "reconstituted cows" and at least one reputed "purple cow," but whoever heard of a "cocoanut cow?" In identifying this novel species, Manila has proven her right to the "palm" conferred upon her by Nature. And that a new processed "honey" has been produced on the islands to gladden a sweet-toothed race, does not dim the glory of the immortal bee but rather brings new laurels to the awakened talents of the cocoanut.

The "Cocoanut Dairy" comes as the crowning achievement in nearly thirty years of experiment and research conducted in the islands of the Pacific by Herbert Samuel Walker, technologist for the United States Bureau of Science, aided by his wife, Janet Walker, to whom he is indebted for the very practical idea of a dairy and who has collaborated with her husband in a series of experiments for preparing foods from the milk of cocoanuts.

In 1903, a few years after America had liberated the Philippines from Spanish rule, a branch of the United States Bureau of Science was established in Manila with the altruistic motive of helping the Filipinos to help themselves by showing them a better mode of living. The government applied to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for a chemist. The name of Herbert Samuel Walker, one of the young and promising instructors, was submitted with high recommendations. He was offered the post and accepted.

At that time Manila was regarded as the pesthole of the Orient. Yellow fever, smallpox, cholera and dysentery were rife. The scientists gathered together and sailed away to establish their laboratories there. Far different from a landing today——where palatial liners draw abreast famous Pier 7, the second most modern and beautiful dock in the world, those civil recruits finished their journey across the sea on the backs of the native "cargadores," human beasts of burden whose friendly, genial banter somewhat tended to distract the passenger from the discomfort of water-logged feet. Once again treading the not-too-solid ground on the outskirts of the walled city, they were bombarded by a stench that would shame a gas bomb and a barrage of mosquitoes that would rout a battery. This hostile attack proceeded from the renowned Fort Santiago, whose reeking moats are transformed into a beautiful tourists' Mecca, whose walls are pelleted with golf balls fired by the friendly invader and whose gun turrets play "natural hazards" and join in the game. But the sturdy little caddies who now drag golf bags taller than themselves about the course were then curious little natives staggering around on skinny legs with the perpetual latest edition of the family clinging to their little protruding hips. They lived on fish and rice, for the famous "tin cow" was corralled in the larders of the affluent "Ilustrados" or prohibitively tethered in the commissaries of Uncle Sam. Little did the young chemist dream, as he picked his way through the swampy landing with its huddled groups of underfed and curious observers, happy and good-humored in spite of their ills, what research would bring forth. Little did he dream that the cocoanut groves which rang with the call of welcome: "Mayo, Americano!" were destined to provide a source of rich nourishment for the little bodies he pitied in passing.

Distributing free "cocoanut milk" to native children.

Of course, he knew of the native uses of cocoanut. How a sun-browned fisherman, skimming the ripples, paddles softly in the tropic night, the gleam of his cocoanut-oil torch reflecting the bearer in the shadowy, palm-fringed pool; blinking in salutation at the humble thatched hut that, too, has been brightened for centuries with its friendly light. How at the great "fiestas," a sauce was made of the rich emulsion pressed from freshly shredded cocoanut to embellish the "bee-bee" duck. How this same cream—singularly like cow's cream—was used to great advantage in preparing all sorts of native dishes, from daily rice to occasional sweetmeats; or the Filipinos made a confection by combining fresh cocoanut meat with native sugar—"bukayo"—which was deemed a "royal treat." To serve this at a native feast was the acme of hospitality. Also, it was the favorite gift—a veritable friendship-sweet.

Native herdsmen going after the "cocoanut cows."

Although the Filipinos recognized the delicious cocoanut cream as a valuable adjunct to the preparation of rich foods, they had failed to discover that juice, or "milk" of the cocoanut which they always discarded, when added to the cream emulsion, reduced its fat and protein contents to an approximate parallel of cow's milk. Furthermore, they actually believed that the cocoanut contained definitely laxative properties and it was administered generally in lieu of castor oil—even to the "carabaos"—water buffaloes. Little did they realize that this cream with its high percentage of oil (23 per cent) would qualify on its merits as fat.

The year following his arrival in Manila, Mr. Walker was assigned the task of making a survey of the cocoanut industry, which then, as it is today, was the islands' chief source of wealth, this, in spite of the recent sugar overproduction scare. The unofficial estimate of cocoanuts produced in the Philippines in 1929 is roughly placed at 500,000,000 nuts—embryo cocoanut cows.

In seeking out methods for improving the copra used in making oils, Mr. Walker was struck by the analysis of the cocoanut meat. The figures proved to be startlingly comparable to cow's milk—and not at all vegetarian. In the summary of his report published in 1906 by the Bureau of Science, Manila, Mr. Walker offered the suggestion that the heavy cream pressed from cocoanut meat might very easily be developed into an important by-product of the cocoanut industry—a product that might be used in tropic countries as a substitute for milk. Like many another noble work, the report was shelved to receive the weight, chiefly, of accumulated dust.

Mr. Walker was then asked to make a similar study of the sugar industry on the Island of Negros. He devoted two years to this and in recognition of this important work, he was offered the chair of sugar technology at the University of Hawaii. After six years, he left the university to take up active sugar manufacture. In the meanwhile, the sugar industry of Negros had attracted the attention of capitalists, so that his findings laid the foundation for the modern mills in the Philippines. The too-rapid expansion of these plants soon ran into financial difficulties. The Philippine National Bank asked Mr. Walker to come back to the islands as technical adviser. Upon his arrival there, an enterprising reporter interviewed him and asked him what appeared to him to be the greatest change in Manila after his absence of ten years.

"The strong little legs—going to school," he replied. "It has come in Manila and it will come throughout the islands."

On his second trip to the Philippines, Mr. Walker was accompanied by a wife. A native of San Francisco, one may well appreciate that in a town of 20,000, numbering only seven American women, there was a very insignificant percentage from which to draw companionable friends. With her husband away much of the time overseeing the work of the mills, Mrs. Walker decided to take advantage of the opportunity the forced isolation afforded to study Spanish and learn something about the life of the island people. She was soon voted "muy simpatica," for it did not take them long to see that her interest was sincere.

The Filipinos are truly gracious to Americans. Their hospitality is at once their strength and their weakness. They will spend their last "centavo" for a friend even if it sinks their families into debt. It is not at all a rare thing for a planter wishing to entertain some visiting delegations, to go into debt to the tune of a thousand "pesos" in order to stage an elaborate "fiesta." And the same spirit of hospitality applies to the

Solid

A great many people have asked where Ralph T. O'Neil, of Topeka, Kan., newly elected commander of the American Legion, got his nickname of "Dyke."

It came to him when he was a student at Baker University, because of his fortitude in "holding 'em" in football. There was a rather well known Dutchman from O'Neil's home town who was known as "Dyke." When O'Neil was thrown into the line at a critical period in one of Baker's big games a home town fan in the stands was so excited that he applied the name to O'Neil.

"Hold 'em Dyke, hold 'em!" he yelled and it is said that no dyke in Holland ever held any better than O'Neil did for the rest of the game and the name has stuck ever since.

Woeful

A woman interviewer broadly hinted that Eddie Cantor, the Broadway comedian, might take her to lunch.

"Nothing doing!" balked Eddie promptly, adding, "you see, I got hooked that way once, by the late Nora Bayes. I asked her to lunch and she said she couldn't because she already had an engagement.

"'Bring 'em along with you,' I said big heartedly, and Nora did!—the whole seventy people who made up her company.

"All women take advantage of me like that. It's a conspiracy to bankrupt me. My own daughters go around tearing up their stockings and once when I protested with tears in my eyes, the boy said:

"'Gee, isn't pop the great comedian!'

"Let me tell you, lady, the gangster racket may be tough, but the gagster racket is tougher."

Friends

Saunders, the famous chain-grocery man who has made and lost huge fortunes several times, was speaking on the element of personal contact in the business.

"It's a funny thing," he stated, but a person can buy provisions from a man for ten years and the man still remains that impersonal institution known as "the grocer."

"But ask him for an empty packing-box and he becomes your personal friend."

Reversed

One remembers William Jennings Bryan as a great orator and, even to the moment of his death, the ardent champion of the Holy Bible. He never made any great reputation as a humorist, but there was a decidedly risible side to his nature.

On one occasion, when some friends were teasing him about his daughter Ruth and her ambition to become a lawyer and follow in her famous daddy's footstep's, the Great Commoner laughed and said:

"Yes, the women surely have changed in a single generation. Now, there's my daughter Ruth, for instance. She's taking up law, while her mother always used to lay it down."

Successful

Judge Ben Lindsay was talking to a group of Boy Scout candidates, trying to impress upon them the importance of living up to the Golden Rule.

"It is the duty of everyone to make at least one person happy every day during the week," he declared and singling out an eager young face in the front row asked: "Have you done this, Freddy?"

"Yes, sir!" said Freddy proudly, and feeling that an explanation was necessary, added:

"Yesterday I went out to see my aunt and she was happy when I went home."

Misled

"We are constantly told that we should try more and more to understand nature," said Mrs. Herbert Hoover at the floral show, "and the advice is good. It would be a boon to the home gardener, however, if the thing could be reversed and nature try to understand the amateur gardener once in a while.

"Why, several weeks ago, I planted some bulbs and now I am quite sure the poor things think I buried them."

Oily

Edmond L. DuPont, Princeton graduate and son of the great capitalist of Wilmington, Del., has donned overalls and gone to work in one of the pipe line companies controlled by his father. He can spend a million a year if he wants to but his salary at the plant is about $25 a week.

On his first day at work, one of the laborers tried to kid the young millionaire and asked him what he was going to do with his twenty-five per. Young DuPont looked at his dirty clothes and ill-smeared hands and replied:

"Buy soap: The early bird may get the worm, but the oily bird needs a scrubbing brush."

Twitted

In his very caustic and critical book about the war, Capt. Hart finds space to comment on the differences which existed between Lloyd George and the Commander-in-Chief, Marshal Haig. It was the difference that naturally arises between an affable and adaptable man like George and a taciturn, inelastic man like Gen. Haig.

Hart tells an anecdote of Haig, who was awarding prizes at Aldershot for a cross-country run. Said Haig:

"I congratulate you on your running. You have run well. I hope you will run as well in the presence of the enemy."

Mystery

The teacher had been trying to explain the meaning of recuperate to her class and wound up with:

"Now, Jane, suppose your papa has worked very hard all day; he is tired and worn out, isn't he?"

"Yes," admitted little Jane Nels of St. Louis.

"Then, when night comes," continued the teacher, "and his work is over for the day, what does he do?"

"That's just what mother wants to know," replied Jane seriously.

Why?

"Daddy, why—" began the small boy for the tenth time one morning.

"Look here," said father, "have you ever heard the story of the little boy who asked so many questions he turned into a question mark?"

The youngster had not heard of this little boy and pondered deeply on the matter.

"But, daddy," he asked at length, "how did he manage to keep the dot under himself?"

Advance

Premier Mussolini, facing a fearful cabinet that felt he had over-reached himself, declared:

"When there is no way—create a way. That is the secret of America's rapid rise to power. If precedent interferes, it is thrust aside.

"An American captain of industry came to Rome to confer with me about a gigantic construction program I have in mind, and at the end of the discussion, a clerk was called in to put our mutual understanding into writing.

"In the midst of the American's dictation the clerk interrupted him saying: 'But sir, there is no such word as the one you are using. It is not in the dictionary.'

"'Then write a letter to the people who make the dictionaries and tell them to get out a new one with that word in it,' growled the American, and proceeded with his dictation."

Discontentment

When William Sawyer, whose name has been linked very often with Wall street of late, founded his Monks Club, which has for the chief clause in its constitution that no woman shall ever enter its doors, told the newspaper men that his club was one club which the women could never emulate.

"A bunch of men can get together and have a grand good time," he declared, "but when a bunch of women get together the fur is bound to fly. They seem to take delight in tormenting each other, like the couple I overheard at luncheon the other day.

"'My husband is so jealous!' gushed the first.

"'My goodness, isn't that embarrassing,' replied her friend pointedly.

"'Yes,' admitted the other icily. 'Isn't yours?'

"'Not in the least.'

"'Oh, isn't that humiliating,' purred the other."

Deluded

While the town of Arden is celebrating its thirtieth anniversary as a single tax colony, old timers are retelling a story on Upton Sinclair, the writer, who at one time was a resident of the colony.

At that time, he was writing diet articles for the magazines and trying out his theories on his son Davey. He boasted how well Davey was getting along on a diet of nuts and, as a matter of fact, Davey seemed to be getting along very well indeed.

Davey was a great demonstration of his father's theories, the proof of the pudding, as it were. Also, Davey was discretion itself. His noted father never guessed that always, at meal time, the lad dropped in at a neighbor's.

He would gaze with wide, sad eyes at the substantial fare and always the kind neighbor relented and Davey got a square meal which in no way interfered with the writings of his father.

Logic

"Years ago, when I was visiting in California," says Mrs. Florence Parkinson of San Diego, "my little ten-year-old daughter became very homesick and wanted to go back home to Montana.

"We lived on a stock ranch, miles from town and often ordered merchandise from mail-order houses, C.O.D.

"One day, when Carol was whining to go home, I told her we would have to wait until our money was sent us. Carol pondered over my statement for a while and then asked:

"'Mother, why can't we go home C.O.D.?'"

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

Returning from a series of "fiestas" at which delicious native cocoanut dishes had been served, Mrs. Walker triumphantly announced what she believed to be a brand new idea.

"Do you know, I believe there are possibilities in this cocoanut milk!"

"Yes?—Just what, for instance?"

"Why, I believe it can be used just as cow's milk is! Couldn't we get an analysis of it?"

"That's easy," replied her husband. "If you'd care to read the report I wrote twenty years ago, you'll find it all there."

"And just to think these poor children are living underneath the trees that would feed them and make them strong—and they don't know it!"

During the next few days interesting new dishes appeared on the Walker menu—ice cream, puddings and milkshakes that had never heard the tinkle of a cowbell. Interest in cocoanuts revived. The Walker "cocino" was converted into a laboratory that hummed with business after office hours were over. The apparently docile cocoanut proved more temperamental than her sister—cow. Results were highly gratifying and they were just ready to share the new milk with the native population, when a new snag appeared! It was that persistent and general belief held by the Filipinos that cocoanut milk was a laxative! It took months of educational work before the native doctors finally could be induced to recommend it to friends or prescribe it to patients. At last the Public Welfare Commission outlined a plan for making a comparative test of the value of a supplemented diet for children. There had been considerable controversy in the press from time to time, some of the doctors contending that inasmuch as Nature had not provided the Philippines with cows, milk evidently was not needed. The Welfare Commission chose eighty children from the orphanage under their control. Twenty were given reconstituted milk, twenty cocoanut milk, twenty sweetened condensed milk while the twenty remaining, used as a control group, received no milk as a supplement to their daily diet, which consisted mostly of rice, fish, some vegetables and, occasionally, a sweet. After four months an amazing gain in weight was shown by those receiving the three different kinds of milk. They had gained from 20 per cent to 22 per cent over the controlled group which received no milk, showing conclusively that children do need milk. The great gain made by these groups over a similar test made in America showed that Filipino children had long been underfed. Among children of normal parents, those placed on reconstituted milk seemed to gain slightly more, but in the case of the weaker children from leprous parents, the cocoanut milk seemed to give best results. This was explained by reason of the greater fat content of the cocoanut milk and the need for this extra fuel by the more undernourished children.

Comparative analysis of cow's milk and cocoanut milk:

	Cocolait (cocoanut milk)	Cow's milk (all forms)
Fat	5.66	3.7
Protein	2.15	3.4
Carbohydrates	3.13	4.9
Ash	.5	.7

The caloric content is 69 for cow's milk and 68.5 for cocoanut milk.

When Mr. Walker had perfected the dairy products, he experimented to find a confection. For generations the Filipinos have made a delicious syrup, called "Matamis-Sa-Bao," meaning "Sweet-in-the-shell." Fresh cocoanuts are shredded, pressed by hand and combined with native sugar. It is served in cocoanut shells at fiestas or sent in tubes of bamboo as a holiday gift to friends. But "Matamis-Sa-Bao" does not keep well and is laborious and difficult to make. This was a challenge. In producing a machine-processed honey-like syrup that will keep, he has achieved a food triumph. It is claimed to be the first syrup produced which contains both fat and protein in addition to sugar.

Now that the Cocoanut Dairy is swinging into action, one may expect a controversy between zoologists and botanists as to the proper classification for the "cocoanut cow."

Wedding Day

dering where and how and what had happened; but he could not ask it. "She is like you," he said. "She is very, very like you."

She gazed at him and replied nothing; and what he said was wholly unplanned: "She is like neither one of her parents: no one would recognize her from them. Anyone would connect her with you."

Color flamed in her face and paled away; and he saw, in his glance which swept over her, that she clenched her hands, and then slowly relaxed.

"May I leave today, Mr. Imbrie?"

"Leave?" he said. "You mean for the day?"

"And not come back."

"Never?" He had had no idea it would escape him so sharply; he had had no idea how much excitement was in him.

"How can I work here now?" she asked. "I must go—go."

"You can go, of course," he said, "whenever you want. Today, you said. Very well; tell Miss Harvey to take your work."

"Then I can go now?"

"Now," he said, and pushed about, meaninglessly, the papers on his desk. He heard her thanking him; then she was gone, and when he rang twenty minutes later it was Miss Harvey who responded.

"Miss Winslow has left?" he asked.

"Yes, sir. Just now."

"Very well." But within him, it was not at all well; he had waited too long. If his pride had let him ring five minutes earlier, everything might have been different.

Yet again he delayed too long before making his next decision. It was afternoon when he obtained, from the office records, her home address and phone number.

The phone did not answer and his journey to the building where she lived proved fruitless, except as it gained him the information that she had occupied, by herself, a one-room kitchenette apartment. At noon, she had returned to it only to leave an hour later with a suitcase and a handbag, after telling the janitor that she would be away for a few weeks and after asking him to hold any mail that came for her. She had given no forwarding address.

Plainly, a new purpose had taken possession of her to the exclusion of everything else; nothing counted in comparison with it.

And speculation as to what this might be, took possession of Howard Imbrie. In his office and in the midst of talk with men about other things, suddenly he would be wondering about her, where she might be and what she might be seeking. She sent no word to the office, and no inquiry brought him any useful information; and so, at last, he resorted to the Hildreths.

This was on Friday evening and he dropped in as many another acquaintance was doing in these days for a closer look at Joyce.

She was young, very young; but love was young.

"And our love it was stronger by far
than the love
Of those who were older than we—
Of many far wiser than we—"

ran the words in Howard's head as he looked at Joyce.

Soon he had a word alone with Hildreth.

"By the way, Jim, are you or Amy related to anyone named Winslow, Agnes Winslow?"

Hildreth shook his head, without interest.

"Have you a cousin or some relation older than Joyce—but like her?"

"Like her?" Hildreth asked, giving attention.

"Very much like her," Howard said and closed the door of the smoking-room and told him what had occurred.

"This Agnes Winslow," Hildreth asked, "might be thirty-five?"

"I suppose so."

"She is thirty-five, Howard; for Joyce is seventeen—and she was eighteen, then."

"She?" said Howard. "Who?"

"The mother was eighteen, Howard, Joyce's mother," Hildreth said. "You've found the mother, I suppse."

"How's she the mother?" said Howard; for what else was there to say. His pulses were hot needles in his temples

"When did you know her, Hildreth?"

"I never knew her. I never even saw her. I suppose she's the mother, that's all, Howard. For Joyce had a mother—that neither Amy nor I ever saw. Joyce wasn't ours . . . We lost our baby, Howard. A little girl. Amy was in a hospital . . . Our own child scarcely lived an hour . . . A nurse told me of a girl in a free ward who had a baby girl. The baby was fine and strong, Howard, and the mother was lovely, they said; but she was alone and terribly run down and not a cent in the world and no place to go to. She'd been asking where she might leave the child while she looked for a job when she got well. She was eighteen—"

"Married?" Howard broke in on him. "She had been married?" Why was it so much to him whether or not she had been married? But he felt choked while he waited for the answer.

"She'd been married. To a boy who was a mechanic for an automobile race driver; the car'd turned over and killed him in a road race six months before. The girl had no home, no money, nothing. I think the race people had made up a purse of a hundred dollars, they'd given her. It was gone, of course . . . The nurse showed me the baby and I brought it to Amy. We sent word we'd take her for our own and no one else need ever know. The girl wouldn't give her up at first. But finally she did."

Hildreth balked before his memories. He was having a glimpse again of a hospital room wherein lay his wife to whom he had brought the baby he had found to take the place of the child that was gone; but Howard was having a glimpse of another room—of the big, bare free ward of a hospital with a bed on which lay alone a girl, young and slight as Joyce, but with Agnes Winslow's eyes. It was her eyes particularly that Howard could see and, strangely, her slim, white, lovely hands. Her eyes looked at him, as sometimes he had caught her staring at him, never seeing him; and her hands clenched tight in a sudden, spasmodic clasp. Sometimes he had noticed that, too.

"We did it pretty well," Hildreth said. "Not ten people ever knew Joyce wasn't ours. She's never dreamed she's not."

Howard said: "Didn't you ever know her mother's name?"

"You don't. It's better not. It was all arranged so that we never knew her name; she never knew ours."

"She's found it out."

"Howard, what do you figure she's doing?"

"I can't figure. You're sure you haven't heard from her? You've not received anything which now you think might have come from her? Nothing has happened which you couldn't explain and which might be some attempt of hers to interfere?"

"Not a thing. No one has bothered us at all. Your Miss Winslow has—character, it seems."

"Yes," said Howard. "She has character—as much as any woman I ever saw. More," he added, with too much emphasis. "That's why I can't even guess what she's up to."

Of his own plan, he said nothing to Hildreth that evening. It was to watch for Agnes at some big affair in Joyce's honor, which would be announced in the newspapers and, on the next Wednesday evening, his plan succeeded.

It was about 11 o'clock, for a dinner had been given for Joyce and Ted Lennon at one place and then the whole wedding party had been taken to another great home for a dance where there was a terrace gay with lanterns and where the colored lights gleamed again in reflection from a marble-bound pool on the lawn and an orchestra played outdoors for the dancing.

All this could be seen, by passers-by, at a point where the hedge opened for a driveway, and there a group was gathered, listening to the music and looking on. Howard approached from the side-

A Pullman Predicament

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Creator of the "Helen and Warren" Characters

"DEAR, you've still over an hour. The train doesn't go till one."

"Want to get in that berth and tear off some sleep," Warren strapping his suitcase. "Rushed like fury today—had to leave things in shape at the office."

"And you won't be back before Sunday?" wistfully.

"Can't tell—I'll wire. Darn nuisance," pocketing his gloves. "Important things comin' up. But I promised Barton—and no sidesteppin' that old fusspot."

Helen clinging to his arm as he strode to the hall. Forcing a cheerful response to his grouchily casual good-by.

But her fixed smile faded when the elevator dropped down. With sick depression, turning back to the bedroom.

How forlorn it looked! The lamp-glowed comfort suddenly chill and empty.

A long, lonely week! Always she shrank from even a dinner without him. And now six days—

Broodingly clearing up the after-packing disorder.

Lifting the drowsily resentful Pussy Purr-Mew from his tossed-on-a-chair suit. Send that to be pressed. And while he was gone, have his golf suit cleaned.

Taking down her hair now. Her dejection triply mirrored—

The bell! A startling midnight peal.

A telegram? Yes, a boy with the ominous yellow envelope.

INFLUENZA CAN'T GO TO OFFICE STOP POSTPONE TRIP

BARTON

Too late! His trip to Chicago for nothing.

If she could reach him! Twelve-fifteen now—and the train left at one. Could she make it?

Tucking her loosened hair under her hat. Snatching her coat. Pulling it on as she flew to the elevator.

Down in the quiet, star-enchanted night. Jumping into the cab summoned by the puzzled doorman.

What to do? She didn't know his berth number! Or even the car.

If he would only be in the smoker But so tired—probably in his section asleep. With all the curtains down—how could she find him?

A chaos of fantastic plans as she was whirled toward Grand Central.

Careening into Park avenue. A rippling kaleidoscope of colored taxi lights.

Half-past twelve—and four more blocks! If they weren't held up—

But at the next corner, the maddening signal flashing red.

Helen's heart-thumping impatience. Clasping and unclasping her purse.

Off again. The traffic denser. A five-minute eternity before they drew up.

Dashing from the tunneled cab entrance into the colossal, glittering station.

A roaring din under the great dome. Even after midnight, bustling activity. Scurrying passengers. Red-capped, bag-laden porters.

A guard unintelligibly shouting an outgoing train.

Her held-breath glance at a huge clock. Twenty-three of one!

"Where does the Chicago express leave?" darting to the information booth.

"Track 47. Lower level," the clerk's automatic chant.

Fortunately she knew the way. Flying along labyrinthine passages.

At the bulletin-boarded gate, her excited explanation. The good-natured guard letting her through.

Three somnolent trains waiting to draw out. Running down the Track-47 platform. Helen plunged into the nearest car..

"What berth, please?" a white-coated porter stopped her.

"Why, I—I'm looking for my husband," tremulously. "I've a telegram—he's not to go."

"What's his number, ma'am? Don't know? Well, pretty near everybody's in bed now," an unhelpful shrug. "How was you figurin' to locate him?"

"Can't you page him?" fumbling in her purse. "It's terribly important! Call his name—"

"No'm, I'd wake the whole train," pocketing the proffered bill.

"Oh, can't you do something?" frantically. "Perhaps you noticed him? Tall and broad-shouldered. With a tweed coat and a soft gray felt."

"Plenty gentlemen look like that, ma'am," a white-toothed grin.

"He had a pigskin bag and a malacca stick," groping for identifying details.

"A stick?" ruminatively scratching his head. "Tall gentleman with a cane and gray hat in lower 15. Reckon that's your husband."

Eagerly hurrying after him. Getting out the telegram—

"Beg pardon, suh," addressing the curtains. "Your wife's here to see you."

"My wife?" an indignant bellow. "What's the idea of waking me up? Haven't got any wife—and damn glad of it!"

A shiny bald head poked out. Helen's crimson embarrassment.

A hasty retreat from the pursuing glare. No time for explanation.

And that porter no help. Even in her flurry, regretting the wasted dollar.

Go to the club car herself. Anyone who was still up would be there.

Racing through the all-Pullman train. Endless aisles of green-curtained berths. Spectral undulating bulges—space-cramped undressing.

The lights dimmed. The underground stuffiness undissipated by humming fans.

In the next car, a grotesque tableau blocking the aisle. A rotund, purple-robed passenger climbing to an upper berth. A porter holding steps for the unwieldy ascent.

At last brighter lights and gleaming woodwork through a haze of smoke. The club car.

Only half a dozen men in the deep leather chairs. A group of three playing cards. That dark head buried in a newspaper—

No, a blue-serged shoulder. And Warren had worn his light gray.

Defeated despair. Nearly ten of one! Even if she found him, hardly time to dress and get off.

But to let him take this long futile trip! Two wasted days—with important work at the office. He hadn't wanted to go. His glum departure—

Starting back through the sleepers. Staring helplessly down the dim curtained vista.

A hairy arm thrust out. Dropping shoes into the carpeted aisle.

A heart-pounding inspiration. Trace him that way—his tan English oxfords!

Scanning the double row of shoes set out for cleaning. Mostly men's.

Concentrating on heavy, round-toed tan oxfords. No, those too small.

The next pair looked familiar! If a London label—

A furtive glance about. All the curtains closed. No porter in evidence.

Snatching up the shoe. But a San Francisco label!

Dropping it with a clatter as a mustached face gaped out.

"Oh, I—I'm sorry!" quiveringly. "I was looking for my husband—"

"Expect to find him in my shoe?"

Her face aflame as she escaped to the next car.

After that mortifying encounter, shrinking from further risks. But goading herself on. Only five minutes more!

Tiptoeing down the aisle. Another familiar pair of tan oxfords.

A guilty over-her-shoulder survey. No one in sight. No sound but somnolent breathing and the droning fans.

Cautiously picking up a shoe. In the faint light, those small gilt letters—

A tense scrutiny. Yes, London!

Repressing an exultant cry. Hardly others from the same Piccadilly bootmaker!

"Warren!" calling softly. "Warren!"

No response. And no time for timidity. Get him out—quick!

With fluttery trepidation, parting the heavy curtains. Peering in—

Leaping joy at the tousled head on the pillow.

"Dear!" shaking his sheeted shoulder. "Get up—quick!"

"Huh?" one eye half open. "What's wrong?"

"Hurry! You don't have to go."

"What in blazes?" his sleep-dazed stare. "What the devil you doing here?"

"Quick—quick get dressed!" breathlessly. "A telegram from Mr. Barton—you needn't go. But you've only three minutes!"

"Three minutes, eh?" now alert. "Pitch me that suit."

"Over your pajamas," jerking it from the hanger. "Here's your shirt."

Waiting by the closed curtains, her gaze riveted on her wristwatch.

A guard's raucous all-aboard shout. A warning tremor—

"Oh, hurry—hurry!" panicky.

"Hold this!" his collar with a dangling tie thrust out.

Warren emerging in ludicrous dishevelment. The gray suit bunched over his pajamas. His hat on the back of his rumpled hair. And red bedroom slippers!

Shuffling down the aisle, his stick and overcoat in one hand. In the other the bag, the unbuckled straps slapping the foreign labels.

"Oh, your shoes!" seizing them, Helen flew after him.

Almost colliding with a wide-eyed porter.

The next second, out on the platform. The train snorting off—to Chicago.

Amused stares from pillowed heads in the passing windows.

"Your overcoat—dear, put it on!"

"Cover-all, eh?" shrugging into it. "But can't go through the station like this!"

The platform deserted now. Sitting on an empty baggage truck, he kicked off his slippers.

"Golly, left my socks!" pulling the shoes on his bare feet. "Close shave! Now, what's it all about?"

"Here's the wire. Oh, put your slippers in before you lock the suitcase."

"Stick 'em in my pocket," scanning the yellow slip. "So old Barton's got the flu? Tough break for him. But I'm darn glad to get out of that jaunt!"

"Dear, I was so afraid I wouldn't find you!" as he fastened his collar and tie. "I didn't know the berth or the car—"

Starting up the ramp. A recognizing grin from the benevolent gate guard.

"We'll sneak into a cab without hitting the waiting-room," Warren steered her to a sepulchral passage "Not slicked up for exhibition! Cash in on that ticket tomorrow. How the dickens did you locate me anyway?"

"By your shoes!" skipping beside him, glowingly happy now. "I loooked for tan oxfords with a London label—"

"Sleuthin' from the ground up, eh?" he grinned. "Well, that was snappy work, Kitten—roustin' me out of there. Saved me a two-day trip. Your detective urge usually gums things up. But this time you pulled a fast one!"

CHEROKEE ROSE

I thought to pluck a Cherokee,
A lovely bud, ah, Heaven-born.
As on its beauty wonderingly
I mused, I felt the wounding thorn.
And as I drew the hand away
That through the vine had reached far
Deep sank the thorn. Ah well-a-day!
I lost the rose but bear the scar.

I met a maiden, long ago,
And I would have her all unshared.
As thorn and rose together grow
Scarce with the maid I better fared.
She left me with a wounded heart
That lingered years do not repair
Though waste and mountain us do part,—
For she was fair, and passing fair.

is it Weak Arches?

How tiring and annoying they are! . . . . You need arch-support shoes,—but not ordinary ones! You need shoes which support all, not merely half the arches in your foot . . . for, in addition to the longitudinal arch, your foot has also a very delicate metatarsal arch composed of tiny bones. When this arch begins to sag, serious troubles follow,—metatarsalgia, sole callouses, Morton's toe, heel pains, bad corns, and more. Let us show you Dr. A. Reed's MOVABLE-ARCH shoes, his newest scientific development, with TWO separate arch supports. They are smartly styled for men and women.

Amateur Scientist Who Sent First Photograph by Cable Across Atlantic Explains Mysteries of Television.

University of Southern California Establishes Marriage and Family Bureau

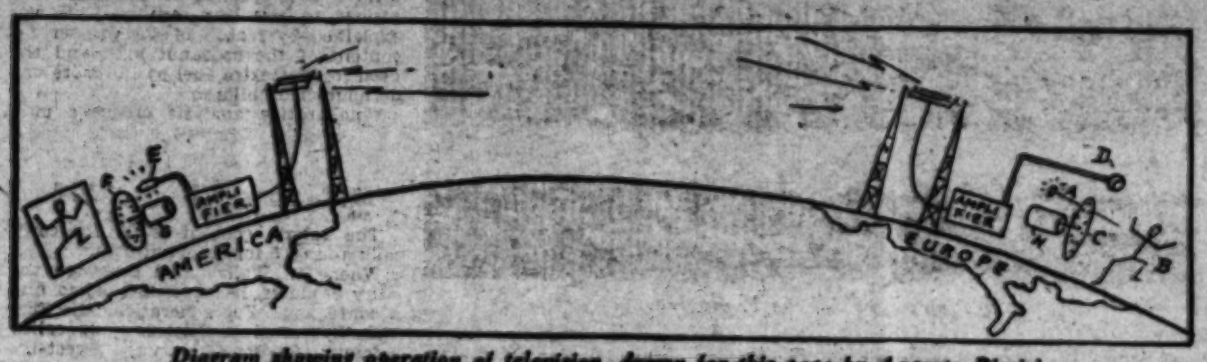

Diagram showing operation of television, drawn for this page by Augusto Bissiri.

Television—Its Triumphs and Troubles

"PUT me down as an amateur," said Augusto Bissiri, "and I'll tell you what I know about television. Having been an amateur for thirty years, I do not want to begin talking authoritatively now."

All the same, it was this modest little Marconi-like research worker who cabled the first picture of any kind ever sent across the Atlantic—a picture of Lord Cromer, reproduced from the original upon this page. It was sent from the officers of the New York Times to the London Mail, on the 29th of June, 1910. That was the beginning of television. Bissiri is also the inventor of the phonogram machine, described on this page October 26, which is being commercialized by the Radio Corporation of America.

"The sending of still pictures over wires is not television," he explained. "Television means seeing what your wife is doing, for example, in Paris. It means flashing an instantaneous motion picture before your eyes just as a radio flashes sound against your ears. But pictures, as such, cannot be cabled on wires nor transmitted by radio through air. Nothing is sent except electric impulses, and the impulses make dots. If you look at Lord Cromer's picture, you will see the dots. In like manner, if you should look at a beautiful half-tone through a miscroscope, you would see that it consists of tiny dots. Telegraph lines send the same kind of dots, or dots and dashes, the dashes being elongated dots.

"It takes about thirty-five rows of dots with thirty-five dots in each row, or 1225 in all, to make an inch-square picture, including the background or stage. But an inch-square stage would be too tiny to show actors performing satisfactorily; hence television calls for larger aggregations of dots. The whole scene, with pictured performers in it, cannot be less than five inches square, which is twenty-five square inches, so there would be 30,625 dots in the twenty-five square inches. Now the troubles begin. To produce a television picture five inches square, all those 30,625 dots would have to be flashed forth sixteen times in one second. Multiply 30,625 by sixteen, and you will see that 490,000 dots are required every second. So you have just 1-490,000th of a second to send each dot. How are you going to send dots so rapidly? It took me two hours to send the much smaller number of dots in Lord Cromer's head, but here we are speaking about sending 490,000 in one second."

Asked why the whole set of dots must be sent sixteen times a second, he began talking about eyes, for pictures are made to be seen, and eye possibilities have to be considered. If an object, like a bullet, shoots rapidly before us, we do not see it, because it moves too swiftly to register on the retina. There is an eye-limit, therefore, to the rapidity with which television dots flash on and off. On the other hand, if an object stays in front of us long enough to register, its vision lingers in the eye, even after it has passed out of sight, for one-sixteenth of a second. This eye condition is utilised in motion pictures to produce an impression of a continuous panorama. Sixteen tiny separate pictures appear on every foot of film, and the film, running through the projecting machine at one foot per second, produces a continuous impression, because the lingering light in the eye carries one picture into the next, without any visible break.

"Television dots," Mr. Bissiri continued, "are not all one color. Some have to be brightly illuminated, some dimly. Others are dark. To show an actor's black hair, dark dots would be used, but a white face and whiter collar would have to be shown by means of light and lighter dots. Among the whole 30,625 dots, composing a five-inch-square picture, very few would be illuminated exactly alike. So you see how complicated television becomes. But I haven't yet referred to the most complicated trouble of all—the necessity of rearranging 30,625 dots sixteen times every second to show movements by actors and objects, such as trees, in the background."

The dots, it seems, would have to be changed every time the camera clicks just as the rubber dinosaur and rubber trees in the jungle of "The Lost World" were changed between clicks. During the filming of this motion picture, a camera would click off one "frame," or picture, then fourteen men would rush forward and animate the dinosaur and trees, little by little. One man would raise the dinosaur's lip a little, another would move its tail slightly—just enough to show motion—others would move parts of the foliage. After doing his bit, each man would disappear, then the camera would click off one more frame. For every foot of the film, this operation had to be repeated sixteen times, otherwise theater-goers would have seen flickers in the dinosaur's snarl, and its tail and the trees would have waved queerly. It made no difference how long the fourteen men took to make the movements, but if the dinosaur and vegetation had been alive the camera would have had to click continuously; here the actors stood stone-still while the rearrangements were being made.

In television, however, instead of dealing with one dinosaur and a half-dozen trees, you have to deal with 30,625 dots on a tiny stage and make the rearrangements sixteen times a second. Human hands cannot work that fast, so it has to be done by machinery. It has to be done by a mechanism which will move each individual dot in 1-490,000th of one second. The dots cannot be simply shifted in masses, because actors behave differently. Think of the number of dots to be moved to show a wink, or a smile! How is it to be done?

"Suppose an actor in Paris performs in front of a revolving disk with holes in it," Mr. Bissiri explained. "Lines of light reflected by the actor will go through the holes—white light from a white collar, dim light from a pale face, no light from black hair—and a lens behind the disk would bring the lines of light together and shoot them into a photo-electric cell."

A photo-electric cell is one of the most marvelous of all scientific inventions—something quite new. It is an electric lamp bulb working backward. If you force an electric current through the filament of a bulb, it gets hot and radiates light. Reversing the process, when you force light back into the bulb, a current of electricity is generated in the filament—and that kind of a bulb is a photo-electric cell. Until photo-electric cells were developed, according to Mr. Bissiri, nothing was known which would receive and give up impressions fast enough for television purposes. Unlike human eyes, a photo-electric cell will register and surrender a million impressions while an eye is responding to one. A photo-electric cell works as if it were an intelligent thing. Working in connection with a perforated disk, through the holes of which light reaches it, it seems to shout: "Here's a dark dot for black hair, a white dot for a collar," and so on.

Asked to make a diagram of the television process, Mr. Bissiri sketched the one herewith reproduced, saying: "All television systems, no difference how constructed, must translate the lights and shades of an image into varying electrical impulses at the transmitting end, then, at the receiving end, change the impulses back into the same lights and shades. As shown by the diagram, the actor B is strongly illuminated in parts by a narrow beam of light A, which shines through perforations in a disk C. (Illuminating a part of an object at a time is called "scanning.") The light and dark parts of an object so scanned are 'viewed' by the photo-electric cell D, which transmits the impressions through an amplifier to a radio or wire connection to their destination. At the receiving station the electrical variations must be transformed into lights and shades corresponding to the original. This is accomplished by first amplifying them, then having them act on a neon glow-lamp E, which varies in illumination according to the amount of current received—changing thousands of times a second. The light produced by the neon lamp then passes through perforations in another scanning disk F, which rotates in exact synchronism with the scanning disk C of the transmitting station, and thus the actor on one side of the ocean reappears on a screen on the other side.

"Despite all I've said, however, I agree with Dr. Jewett of the Bell Telephone Research Laboratories that commercial television may still be a long way off. It is more than a dream, and it will surely come true. When it does come true, we will have to change our ways. It will revolutionize the ways of the world. Think what it will mean to sit in our homes and see what people are doing on the other side of the world. Everybody will have to obey all the Ten Commandments, because no one will know who might be 'looking in.'"

Asked if he is buying stock in any of the television companies now being promoted, he replied: "If I were wealthy, I'd buy stock to help the cause along, but I wouldn't expect to receive any dividends on the stock during my lifetime."

"AN INSTITUTE for Marriage and Family Guidance," affiliated with the University of Southern California, has been opened at 715 South Hope street, under the direction of Dr. Meyer F. Nimkoff. Consideration is given to such problems as mating, sex adjustments, reproduction, marriage and money, the first year of marriage, including analysis of actual marriage situations. The co-operation of consultants in psychology, psychiatry, medicine and law has been secured. Its aims are similar to those of the Marriage Clinic, heretofore outlined on this page.

Alcohol Soil Test Fails

THE alcohol short method of determining soil moisture, proposed some time ago by Dr. G. J. Bouyoucos, of the Michigan agricultural experiment station, has been tried out by Dr. Alfred Smith and Fred W. Smith of the University of California, and they found that it doesn't work. The oven-drying method is the dependable one.

A Pullman Predicament

An Episode in the Married Life of Helen and Warren

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"DAR, you've still over an hour. The train doesn't go till one."

"Want to get in that berth and rest all you can," Warren enjoining his solicitude. "Looked like forty-day—had to leave things in shape at the office."

"Golly, let's my socks!" pulling the shoes on his bare feet. "Close shave! Now, what's it all about?"

[Wedding Day]

She was at the very edge of the hedge, almost in its shadow, standing quietly and far enough off so that no servant need speak to her. No one was with her. Others crowded about her, but it was perfectly plain that she was alone.

She had on a dark, close fitted hat which covered her hair, but her profile was unmistakable, and her intentness. She was aware of no one near her. Howard gained the place beside her before she looked around.

"It's all right," he whispered when she recognized him. He wanted to clasp her arm and hold her to reassure her; but what right had he to touch her? She gazed at him, drawing away a little, saying nothing. She slipped into the shadow of the hedge, and those behind let her pass willingly enough, and let him pass as he followed.

She went a little way along the walk in the darkness and then she waited for him. "What do you want?" she said.

"I want to help you," he whispered, as though strangers from the street were still about.

"I don't need help."

"Of course not," he said, humoring her, and he started on, leading her farther away from the others, and soon he said: "I know what happened. Hildreth told me."

"He told you what I did?"

"About Joyce; yes."

They were alone and in starlight only, but he could see that she straightened. "It was right for her! Wasn't it? You've seen her. How has it come out?" she cried in her whisper. "How has it come out for her, would you say?"

"For her, wonderfully," he said. "She's the happiest girl anyone ever saw."

"Well?" came the challenge to him, then. "Well? Why do you bother?"

"About her, I don't. I do—about you."

"You needn't."

"I want to. You're not just looking in past a hedge, are you? You didn't give up your job and leave no address at your flat for that."

"You've been at the flat?"

"The day you left me. Have you been—resting since, do you mind telling me?"

"No, I've got another job."

"That's good."

"Not like the one with you."

"What is it like—will you tell me?"

She started walking again and swiftly, so that he had to hurry beside her; as suddenly she stopped and gazed back at the glow over the lawn.

"Where are you living?"

"Near here. I've got a room."

"You didn't say what you're doing."

"No. I'm a hairdresser."

"What?"

"I'm working in a hairdressing shop. . . . Did they tell you Joyce wasn't theirs?"

"Yes."

"They definitely said it?"

"Hildreth did."

"It makes no difference. I was sure . . . They're fine people; as fine as ever I was told the people who took her would be."

"They've always been fine people," said Howard.

"They've given her everything—everything."

"Why are you in a hairdressing shop?"

"It's the only thing, as far as I can see, that I can possibly do for her."

"For her?"

"For myself, of course," Agnes Winslow said. "It's the sort of thing you call 'for somebody else' when it's the thing in all the world you have to do for yourself."

"What is that thing?"

He had to know and he halted at the driveway to another house which was dark and where the lawn lay deserted and silent under the starlight. The house was far away and he drew her in beyond the edge of the hedge. No one was anywhere about.

"She's my own, my own, you know," said Agnes Winslow. "I'm her mother. I bore her, and I never had her in my arms. I can't remember ever having my hands upon her. I was so sick, you see . . . I never meant to give her up. I meant to bathe her and dress her in pretty little things—I'd made some of the things for her. I meant to hold her and play with her and teach her to talk. Then she was there and I hadn't a cent or any strength or any friends; and that chance came—that wonderful chance for her, if I gave her up . . . I'm not sorry for her, you understand. I did right! . . . But I've never touched her; I've never done one thing for her with my hands, and I have to! Once!

"I was a hairdresser long ago. I got a job in a shop and worked up. I used to shampoo and give waves. I was good at it . . . I'm still good at it. I'm working in a shop where she sometimes comes, and when she comes again I'll give her a good wave! I'll wash her hair with my own hands and then arrange it for her . . . That's all! That's all I want to do, don't you see? Not a word, I'll say—not a word, except the regular things: 'How do you do? Is the water right? Is it too hot?' . . ."

Howard held her shoulders between his hands and she paid no attention to him; she might have been, for the moment, speaking to him from a dream, speaking directly to him without seeing him or real awareness of him at all. Then it was past and they were two people, a man and a woman, one of whom had employed the other, standing in a stranger's garden at midnight.

The garden and the wide space of the lawn and the failure of the house and the lagging emotion of his moment with her lay in his loneliness after he had left her at the dwelling where she had her room. The walls of his apartment, when he went "home," seemed drawn together, confining him. No reason why he should not stand beside a garden of his own and look over a lawn broader, even, and return to a home in such a house—if he were not alone.

From the office in the morning he phoned Hildreth, but said only that he would drop by during the evening. He could not report over the phone what he had learned.

Strange how affairs which, ordinarily, you deemed important flattened out before a matter like this. Here in the office had been Agnes Winslow, devoting her days to the detail of big transactions. She had mastered the intricacies of prices, shipments, deliveries; her substitute was a blunderer beside her. She had made herself more than competent; expert. And she had cast it all away, without a thought, for a chance of washing her daughter's hair.

Not so strange after all; for he today could not keep his mind on transactions, though they mounted to hundreds of thousands; while he was talking to a man he would wander—in mind—to a hairdressing shop.

He had an idea of going there when the day was done, but he went instead to the Hildreths'; and there he learned that nothing out of the way yet had happened. When he told Hildreth and Amy where Agnes Winslow was employed and why she was there, he learned that nothing was likely to happen. Joyce was not going again to that hairdressing shop. A hairdresser came to the house.

It was plain to Howard that his news brought only relief to Hildreth.

"She has character, this Agnes Winslow," he remarked his wife. "If you just make sure that Joy doesn't go to that shop there will probably be no trouble."

"There would be no trouble if she went," Howard retorted with too much heat. "Miss Winslow would do nothing to disturb her."

"Of course, not," said Hildreth hastily. "But you aren't asking us to send her there, are you?"

"No," said Howard, and looked at Amy, who so far had taken no part, but asked:

"How would your Miss Winslow—the mother, prevent Joyce from seeing her likeness?"

"She's thought of that. In the first place, Joyce would not be bothered by a likeness—would she? Joyce knows nothing about herself. In the second place, it's not so noticeable, if you don't see Miss Winslow's hair—when she wears a hat. She says she keeps her own hair covered in the shop."

Then Amy asked: "Do you think we ought to send Joyce there, Howard?"

"You can't put a thing like that up to me! Nothing would happen if she went, though, I tell you. And not a word said except about her hair, and hot water, and—"

He had to stop. Hildreth sat staring at him; but Amy went from the room.

"Well?" said Hildreth.

"Well?" said Howard.

Amy returned with an envelope. "Look at it if you like, Howard," she said. "Take it to her, anyway. I'm not leaving that to you to decide. Take it or send it to her where she is.

"I've written to her, dear," she said to her husband, "asking her to come here."

"For what?"

"To do Joyce's hair."

"When?"

"On the wedding day morning."

Howard did not take the note to her, he sent it by a messenger and received only the boy's report that it had been delivered.

He had not read Amy's note to Agnes and he had seen neither of them since, so he was guessing only at the hour of the appointment. Ten, possibly, he thought, or not before ten.

He reached the house at quarter past ten, and Hildreth met him in the hall.

"Come in here." Hildreth led him to the room where they had talked. "She's upstairs. Smoke?"

They sat down and smoked, and after a few moments Amy joined them.

"She's kept on her hat," Amy said. "I've left them alone."

"Good," said Howard. "Good." And they waited, looking at each other.

"No reason for this," Howard said suddenly and opened the door to the wedding day confusion which flowed through the house. Girls whom he had met before, bridesmaids, were all about, and one of them talked to him. Boys were at the doors in cars segking the girls, teasing them to come out and drive away.

It was pleasant and warm, a day to be young and to make love. A day for a boy who had yet to taste either of the tragedy or the triumph of life, to make love to a girl as innocent of either as he. A day also for a man to make love—to a woman.

Hildreth and Amy were talking with the guests; but they hovered too often near the stairs. Suppose something were said, they were thinking! Suppose, upstairs Agnes Winslow lost for a moment control of herself.

Howard never for an instant feared it. He moved toward them, head up, smiling, sure of himself. Sure of her, that meant; proud of her. At last the hour ended.

A door upstairs opened and Joyce was speaking naturally, a bit excitedly, of [illegible]

[illegible] Agnes Winslow appeared.

"Get away!" Howard whispered and pushed at Hildreth to send him from his own hall. Howard begged of Amy, too, "For God's sake, get away."

There was no one else, at that instant, in the hall and Howard cleared it. He meant at first also to get himself out of the way, but he did not, for she failed to notice him. She descended, as in a dream; she looked at him but did not see him. Like a sleepwalker she gazed at him and avoided him, as she avoided the table in the hall; and she went past him to the door and opened it and went out.

At the sidewalk she hesitated and then turned in the direction away from the city.

Howard caught up his hat and followed her, but at the little distance at first. He made no effort, for some time, to overtake her, and it was not until she reached Lincoln Park that he approached her.

She looked about at the edge of a strip of grass, and, seeing him, she waited for him and spoke to him.

"Let's go on," he said beside her. They were in the staring sunlight, there, with cars and busses rushing past; across the grass was a walk which led to gardens and groves of trees and a screen of shrubbery.

"She's lovely," Howard said, looking down at the slender figure beside him. "Like you, she is; like you." Now they were quite alone and the sunlight spotted through the leaves.

"She's all they say she is!" her mother whispered. "She's kind—and sound—and right. They've done everything for her well. If I'd had her I couldn't have done it. She'd have met too many hard things too young. Something'd have scarred her soul. As it is, nothing has. She can love and be married in that big church; and go to China—and I can let her go.

"No matter where she is, you see," Agnes Winslow looked up at him, "now I'll know she's mine. No matter if I never speak to her again or see her, I'll feel she's mine. I'll feel that always; nothing can take it away. I've done something for her with my hands."

They stood in the shadow spotted with sunlight, and he faced her but said nothing. He could feel the constraint which had held her, as long as he had known her, falling away.

"You've been kind to me, Mr. Imbrie," she said. "I've taken all your kindness and never told you, Mr. Imbrie, no one else in all the world could have been so kind to me."

He held her before him between his hands, held her slender shoulders under the plain black dress which this morning she wore. A close, black hat concealed her hair and he snatched it off and made her glorious in the spot of sunlight.

"I want it all," he whispered hungrily. "I'll have you all. That's done now, don't you see? You've done what you had to do; and she's going far away. That's best. You can do nothing more for her and she can do nothing more for you. She'll remain yours, as you say; you'll always know it. Now you can live your own life. You've cleared yourself of the fear for her which has always held you; you know that what you did has come out well. So live for yourself now Agnes—and for me."

"You?"

"Thank God all this happened or I'd never have known you; but I do. We can't go on as we did before, and I can never let you away from me." He drew her to him, inclosing her in his arms, lifting her so that her lips met his for this kiss which burned as never had lips on his. "You've got to marry me, you see."

It was an hour later, when all their future was arranged, that Agnes wondered: "What—I wonder—did Joyce think of me?" And the next day Howard told her as Amy Hildreth had told him.

"She called me into her room," said Amy, "and kissed me and said, 'Mother, everyone is too wonderful to me today. Even that Miss Winslow, whom I never saw before. Do you know she didn't seem to me today to be doing my hair because she'd been paid. It seemed to me she was doing it—though why should she?—because she wanted to do something for me on my wedding day!'"

PHILOSOPHIES OF ALL TIME PERPETUATED IN PLAQUES

University of Southern California Honors Sages in Library's Gallery of Tiles

TWENTY-TWO philosophers from the time of the Greeks to the present, with characteristic sayings, are represented in a gallery of tile portraits bordering the library of the new Philosophy Hall at the University of Southern California. Buddha and Confucius also are accorded places as influencing the philosophical ideas of a large portion of the human race.

Dr. Ralph Tyler Flewelling, director of the School of Philosophy, selected the subjects for the decorative plaques. The ancient and modern sages appear with quotations of inspirational nature from their preachments.

Thales, one of the "seven wise men," earliest of Greek philosophers, was said to have first predicted eclipses. He visited Egypt, and is reputed to have taught the priests there to measure the height of the pyramids by the length of their shadows. The inscription says: "It is difficult to know thyself, it is easy to advise others."

Heraclitus, the philosopher of change, taught that all things found their reality in perpetual flux. He is pictured teaching his disciples: "For the most part, the things divine escape us because of our unbelief."

Anaxagoras, perhaps the earliest of idealists if not of personalists, turned attention from the outer objective world to the inner one of the mind. He is represented with a scholar's scroll on which appears the Greek keyword of his philosophy "Nous," or mind, with the inscription: "Mind is infinite and self-ruled."

Democritus; the fact that he was a wide traveler is indicated by ships. He was the greatest of early atomists. The inscription reads: "The fatherland of the wise and the good is the whole world."

Protagoras, the first of the great humanists, so outraged the feelings of the oligarchs of his time by declaring the value of the person that his writings were burned in the Athenian market place. Protagoras was a democrat, relativist, and sophist. The inscription says: "Man is the measure of the universe."

Socrates was charged with corrupting the youth of Athens since he taught them ideas at variance with the past. He is represented making his unsuccessful defense before the Athenian Assembly which condemned him to drink the hemlock potion. The inscription: "No evil can befall a good man either here or hereafter," is taken from that defense.

Plato next appears, with the inscription: "The first and best victory is to conquer self." A trireme in the background is a reminder that Plato, was sold as a prisoner of war and compelled to work as a galley slave.

Aristotle, the pupil of Plato and teacher of Alexander the Great, is represented as walking with his students about the Lyceum, from which they became known as Peripatetics. The inscription reads: "Dear is Plato, dearer still is truth."

Epicurus, the great philosopher of nature, is represented in the garden of his cottage, where he kept open house for such as could endure on bread, water and fellowship. Inscription: "If you live according to nature, you will never be poor."

Augustine; out of the flames of burning Rome an angel rises to present him with the vision of the city of God. Inscription: "Thou has made us for Thyself and our hearts are restless till they rest in Thee."

Albertus Magnus, known as the universal doctor, was the teacher of Thomas Aquinas and so the real founder of the present Roman Catholic theology. Inscription: "The creation in time is a revelation of the eternal acting of God."

Descartes, the noted physicist, mathematician, and philosopher, visited the court of Louis XIII, invented analytical geometry, and discovered the laws of the refraction of light, and produced a system of philosophy. The famous dictum: "I think, therefore I am," appears in the Latin "Cogito ergo sum" as the key to his philosophy.

Spinoza was a Jewish student of the scriptures who ground lenses for a living and whose main philosophical work came into general recognition a century after his death. Cabalistic symbols indicate his interest in the Kabbala. He was the modern founder of absolute idealism, and his work led to the rise of German idealism. Inscription: "To perfect the understanding is nothing else but to understand God."

Leibnitz, the gifted mathematician, statesman, and philosopher is represented as librarian for the Duke of Hanover. He was the first great monadologist. Inscription: "It is God who is the final reason of things."

Newton, the discoverer of the law of gravitation, is shown experimenting with the breaking of light into complementary colors. Inscription: "I have been like a boy playing on the seashore whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me."

Locke studied at Christ Church, Oxford, whose tower appears in the background. Inscription: "Thinking is the action and not the essence of the soul."

Berkeley's interest in America is represented in ships on the border, and the inscription: "Westward the course of empire takes its way; Time's noblest offspring is the last."

Kant, great German philosopher and author of the "Critique of Reason," is represented with Koenigsberg in the background. Inscription: "Mind is supreme and the universe is but the reflected thought of God."

Hegel, who represents the high mark of Absolute Idealism and was a mighty factor in the thought of the nineteenth century, appears with the inscription: "A nation which has no metaphysics is like a temple possessing no holy of holies."

Buddha, surrounded by characteristic Indian decoration with the sacred lions, is quoted as saying, "To the man who does me wrong I will return the protection of my most ungrudging love."

Confucius appears as a Chinese sage and the inscription appears both in Chinese and English: "He who knowest the truth is not as good as he who loveth it; and he who loveth it is not as good as he who delighteth in it."

Emerson is the American representative of the line of philosophers. The inscription states: "Great men are they that see spiritual is stronger than any force."

In addition to the tile portraits with their accompanying inscriptions enhancing the library, the exterior of the building is distinguished by inscriptions, among them, chosen as the profoundest saying in all philosophy, is "He that loseth his life shall keep it until life eternal," and "Truth shall make you free." The fountain which centers the patio of the structure, surrounded by cloisters, bears the legend, "O stream of life run you slow or fast, all streams reach the sea at last."

Encircling the north wing of Philosophy Hall, which is directly opposite Exposition Park, are names of twenty-one philosophers including Plotinus, Ergina, Abelard, Bruno, Bacon and Rousseau.

The building, and especially the gallery of tile portraits of philosophers, was visited by some fifteen thousand Trojan alumni during the past week when the annual homecoming of former students of the University of Southern California was held at University Park.
